456 KING RICHARD II. [ACT v. Re-enter Servant with boots. Duck. Strike him, Aumerle. — Poor boy, thou art amaz'd. Hence, villain ! never more come in my sight. [To the Servant. York. Give me my boots, I say. Duck. Why, York, what wilt thou do? Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own ? Have we more sons? or are we KKC to have? Is not my teeming date drunk up with time ? And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age, And rob me of a happy mother's name? Is he not like thee? is he not thine own? York. Thou fond mad woman, Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy? A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament, And interchangeably set down their hands To kill the king at Oxford. Duck. He shall be none ; We '11 keep him here : then what is that to him? York. Away, fond woman ! were he twenty times my son I would appeach him. Duch. Hadst thou groan'd for him As I have done, thou wouldst be more pitiful. But now I know thy mind ; thou dost suspect That I have been disloyal to thy bed, And that he is a bastard, not thy son : Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind: He is as like thee as a man may be, Not like to me, nor any of my kin, And yet I love him. York. Make way, unruly woman ! {Exit. Duch. After, Aumerle! mount thee upon his horse ; Spur post, and get before him to the king, And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee. I '11 not be long behind ; though I be old, I doubt not but to ride as fast as York ; And never will I rise up from the ground Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away, be gone ! [Exeunt. SCENE III. — WINDSOR. A Room in the Castle. Enter BOLINGBROKE as King, PERCY, and other Lords. Baling. Can no man tell of my unthrifty son ? 'Tis full three months since I did see him last : — If any plague hang over us, 'tis he. I would to God, my lords, he might be found : Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there, For there, they say, he daily doth frequent, With unrestrained loose companions,— i Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes. And beat our watch, and rob our passengers ; While he, young, wanton, and effeminate boy, Takes on the point of honour to support So dissolute a crew. [prince, Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw the And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford. Baling. And what said the gallant? Percy. His answer was, — he would unto the stews, And from the common'st creature pluck a glove, And wear it as a favour ; and with that He would unhorse the lustiest challenger. Baling. As dissolute as desperate: yet through both I see some sparkles of a better hope, Which elder days may happily bring forth.— But who comes here? Enter AUMERLE hastily. Aum. Where is the king? Baling. What means Our cousin, that he stares and looks so wildly ? Aum. God save your grace ! I do beseech your majesty, To have some conference with your grace alone. Baling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone. {Exeunt PERCY and Lords. What is the matter with our cousin now? Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth, [Kneels. My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth, Unless a pardon ere I rise or speak. Baling. Intended or committed was this fault? If but the first, how heinous e'er it be, To win thy after-love I pardon thee. Atttn. Then give me leave that I may turn the key, That no man enter till my tale be done. Baling. Have thy desire. [AUMERLE locks the door. York. [Within.} My liege, beware; look to thyself; Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there. Baling. Villain, I '11 make thee safe. [Drawing. Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand ; Thou hast no cause to fear. York. [Within.~\ Open the door, secure, foolhardy king : Shall I, for love, speak treason to thy face? Open the door, or I will break it open. [BOLING. opens the door and locks it again. Enter YORK. boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak;

SCENE III.] KING RICHARD II. 457 Recover breath ; tell us how near is danger, That we may arm us to encounter it. York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know The treason that my haste forbids me show. Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise pass'd : I do repent me ; read not my name there ; My heart is not confederate with my hand. York. It was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down. — I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king ; Fear, and not love, begets his penitence : Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove A serpent that will sting thee to the heart. Boiing. O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy ! — 0 loyal father of a treacherous son ! Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain, From whence this stream through muddy passages Hath held his current and defil'd himself! Thy overflow of good converts to bad ; And thy abundant goodness shall excuse This deadly blot in thy digressing son. York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd ; And he shall spend mine honour with his shame, As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold. Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies, Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies : Thou kill'st me in his life ; giving him breath, The traitor lives, the true man 's put to death. Duck. [Within.] What ho, my liege! for God's sake, let me in. Boiing. What shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this eager cry? ['tis I. Duck. A woman, and thine aunt, great king ; Speak with me, pity me, open the door : A beggar begs that never begg'd before. Boiing. Our scene is alter'd from a serious thing, [King. — And now chang'd to The Beggar and the My dangerous cousin, let your mother in : 1 know she 's come to pray ibr your foul sin. [AUMERLE unlocks the door. York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray, More sins, for this forgiveness, prosper may. This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rests sound : This let alone will all the rest confound. Enter DUCHESS. Duck. O king, believe not this hard-hearted man! Love, loving not itself, none other can. York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here? Shall thy old dugs once more a traitor rear? Duch. Sweet York, be patient. — Hear me, gentle liege. [Kneels. Baling. Rise up, good aunt. Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech : For ever will I walk upon my knees, And never see day that the happy sees Till thou give joy ; until thou bid me joy, By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy. Aum. Unto my mother's prayers I bend my knee. [Kneels. York. Against them both, my true joints bended be. [Kneels. Ill mayst thou thrive, if thou grant any grace ! Duch. Pleads he in earnest? look upon his face ; [jest ; His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast : He prays but faintly, and would be denied ; We pray with heart and soul, and all beside : His weary joints would gladly rise, I know ; Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow: His prayers are full of false hypocrisy ; Ours of true zeal and deep integrity. Our prayers do out-pray his ; then let them have That mercy which true prayers ought to have. Boiing. Good aunt, stand up. Duch. Nay, do not say stand up; But pardon first, and afterwards stand up. An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach, Pardon should be the first word of thy speech. I never long'd to hear a word till now ; Say pardon, king; let pity teach thee how: The word is short, but not so short as sweet ; No word likepardon, for kings' mouths so meet. York. Speak it in French, king; say/ ardonnez-moi. Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy? Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord, That sett'st the word itself against the word ! — Speak pardon as 'tis current in our land; The chopping French we do not understand. Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there: Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear; That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce, Pity may move thee pardon to rehearse. Boiing. Good aunt, stand up. Duch. I do not sue to stand ; Pardon is all the suit I have in hand. [me. Boiing. I pardon him, as God shall pardon Duch. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee ! Yet am I sick for fear : speak it again ; Twice saying pardon doth not pardon twain, But makes one pardon strong.

458 KING RICHARD II. [ACT v. Boling. With all my heart I pardon him. Duck. A god on earth thon art. Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law, and the abbot, With all the rest of that consorted crew, Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels. Good uncle, help to order several powers To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are : They shall not live within this world, I swear, But I will have them, if I once know where. Uncle, farewell : — and, cousin mine, adieu : Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true. Duck. Come, my old son : — I pray God make thee new. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — Another Room in the Castle. Enter SIR PIERCE OF EXTON and a Servant. Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, what words he spake? — Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear? Was it not so? Serv. Those were his very words. Exton. Have I no friend? quoth he : he spake it twice, And urgM it twice together, — did he not? Serv. He did. [me, Exton. And, speaking it, he wistly look'd on As who should say, — I would thou wert the man That would divorce this terror from my heart,— Meaning the king at Pomfret. Come, let 's go : 3 am the king's friend, and will rid his foe. [Exeunt. SCENE V. —POMFRET. The Dungeon of the Castle. Enter KING RICHARD. K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare This prison where I live unto the world : And, for because the world is populous, And here is not a creature but myself, I cannot do it ; — yet I '11 hammer 't out. My brain I '11 prove the female to my soul, My soul the father : and these two beget A generation of still-breeding thoughts, And these same thoughts people this little world, In humours like the people of this world, For no thought is contented. The better sort , — As thoughts of things divine, — are intermix'd With scruples, and do set the word itself Against the word ; As thus, — Come, little ones; and then again, — ft is as hard to come as for a c&ntfl To thread the postern of a needle's eye. Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot Unlikely wonders : how these vain weak nails May tear a passage through the flinty ribs Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls ; And, for they Cannot, die in their own pride. Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves That they are not the first of fortune's slaves, Nor shall not be the last ; like silly beggars, Who, sitting in the stocks, refuge their shame, That many have, and others must sit there ; And in this thought they find a kind of ease, Bearing their own misfortune on the back Of such as have before endur'd the like. Thus play I, in one person, many people, And none contented : sometimes am I king ; Then treason makes me wish myself a beggar, And so I am : then crushing penury Persuades me I was better when a king ; Then am I king'd again : and by and by Think that I am unking' d by Bolingbroke, And straight am nothing : — but whate'er I am, Nor I, nor any man that but man is, With nothing shall be pleas'd till he be eas'd With being nothing. — Music do I hear? [Music. Ha, ha ! keep time : — how sour sweet music is When time is broke and no proportion kept ! So is it in the music of men's lives. And here have I the daintiness of ear To check time broke in a disorder'd string ; But, for the concord of my state and time, Had not an ear to hear my true time broke. I wasted time, and now doth time waste me ; For now hath time made me his numbering clock: [jar My thoughts are minutes ; and, with sighs, they Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward watch, Whereto my finger, like a dial's point, Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears. Now, sir, the sound that tells what hour it is, Are clamorous groans that strike upon my heart, Which is the bell : so sighs, and tears, and groans, Show minutes, times, and hours : — but my time Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud jqy, While I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock. This music mads me ; let it sound no more ; For though it have holp madmen to their wits, In me it seems it will make wise men mad. Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me ! For 'tis a sign of love ; and love to Richard Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world. Enter Groom. Hail, royal prince! K. Rick. Thanks, nobte peer ;

SCENE V.] KING RICHARD II. 459 The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear. What art thou? and how com'st thou hither, Where no man ever comes, but that sad dog That brings me food to make misfortune live? Groom. I was a poor groom of thy stable, king, When thou wert king ; who, travelling towards York, With much ado at length have gotten leave To look upon my sometimes royal master's face. O, how it yearn'd my heart, when I beheld, In London streets, that coronation-day, When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary, — That horse that thou so often hast bestrid, That horse that I so carefully have dress'd ! K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me, gentle friend, How went he under him? [ground. Groom. So proudly as if he disdain d the K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back ! That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand ; This hand hath made him proud with clapping him. Wouldhe notstumble? would he not fall down, — Since pride must have a fall, — and break the neck Of that proud man that did usurp his back? Forgiveness, horse ! why do I rail on thee, Since thou, created to be aw'd by man, Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse; And yet I bear a burden like an ass, Spur-gall'd and tir'd by jauncing Bolingbroke. Enter Keeper with a dish. Keep. Fellow, give place ; here is no longer stay. [To the Groom. K. Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away. Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. [Exit. Keep. My lord, wilt please you to fall to? K. Rich. Taste of it first as thou art wont to do. [ton, Keep. My lord, I dare not. Sir Pierce of ExWho lately came from the king, commands the contrary. K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster and thee ! Patience is stale, and I am weary of it. [Beats the Keeper. Keep. Help, help, help ! Enter EXTON and Servants, armed. K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault? [strument. Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's in[Snatching a weaponˆ and killing one. Go thou, and fill another room in hell. [He kills another ; then EXTON strikes him down. That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire That staggers thus my person. — Exton, thy fierce hand Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own land. Mount, mount, my soul ! thy seat is up on high ; Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die. [Dies. Exton. As full of valour as of royal blood : Both have I spilt ; — O, would the deed were For now the devil, that told me I did well, Says that this deed is chronicled in hell. This dead king to the living king I '11 bear : — Take hence the'rest, and give them burial here. [Exeunt. SCENE VI. — WINDSOR. A Room in the Castle. Flourish. Enter BOLINGBROKE as King, YORK, LORDS, and Attendants. Baling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear Is that the rebels have consum'd with fire Our town of Cicester in Glostershire ; But whether they be ta'en or slain we hear not. Enter NORTHUMBERLAND. Welcome, my lord : what is the news? North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness. The next news is, I have to London sent The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent: The manner of their taking may appear At large discoursed in this paper here. [Presenting a paper. Baling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains; And to thy worth will add right worthy gains. Enter FITZWATER. Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London The heads of Brocas and Sir Bennet Seely ; Two of the dangerous consorted traitors That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow. Baling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot ; Right noble is thy merit, well I wot. Enter PERCY, with the BISHOP OF CARLISLE. Percy. The grand conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,

KING RICHARD II. [ACT V. With clog of conscience and sour melancholy, Hath yielded up his body to the grave ; But here is Carlisle living, to abide Thy kingly doom and sentence of his pride. Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom : — Choose out some secret place, some reverend room, More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life ; So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife : For though mine enemy thou hast ever been, High sparks of honour in thee have I seen. Enter EXTON, with Attendants, bearing a coffin. Exton. Great king, within this coffin I pre« sent Thy buried fear : herein all breathless lies The mightiest of thy greatest enemieSi Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought. Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast wrought A deed of slander, with thy fatal hand, Upon my head and all this famous land. Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this deed. Boling. They love not poison that do poison need, Nor do I thee : though I did wish him dead, I hate the murderer, love him murdered. The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour, But neither my good word nor princely favour : With Cain go wander through the shade of night, And never show thy head by day nor light. — Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe, That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow: Come, moum with me for that I do lament. And put on sullen black incontinent : I '11 make a voyage to the Holy Land, To wash this blood off from my guilty hand : — March sadly after ; grace my mournings here, In weeping after this untimely bier. Enter KING HENRY, WESTMORELAND, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and others. K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care, Find we a time for frighted peace to pant, And breathe short-winded accents of new broils To be commenc'd in strands afar remote. No more the thirsty entrance of this soil Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood; No more shall trenching war channel her fields, Nor bruise her flowerets with the armed hoofs Of hostile paces : those opposed eyes Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven, All ot one nature, of one substance bred, Did lately meet in the intestine shock And furious close of civil butchery, Shall now, in mutual well-beseeming ranks, March all one way, and be no more oppos'd Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies : The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife, No more shall cut his master. Therefore, friends, As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,— Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross We are impressed and engag'd to fight, — Forthwith a power of English shall we levy ; Whose arms were moulded in their mothers' womb To chase these pagans in those holy fields Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd For our advantage on the bitter cross. But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old, And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go : Therefore we meet not now. — Then let me hear Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland, What yesternight our council did decree In forwarding this dear expedience. West. My liege, this haste was hot in question, And many limits of the charge set down But yesternight : when, all athwart, there came A post from Wales loaden with heavy news ; Whose worst was, — that the noble Mortimer Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower, Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken, A thousand of his people butchered ; Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse, Such beastly, shameless transformation,

462 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. FACT i. By those Welshwomen done, as may not be Without much shame re-told or spoken of. K. Hen. It seems, then, that the tidings of this broil Brake off our business for the Holy Land. West. This, match'd with other, did, my gracious Lord ; For more uneven and unwelcome news Came from the north, and thus it did import : On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there, Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald, That ever valiant and approved Scot, At Holmedon met, Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour ; As by discharge of their artillery, And shape of likelihood, the news was told ; For he that brought them, in the very heat And pride of their contention did take horse, Uncertain of the issue any way. K. Hen. Here is a dear and true-industrious friend, Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse, Stain'd with the variation of each soil Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours; And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news. The Earl of Douglas is discomfited : Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights, Balk'd in their own blood, did Sir Walter see On Holmedon's plains : of prisoners. Hotspur took Mordake, Earl of Fife and eldest son To beaten Douglas ; and the Earls of Athol, Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith. And is not this an honourable spoil? A gallant prize? ha, cousin, is it not? West. In faith, It is a conquest for a prince to boast of. JC. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin, In envy that my Lord Northumberland Should be the father to so blest a son, — A son who is the theme of honour's tongue; Amongst a grove, the very straightest plant ; Who is sweet fortune's minion and her pride : Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him, See riot and dishonour stain the brow Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd In cradle- clothes our children where they lay, And calPd mine Percy, his Plantagenet ! Then would I have his Harry, and he mine : But let him from my thoughts. — What think you, coz, Of this young Percy's pride? The prisoners, Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd, To his own use he keeps ; and sends me word, I shall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife. West. Th's is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester, Malevolent to you in all aspects; Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up The crest of youth against your dignity. K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this; And for this cause awhile we must neglect Our holy purpose to Jerusalem. Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we Will hold at Windsor,— so inform the lords: But come yourself with speed to us again ; For more is to be said and to be done Than out of anger can be uttered. West. I will, my liege. [Exeunt. SCENE II.— The same. Another Room in the Palace. Enter PRINCE HENRY and FALSTAFF. FaL Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad? P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after neon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly which thou wouldst truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-coloured taffeta,—I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day. Fal. Indeed, you come near me now, Hal ; for we that take purses go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phoebus, — he, that •wandering knight so fair. And, I pr'ythee, sweet wag, when thou art king, — as, God save thy grace, (majesty, I should say ; for grace thou wilt have none,) — P. IJen. What, none? Fal. No, by my troth ; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter. P. Hen. Well, how then? come, roundly, roundly. Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us that are squires of the night's body be called thieves of the day's beauty : let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon ; and let men say we be men of good government, being governed, as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal. P. Hen. Thou sayest well, and it holds well too ; for the fortune of us that are the moon's SCENE II.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 463 men doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed, as the sea is, by the moon. As, for proof, now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning ; got with swearing lay by, and spent with crying bring in; now in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder, and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows. Fal. By the Lord, thou sayest true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench? P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance? Fal. How now, how now, mad wag ! what, in thy quips and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin? P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern? Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning many a time and oft. P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part? Fal. No; Til give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there. P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and where it would not, I have used my credit. Fal. Yea, and so used it that, were it not here apparent that thou art heir-apparent, — but, I p'rythee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king? and resolution thus fobbed as it is with the rusty curb of old father antic the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief. P. Hen. No; thou shall. Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge. P. Hen. Thou judgest false already : I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman. Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you% P. Hen. For obtaining of suits? Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Sblood, I am as melancholy as a gib-cat or a lugged bear. P. Hen. Or an old lion, or a love?s lute. Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe. P. Hen. What sayest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch? Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes, and art, indeed, the most comparative, rascallest,— sweet young prince, — but, Hal, I pr'ythee, trouble me no more with vanity. I would to God thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought. An old lord of the council rated me the other day in the street about you, sir, — but I marked him not ; and yet he talked very wisely, —

but I regarded him not ; and yet he talked wisely, and in the street too. P. Hen. Thou didst well ; for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it. Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal, — God forgive thee for it ! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing ; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over; by the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain : I 'M be damned for never a king's son in Christendom. P. Hen. Where shall we take a purse tomorrow, Jack? Fal. Where thou wilt, lad ; I '11 make one ; an I do not, call me villain, and baffle me. P. Hen. I see a good amendment of life in thee, — from praying to purse-taking. Enter POINS at a distance. Fal Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation.— Poins ! — Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match. — O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? Tins is the most omnipotent villain that ever cried stand to a true man. P. Hen. Good-morrow, Ned. Poins. Good-morrow, sweet Hal. — What says Monsieur Remorse ? What says Sir John Sackand-sugar ? Jack , how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on GoodFriday last for a cup of Madeira and a cold capon's leˆ? P. Hen. Sir John stands to his word, — the devil shall have his bargain ; for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs, — he will give the devil his due. Poins. Then art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil. P. Hen. Else he had been damned for cozening the devil. Potns. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill ! there are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses : I have visards for you all ; you have horses for yourselves : Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester: I have bespoke supper to-mcrrow night in Eastcheap : we may do it as secure as

FaL Hear ye, Yedward ; if I tarry at home and go not, I '11 hang you for going. Poins. You will, chops? FaL Hal, wilt thou make one? P. Hen. Who, I rob? I a thief? not I, by my faith. FaL There 's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou earnest not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings. P. Hen. Well, then, cnce in my days I '11 be a madcap. FaL Why, that 's well said. P. Hen, Well, come what will, I '11 tarry at home. FaL By the Lord, I'll be a traitor, then, when thou art king. P. Hen. I care not. Poins. Sir John, I pr'ythee, leave the prince and me alone : I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure that he shall go. FaL Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may, for recreation sake, prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: you shall find me in Eastcheap. P. Hen. Farewell, thou latter spring ! Farewell, All-hallown summer ! {Exit I

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 465 And therefore lost that title of respect Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud. Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves The scourge of greatness to be used on it ; And that same greatness, too which our own hands Have holp to make so portly. North. My lord,— K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone ; for I see danger And disobedience in thine eye : O, sir, Your presence is too bold and peremptory And majesty might never yet endure The moody frontier of a servant brow. You have good leave to leave us : when we need Your use and counsel we shall send for you. [Exit WORCESTER. You were about to speak. [To NORTHUMBERLAND. North. Yea, my good lord. Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded, Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took, Were, as he says, not with such strength denied As is delivered to your majesty : Either envy, therefore, or misprision Is guilty of this fault, and not my son. Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners. But I remember when the fight was done, When I was dry with rage and extreme toil, Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword, Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd, Fresh as a bridegroom ; and his chin new reap'd Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home ; He was perfum'd like a milliner; And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held A pouncet-box, which ever and anon He gave his nose, and took 't away again ; — Who therewith angry, when it next came there, Took it in snuff: — and still he smil'd and talk'd; And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by, He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly, To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse Betwixt the wind and his nobility. With many holiday and lady terms He question'd me ; among the rest, demanded My prisoners in your majesty's behalf. I, then all smarting with my wounds being cold, To be so pester'd with a popinjay, Out of my grief and my impatience, Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what, — He should, or he should not ; — for he made me mad To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet, And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman Of guns, and drums, and wounds, — God save the mark ! — And telling me the sovereign's! thing on earth Was parmaceti for an inward bniise ; And that it was great pity, so it was, This villanous saltpetre should be digg'd Out of the bowels of the harmless earth, Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd So cowardly ; and but for these vile guns He would himself have been a soldier. This bald unjoin ted chat of his, my lord, I answer'd indirectly, as I said ; And I beseech you, let not his report Come current for an accusation Betwixt my love and your high majesty. Blunt. The circumstance consider'd, good my lord, Whatever Harry Percy then had said To such a person, and in such a place, At such a time, with all the rest re-told, May reasonably die, and never rise To do him wrong, or any way impeach What then he said, so he unsay it now. K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners, But with proviso and exception, — That we at our own charge shall ransom straight His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer; Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the great magician, damn'd Glendower, Whose daughter, as we hear, that Earl of March Hath lately married. Shall our coffers, then, Be emptied to redeem a traitor home? Shall we buy treason? and indent with fears, When they have lost and forfeited themselves? No, on the barren mountains let him starve; For I shall never hold that man my friend Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost To ransom home revolted Mortimer. Hot. Revolted Mortimer ! He never did fall off, my sovereign liege, But by the chance of war : — to prove that true, Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds, [took, Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank, In single opposition, hand to hand, He did confound tne best part of an hour In changing hardiment with great Glendower : Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink, Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood ; Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks, Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds, And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank Blood-stained with these valiant combatants. Never did base and rotten policy

466 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT i. Colour her working with such deadly wounds ; Nor could the noble Mortimer Receive so many, and all willingly : Then let him not be slander'd with revolt. K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie him ; He never did encounter with Glendower : I tell thee, He durst as well have met the devil alone As Owen Glendower for an en:my. Art thou not asham'd? But, drrah, henceforth Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer : Send me your prisoners with the speediest means, Or you shall hear in such a kind from me As will displease you. — My Lord Northumberland, We license your departure with your son. — Send us your prisoners, or you '11 hear of it _Exeunt K. HENRY, BLUNT, and Train. Hot. And if the devil come and roar for them, I will not send them : — I will after straight, And tell him so ; for I will ease my heart, Albeit I make a hazard of my head. North. What, drunk with choler? stay, and pause awhile : Here comes your uncle. Re-enter WORCESTER. Hot. Speak of Mortimer ! Zounds, I will speak of him ; and let my soul Want mercy, if I do not join with him : Yea, on his part I '11 empty all these veins, And shed my dear blood drop by drop i' the dust, But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer As high i' the air as this unthankful king, As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke. North. Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad. [To WORCESTER. Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone? Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners ; And when I urg'd the ransom once again Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd pale, And on my face he turn'd an eye of death, Trembling even at the name of Mortimer. Wor. I cannot blame him : was he not proclaim'd By Richard that dead is the next of blood? North. He was: I heard the proclamation: And then it was when the unhappy king — Whose wrongs in us God pardon !-—did set forth Upon his Irish expedition ; From whence he intercepted did return To be depos'd, and shortly murdered. Wor. And for whose death we in the world's wide mouth Live scandaliz'd and foully spoken of. [then Hot. But, soft, I pray you ; did King Richard Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer Heir to the crown? North. He did ; myself did hear it. Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king, That wish'd him on the barren mountains starve. But shall it be that you tnat set the crown Upon the head of this forgetful man, And for his sake wear the detested blot Of murderous subornation, — shall it be That you a world of curses undergo, Being the agents, or base second means, The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather? — O, pardon me, that I descend so low To show the line and the predicament Wherein you range under this subtle king; — Shall it, for shame, be spoken in these days, Or fill up chronicles in time to come, That men of your nobility and power Did 'gage them both in an unjust behalf, — As both of you, God pardon it ! have done, — To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose, Ana plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke? And shall it, in more shame, be further spoken That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off By him for whom these shames ye underwent? No ; yet time serves, wherein you may redeem Your banish'd honours, and restore yourselves Into the good thoughts of the world again, — Revenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt Of this proud king, who studies day and night To answer all the debt he owes to you Even with the bloody payment of your deaths: Therefore, I say, — Wor. Peace, cousin ; say no more : And now I will unclasp a secret book, And to your quick-conceiving discontents I '11 read you matter deep and dangerous ; As full of peril and adventurous spirit As to o'er-walk a current roaring loud On the unsteadfast footing of a spear. Hot. If he fall in, good-night ! — or sink or swim : — Send danger from the east unto the west, So honour cross it from the north to south, And let them grapple. — O, the blood more stirs To rouse a lion than to start a hare ! North. Imagination of some great exploit Drives him beyond the bounds of patience. Hot. By heaven, methinks it were an easy leap To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon; Or dive into the bottom of the deep.

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 467 Where fathom- line could never touch the ground, And pluck up drowned honour by the locks ; So he that doth redeem her thence might wear Without corrival all her dignities : But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship ! Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here, But not the form of what he should attend. — Good cousin, give me audience for awhile. Hot. I cry you mercy. Wor. Those same noble Scots That are your prisoners, — Hot. I '11 keep them all ; By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them ; No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not : I '11 keep them, by this hand. Wor. You start away, And lend no ear unto my purposes. — Those prisoners you shall keep. Hot. Nay, I will ; that 's flat :— He said he would not ransom Mortimer ; Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer ; But I will find him when he lies asleep, And in his ear I '11 holla — Mortimer! Nay, I '11 have a starling shall be taught to speak Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him, To keep his anger still in motion. WOT. Hear you, cousin ; a word. Hot. All studies here I solemnly deiy, Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke : And that same sword-and -buckler Prince of Wales,— But that I think his father loves him not, And would be glad he met with some mischance, I 'd have him poison'd with a pot of ale. Wor. Farewell, kinsman : I will talk to you When you are better temper'd to attend. North. Why, what a wasp-tongue and impatient fool Art thou to break into this woman's mood, Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own ! Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods, Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke. In Richard's time, — what do ye call the place? — A plague upon \ — it is in Glostershire ; — 'Twas where the madcap duke his uncle kept, — His uncle York : — where I first bow'd my knee Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke, When you and he came back from Ravenspurg. North. At Berkley Castle. Hot. You say true : — Why, what a candy deal of courtesy This fawning greyhound then did proffer me ! Look, ivhen his infant fortune came to age, And, gentle Harry Percy > and, kind cousinˆ — O, the devil take such cozeners ! — God forgive me!— Good uncle, tell your tale ; for I have done. Wor. Nay, if you have not, to 't again ; We '11 stay your leisure. Hot. I have done, i' faith. Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners. Deliver them up without their ransom straight, And make the Douglas' son your only mean For powers in Scotland ; which, for divers reasons Which I shall send you written, be assur'd, Will easily be granted. — You, my lord, {To NORTHUMBERLAND. Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd, Shall secretly into the bosom creep Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd, The archbishop. Hot. Of York, is 't not? Wor. True ; who bears hard His brother's death at Bristol, the Lord Scroop. I speak not this in estimation, As what I think might be, but what I know Is ruminated, plotted, and set down, And only stays but to behold the face Of that occasion that shall bring it on. Hot. I smell it : upon my life, it will do well. North. Before the game's a-foot, thou still lett'st slip. [plot : — Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble And then the power of Scotland and of York.— To join with Mortimer, ha? Wor. And so they shall. Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd. Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed, To save our heads by raising of a head ; For, bear ourselves as even as we can, The king will always thinl- him in our debt, And think we think ourselves unsatisfied, Till he hath found a time to pay us home : And see already how he doth begin To make us strangers to his looks of love. Hot. He does, he does : we '11 be revengM on him. Wor. Cousin, farewell : — no further go in this Than I by letters shall direct your course. When time is ripe, — which will be suddenly, — I '11 steal to Glendower and Lord Mortimer; Where you and Douglas, and our powers at once, — As I will fashion it, — shall happily meet, To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms, Which now we hold at much uncertainty. North. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I trust. Hot. Uncle, adieu :— O, let the hours be short, 468 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT ii. Till fields and blows and groans applaud our sport. [Exeunt. ACT II. SCENE I. — ROCHESTER. An Inn Yard. Enter a Carrier with a lantern in his hand. I Car. Heigh-ho ! an 't be not four by the day, I '11 be hanged : Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. — What, ostler ! Ost. [Within.'} Anon, anon. 1 Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point ; the poor jade is wrong in the withers out of all cess. Enter another Carrier. 2 Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots : this house is turned upside down since Robin ostler died. 1 Car. Poor fellow ! never joyed since the price of oats rose ; it was the death of him. 2 Car. I think this be the most villanous house in all London road for fleas : I am stung like a tench. 1 Car. Like a tench ! by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock. 2 Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jorden, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach. 1 Car. What, ostler! come away, and be hanged ; come away. 2 Car. I have a gammon of bacon and two races of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross. i Car. 'Odsbody ! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved. —What, ostler ! — A plague on thee ! hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain. — Come, and be hanged :— hast no faith in thee? Enter GADSHILL. Good -morrow, carriers. What 's Gads. o'clock? i Car. I think it be two o'clock. Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable. 1 Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye ; I know a trick worth two of that, i' faith. Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thine. 2 Car. Ay, when? canst tell?— Lend me thy lantern, quoth a? — marry, I'll see thee hanged first. Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London? ;u jforj 2 Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee. — Come, neighbour Mugs, we '11 call up the gentlemen : they will along with company, for they have great charge. [Exeunt Carriers. Gads. What, ho ! chamberlain ! Cham. [Within.'} At hand, quoth pick-purse. Gads. That 's even as fair as — at hand, quoth the chamberlain ; for thou variest no more from picking of purses than giving direction doth from labouring ;

thou layest the plot how. Enter Chamberlain. Cham. Good-morrow, Master Gadshill. It holds current that I told you yesternight: — there's a franklin in the wild of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold : I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at supper ; a kind of auditor ; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter : they will away presently. Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with Saint Nicholas' clerks, I '11 give thee this neck. Cham. No, I '11 none of it : I pr'ythee, keep that for the hangman ; for I know thou worshippest Saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may. Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hang, man ? If I hang, I '11 make a fat pair of gallows ; for if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me ; and thou knowest he's no starveling. Tut! there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the which, for sport-sake, are content to do the profession some grace ; that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit-sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot landrakers, no long-staff sixpenny strikers, none of these mad mustachio purple-hued malt-worms ; but with nobility and tranquillity ; burgomasters and great oneyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: and yet I lie ; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth ; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey on her ; for they ride up and clown on her, and make her their boots. Cham. What, the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way? Gads. She will, she will ; justice hath liquored her. We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, — we walk invisible. Cham. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more beholding to the night than to fern-seed for your walking invisible.

SCENE II.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 469 Gads. Give me thy hand : thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man. Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief. Gads. Go to ; homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. {Exeunt. SCENE II. — The Road by Gadshill. Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS ; BARDOLPH and PETO at some, distance. Poins. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaff s horse, and he frets like a gummed velvet. P. Hen. Stand close. {They retire. Enter FALSTAFF. Fal. Poins ! Poins, and be hanged ! Poins ! P. Hen. [Coming forward.] Peace, ye fatkidneyed rascal ! what a brawling dost thou keep ! Fal. Where's Poins, Hal? P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill : I '11 go seek him. [Pretends to seek POINS. Fal. I am accursed to rob in that thief s company : the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire further a-foot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I 'scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty year, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I '11 be hanged; it could not be else ; I have drunk medicines. — Poins ! — Hal ! — a plague upon you both ! — Bardolph !— Peto !— I '11 starve, ere I '11 rob a foot further. An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles a-foot with me; and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough : a plague upon 't, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistle.'] Whew! — a plague upon you all ! Give me my horse, you rogues ; give me my horse, and be hanged. P. Hen. [Coming forward.] Peace, ye fatguts! lie down; lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers. Fa!. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood, I '11 not bear mine own flesh so far a-foot again for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus? P. Hen. Thou liest; thou art not colted, thou art uncolted. Fal. I pr'ythee, good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son. [ostler? P.

Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your Fal. Go, hang thyself in thine own heirapparent garters ! If I be ta'en, I '11 peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison : — when a jest is so forward, and afoot too ! — I hate it. Enter GADSHILL. Gads. Stand. Fal. So I do, against my will. Poins. O, 'tis our setter : I know his voice. [Coming jorward with BARD, and PETO. Bard. W.iat news? Gads. Case ye, case ye; on with your visards : there 's money of the king's coming down the hill; 'tis going to the king's exchequer. Fal. You lie, you rogue; 'tis going to the king's lavern. Gads. There 's enough to make us all. Fal. To be hanged. P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane ; Ned Poins and I will walk lower : if they 'scape from your encounter, then they light on us. Peto. How many be there of them t Gads. Some eight or ten. Fal. Zounds, will they not rob us? P. Hen. What, a coward, Sir John Paunch? Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal. P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the proof. Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge : when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast. Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hanged. P. Hen. [Aside to POINS.} Ned, where are our disguises? Poins. Here, hard by : stand close. [Exeunt. P. HENRY and POINS. Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I : every man to his business. Enter Travellers. I Trav. Come, neighbour: the boy shall lead our horses down the hill ; we '11 walk a-foot awhile, and ease our legs. Fal.t Gads., &f. Stand! Trav. Jesu bless us 1

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 471 And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow, Like bubbles in a late disturbed stream ; And in thy face strange motions have appear'd, Such as we see when men restrain their breath On some great sudden hest. O, what portents are these ? Some heavy business hath my lord in hand, And I must know it, else he loves me not. Hot. What, ho ! Enter a Servant. Is Gilliams with the packet gone? Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago. Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff? [now. Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not? Serv. It is, my lord. Hot. That roan shall be my throne. Well, I will back him straight : O esperancel — Bid Butler lead him forth into the park. [Exit Servant. Lady. But hear you, my lord. Hot. What say'st thou, my lady? Lady. What is it carries you away? Hot. Why, my horse, my love, — my horse. Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape ! A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen As you are toss'd with. In faith, I 'U know your business, Harry, — that I will. I fear my brother Mortimer doth stir About his title, and hath sent for you To line his enterprise : but if you go, — Hot. So far a-foot, I shall be weary, love. Lady. Come, come, you paraquito, answer me Directly to this question that I ask : In faith, I '!! break thy little finger, Harry, An if thou wilt not tell me all things true. Hot. Away, Away, you trifler! — Love? — I love thee not, I care not for thee, Kate: this is no world To play with mammets and to tilt with lips : We must have bloody noses and crack' d crowns, And pass them current too. — Gods me, my horse!— [with me? What say'st thou, Kate? what wouldst thou have Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed? Well, do not, then ; for since you love me not, I will not love myself. Do you not love me? Nay, tell me if you speak in jest or no. Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride? And when I am o' horseback, I will swear I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate ; I must not have you henceforth question me Whither I go, nor reason whereabout: Whither I must, I must ; and, to conclude, This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate. I know you wise ; but yet no further wise Than Harry Percy's wife : constant you are ; But yet a woman : and for secrecy, No lady closer ; for I well believe Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know, — And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate. Lady. How! so far? [Kate: Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you, Whither I go, thither shall you go too ; To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you. — Will this content you, Kate? Lady. It must, of force. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — EASTCHEAP. A Room in the Boards Head Tavern. Enter PRINCE HENRY. P. Hen. Ned, pr'ythee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little. Enter POINS. Poms. Where hast been, Hal? P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads amongst three or fourscore hogsheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers ; and can call them all by their Christian names, as — Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy ; and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, — by the Lord, so they call me, — and when I am king of England I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying scarlet ; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry hem I and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned, — to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an under-skinker ; one that never spake other English in his life than, Eight shillings and sixpence, and You are welcome; with this shrill addition, Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon, or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I pr'ythee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar ; and do thou never leave calling

How long hast thou to serve, Francis? Fran. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to,— Poins. [Within.] Francis! Fran. Anon, anon, sir. P. Hen. Five years ! by 'r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture, and show it a fair pair of heels and run from it? Fran. O Lord, sir, I '11 be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find in my heart, — Poins. [Within.'} Francis! Fran. Anon, anon, sir. P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis? Fran. Let me see, — about Michaelmas next I shall be,Poins. {Within.} Francis! Fran. Anon, sir. — Pray you, stay a little, my lord. P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, Francis : for the sugar thou gavest me, — 'twas a pennyworth, was't not? Fran. O Lord, sir, I would it had been two ! P. Hen. I will give thee for it a thousand pound : ask me when thou wilt, and thou shall have it. Poins. [Within.] Francis! Fran. Anon, anon. P. Hen. Anon, Francis? No, Francis; but to-morrow, Francis ; or, Francis, on Thursday ; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis, — Fran. My lord? P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this leathern -jerkin, crystal-button, nott-pated, agate-ring, pukestocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,— Fran. O Lord, sir, who do you mean? P. Hen. Why, then, your brown bastard is your only drink ; for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully: in Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much. Fran. What, sir? Poins. [Within.] Francis! P. Hen. Away, you rogue ! dost thou not hear them call? [Here they both call him ; FRANCIS stands amazed, not knowing which way to go. Enter Vintner. Vint. What, standest thou still, and hearest such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit FRAN.] My lord, old Sir John, with half-a-dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in? P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins! -+'j> Re-enter POINS. Poins. Anon, anon, sir. P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door: shall we be merry? Poms. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what's the issue? P. Hen. I am now of all humours that have showed themselves humours since the old days of goodman Adam to the pupil-age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight. — What's o'clock, Francis? Fran. [Within.] Anon, anon, sir. P. Hen. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman ! His industry is upstairs and downstairs ; his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the north ; he that kills me some six or seven dozen Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, Fie upon this quiet life ! I want work. O my sweet Harry, says she, how many hast thou killed to-day? Give my roan horse a drench, says he ; and answers, Some fourteen, an hour after, — a trifle, a trifle. I pr'ythee, call in Falstaff: I '11 play Percy, and that damned brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Rivo says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow. Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO ; followed by FRANCIS with wine. Poins. Welcome, Jack: where hast thou been? Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too ! marry, and amen ! — Give me a cup of sack, boy. — Ere I lead this life long, I '11 sew nether-stocks, and mend them and foot them too. A plague of all cowards ! — Give me a cup of sack, rogue. — Is there no virtue extant? [He drinks. P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter? pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted

SCENE l\T. j FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 473 at the sweet tale of the sun ! if thou didst, then behold that compound. Fal. You rogue, here 's lime in this sack too : there is nothing but roguery to be found hi villanous man : yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it, — a villanous coward. — Go thy ways, old Jack ; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unhanged in England ; and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while ! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver ; I could sing psalms or anything. A plague of all cowards, I say still. P. Hen. How now, woolsack ! what mutter you? Fal. A king's son ! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I '11 never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales ! P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man, what 's the matter ? Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that: — and Poins there? Poms. Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, I '11 stab thee. Fal. I call thee coward ! I '11 see thee damned ere I call thee coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, — you care not who sees your back : call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing ! give me them that will face me. — Give me a cup of sack : — I am a rogue if I drunk to-day. P. Hen. O villain ! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunkest last. Fal. All's one for that. A plague of all cowards, still say I. [ffe drinks. P. Hen. What 's the matter? Fal. What's the matter! there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning. P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it? Fal. Where is it ! taken from us it is : a hundred upon poor four of us. P. Hon. What, a hundred, man? Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at halfsword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose ; my buckler cut through and through ; my sword hacked like a hand-saw, — tcce signum! I never dealt better since I was a man : all would not do. A plague of all cowards ! — Let them speak : if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of dark' ness. P. Hen. Speak, sirs; how was it? Gads. We four set upon some dozen,— Fal. Sixteen at least, my lord. Gads. And bound them. Peto. No, no, they were not bound. Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them ; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew. Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us, — Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other. P. Hen. What, fought ye with them all? Fal. All ! I know not what ye call all ; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature. P. Hen. Pray God, you have not murdered some of them. Fat. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them ; two I am sure I have paid, — two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, — if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward ; — here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me, — P. Hen. What, four? thou saidst but two even now. Fal. Four, Hal ; I told thee four. Poins. Ay, ay, he said four. Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado but took all their seven points in my target, thus. P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four even now in buckram. Poins. Ay, four in buckram suits. [else. Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain P. Hen. Pr'ythee, let him alone; we shall have more anon. Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal? P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack. Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram that I told thee of, — P. Hen. So, two more already. Fal. Their points being broken, — • Poins. Down fell their hose. Fal. Began to give me ground : but I followed me close, came in foot and hand ; and with a thought seven of the eleven I paid. P. Hen. O monstrous ! eleven buckram men grown out of two ! Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green came at my back and let drive at me ; — for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand.

474 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT ii. P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begets them, — gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou nottpated fool, thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-keech, — Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth the truth? P. Hen. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what sayest thou to this? Poms. Come, your reason, Jack, — your reason. Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I. P. Hen. I '11 be no longer guilty of this sin ; this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh, — FaL Away, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's tongue, bull's pizzle, you stock-fish, — O for breath to utter what is like thee !— you tailor's yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing-tuck , — P. Hen. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again : and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this. Poms. Mark, Jack. P. Hen. We two saw you four set on four ; you bound them, and were masters of their wealth. — Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. — Then did we two set on you four; and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it ; yea, and can show it you here in the house : — and, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight ! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame? Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack; what trick hast thou now? FaL By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters : was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules : but beware instinct; the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter ; I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee during my life ; I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money. — Hostess, clap to the doors \to Hostess within] : — watch to-night, pray tomorrow.— Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you ! What, shall we be merry? Shall we have a play extempore? P. Hen. Content; — and the argument shall be thy running away. Fal. Ah, no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me ! Enter Hostess. Host. O Jesu, my lord the prince, — />. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess! — What sayest thou to me? Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you : he says he comes from your father. P. Hen. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother. Fal. What manner of man is he? Host. An old man. Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? — Shall I give him his answer? P. Hen. Pr'ythee, do, Jack. Fal. Faith, and I '11 send him packing. [Exit, P. Hen. Now, sirs: — by'r lady, you fought fair ; — so did you, Peto ; — so did you, Bardolph : you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince ; no, — fie ! Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run. P. Hen. Tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hacked? Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger; and said he would swear truth out of England, but he would make you believe it was done in fight ; and persuaded us to do the like. Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with speargrass to make them bleed; and then to beslubber our garments with it, and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before, — I blushed to hear his monstrous devices. P. Hen. O villain, thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou rannest away : what instinct hadst thou for it? Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations? P. Hen. I do. Bard. What think you they portend? P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses. Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

SCENE IV.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 475 P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter. — Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. Re-enter FALSTAFF. How now, my sweet creature of bombast ! How long is 't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee? Fal. My own knee ! when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist ; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring: a plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. — There's villanous news abroad: here was Sir John Bracy from your father ; you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cress of a Welsh hook, — what, a plague, call you him? — Poins. O, Glendower. Fal. Owen, Owen, — the same ; and his sonin-law, Mortimer ; and old Northumberland ; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that mns o' horseback up a hill perpendicular, — P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying ? Fed. You have hit it. P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow. Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him ; he will not run ; — P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou, then, to praise him so for running. Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo; but a-foot he will not budge a foot. P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct. Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. — Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps more: Worcester is stolen away tonight; thy father's beard is turned white with the news : you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel. P. Hen. Why, then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds. Fed. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true ; it is like we shall have good trading that way. — But tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afeard? thou being heir-apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it? P. Hen. Not a whit, i' faith; I lack some of thy instinct. Fed. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid tomorrow when thou comest to thy father : if thou love me, practise an answer. P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father! and examine me upon the particulars of my life. Fal. Shall I? content :—

this chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown. P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown ! Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. — Give me a cup of sack to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept ; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyses' vein. P. Hen. Well, here is my leg. Fal. And here is my speech. — Stand aside, nobility. Host. O Jesu, this is excellent sport, i' faith ! Fal. Weep not, sweet queen; for trickling tears are vain. Host. O, the father, how he holds his countenance ! [ful queen ; Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristFor tears do stop the floodgates of her eyes. Host. O Jesu, he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see ! Fal. Peace, good pint-pot; peace, good tickle-brain. — Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied : for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on, the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion ; but chiefly a villanous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If, then, thou be son to me, here lies the point; — why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher, and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile ; so doth the company thou keepest : for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears ; not in pleasure, but in passion ; not in words only, but in woes also: — and yet there tea virtuous man whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name. P. Hen. What manner of man, an it like your majesty? Fal* A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent ; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage ; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by 'r lady, inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lewdly given, he deceiveth me ; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If, then, the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month? P. Hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I '11 play my father. Fal. Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbitsucker or a poulter's hare. P. Hen. Well, here I am set. Fal. And here I stand :— judge, my masters. P. Hen. Now, Harry, whence come you? Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap. P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous. Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false : — nay, I '11 tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith. P. Hen. Swearest thou, ungracious boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace : there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man, — a tun cf man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that boltinghutch of beastliness, that swollen parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stiffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox, with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that gray iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villany? wherein villanous, but in all things? wherein w rthy, but in nothing? Fal. I would your grace would take me with you: whom means your grace? P. Hen. That villanous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan. Fal. My lord, the man I know. P. Hen. I know thou dost. Fal. But to say I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, — the more the pity, — his white hairs do witness it ; but that he is, — saving your reverence, — a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked ! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins : but, for sweet Jack Falstaff, k'ind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff. banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company : — banish plump Jack, and banish all the world. P. Hen. I do, I will. [A knocking heard. {Exeunt Host., FRAN., awr/ BARD. Re-enter BARDOLPH, running. Bard. O, my lord, my lord ! the sheriff with a most monstrous watch is at the door. Fal. Out, you rogue !— play out the play : I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff. Re-enter Hostess, hastily. Host. O Jesu, my lord, my lord, — P. Hen. Heigh, heigh ! the devil rides upon a fiddle-stick : what 's the matter? Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door : they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in? Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so. P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct. Fal. I deny your major: if you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up ! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another. P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras: — the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face and good conscience. Fal. Both which I have had ; but their date is out, and therefore I '11 hide me. [Exeunt all but the PRINCE and POINS. P. Hen. Call in the sheriff. Enter Sheriff and Carrier. Now, master sheriff, what is your will with me? Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry Hath followed certain men unto this house. P. Hen. What men? [lord,— Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious A gross fat man. Car. As fat as butter. P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here; For I myself at this time have employ'd him. And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time,

There are two gentlemen Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks. P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men He shall be answerable ; and so, farewell. Sher. Good-night, my noble lord. P. Hen. I think it is good-morrow, is it not? Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock. [Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier. P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth. Poins. Falstaff ! — fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse. P. Hen. Hark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [PoiNS searches.] What hast thou found? Poins. O monstrous! but one halfpennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack !— What there is else, keep close ; we '11 read it at more advantage: there let him sleep till day. I' 11 to the court in the morning. We must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. I '11 procure this fat rogue a charge of foot ; and I know his death will be a march of twelvescore. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so, good-morrow, Poins. Poins. Good-morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt. ACT III. SCENE I. — BANGOR. A Room in the ARCHDEACON'S House. Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLEN DOWER. Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure, And our induction full of prosperous hope. Hot. Lord Mortimer, — and cousin Glendower, — Will you sit down? — And uncle Worcester : — a plague upon it ! I have forgot the map. Glend. No, here it is. Sit, cousin Percy ; sit, good cousin Hotspur, — For by that name as oft as Lancaster Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale, and with A rising sigh he wishes you in heaven. Hot. And you in hell, as often as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of. Glend. I cannot blame him : at my nativity The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes, Of burning cressets ; and at my birth The frame and huge foundation of the earth Shak'd like a coward. Hot. Why, so it would have done, At the same season, if your mother's cat Had but kitten'd, though yourself had ne'er been born. [born. Glend. I say the earth did shake when I was Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind, If you suppose as fearing you it shook. Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble. Hot. O, then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire, And not in fear of your nativity. Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth In strange eruptions ; oft the teeming earth Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd By the imprisoning of unruly wind [striving, Within her womb; which, for enlargement Shakes the old beldame earth, and topples down Steeples and moss-grown towers. Atyour birth, Our grandam earth, having this distemperature, In passion shook. Glend. Cousin, of many men I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave To tell you once again that at my birth The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes ; The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields. These signs have mark'd me extraordinary ; And all the courses of my life do show I am not in the roll of common men. Where is he living, — clipp'd in with the sea That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,— Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me? And bring him out that is but woman's son Can trace me in the tedious ways of art, And held me pace in deep experiments. Hot. I think there is no man speaks better Welsh.— I '11 to dinner. [mad. Mort. Peace, cousin Percy; you will make him Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep. Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man ; But will they come when you do call for them? Glend. Why, I can teach thee, cousin, to command The devil.

Come, come, No more of this unprofitable chat. Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head [Wye Against my power; thrice from the banks of And sandy-bottom' d Seven, have I sent him Bootless home and weather-beaten back, [too ! Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name? Glend. Come, here's the map: shall we divide our right According to our threefold order ta'en? Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it Into three limits very equally : England, from Trent and Severn hitherto, By south and east is to my part assign'd : All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore, And all the fertile land within that bound, To Owen Glendower: — and, dear coz, to you The remnant northward, lying off from Trent. And our indentures tripartite are drawn ; Which being sealed interchangeably, — A business that this night may execute, — To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I, And my good Lord of Worcester, will set forth To meet your father and the Scottish power, As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury. My father Glendower is not ready yet, Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days: — Within that space \to GLEND.] you may have drawn together [men. Hot. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here, In quantity equals not one of yours : See how this river comes me cranking in, And cuts me from the best of all my land A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle out. I '11 have the current in this place damm'd up ; And here the smug and silver Trent shall run In a new channel, fair and evenly : It shall not wind with such a deep indent, To rob me of so rich a bottom here. I '11 have it so : a little charge will do it. Glend. I will not have it alter'd. Hot. Will not you? Glend. No, nor you shall not. Hot. Who shall say me nay? Glend. Why, that will I. Hot. SCENE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 479 In reckoning up the several devils' names That were his lackeys : I cried hum, and well, goto, But mark'd him not a word. O, he :s as tedious As is a tired horse, a railing wife ; Worse than a smoky house : — I had rather live With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far, Than feed on cates and have him talk to me In any summer-house in Christendom. Mart. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman ; Exceedingly well read, and profited In strange concealments ; valiant as a lion, And wondrous affable ; and as bountiful As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin? He holds your temper in a high respect, And curbs himself even of his natural scope When you do cross his humour ; faith, he does : I warrant you, that man is not alive Might so have tempted him as you have done, Without the taste of danger and reproof : But do not use it oft, let me entreat you. Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilfulblame ; And since your coming hither have done enough To put him quite beside his patience. You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault: Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,— And that 's the dearest grace it renders you, — Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage, Defect of manners, want of government, Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain : The least of which, haunting a nobleman, Loseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain Upon the beauty of all parts besides, Beguiling them of commendation. Hot. Well, I am school'd: good manners be your speed ! Here come our wives, and let us take our leave. Re-enter GLENDOWER, with LADY MORTIMER and LADY PERCY. Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me, — My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh. Glend. My daughter weeps : she will not part with you ; She '11 be a soldier too, she '11 to the wars. Mort. Good father, tell her that she and my aunt Percy Shall follow in your conduct speedily. [GLEND. speaks to LADY MORT. in Welsh, and she answers him in the same. Glend. She 's desperate here ; a peevish, selfwill'd harlotry, One that no persuasion can do good upon. [LADY MORT. speaks to MORT. in Welsh. Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh [heavens, Which thou pour'st down from these welling I am too perfect in ; and, but for shame, In such a parley should I answer thee. [LADY MORT. speaks again. I understand thy kisses, and thou mine, And that Js a feeling disputation : But I will never be a truant, love, Till I have learned thy language ; for thy tongue Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd, Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower, With ravishing division, to her lute. [mad. Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run [LADY MORT. speaks again. Mort. O, I am ignorance itself in this 1 Glend. She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down, And rest your gentle head upon her lap, And she will sing the song that pleaseth you, And on your eyelids crown the god of sleep, Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness ; Making such difference betwixt wake and sleep As is the difference betwixt day and night, The hour before the heavenly harness'd team Begins his golden progress in the east, [sing: Mort. With all my heart I '11 sit and hear her By that time will our book, I think, be drawn. Glend. Do so ; And those musicians that shall play to you Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence ; And straight they shall be here : sit, and attend. Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down : come, quick, quick, that I may lay my head in thy lap. Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose. [The music plays. Hot. Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh; And 'tis no marvel he 's so humorous. By 'r lady, he 's a good musician. Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical ; for you are altogether governed by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh. Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish. Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head broken? Hot. No. Lady P. Then be still. Hot. Neither ; 'tis a woman's fault. Lady P. Now God help thee ! Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed. Lady P. What's that? Hot. Peace ! she sings. [A Welsh Song sung by LADY MORT, 48o FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT in. Hot. Come, Kate, I '11 have your song too. Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth. Hot. Not yours, in good sooth ! 'Heart, you swear like a comfit-maker's wife 1 Not you , in good sooth; and, As true as I live ; and, As God shall mend me; and, As sure as day: And giv'st such sarcenet surety for thy oaths, As if thou never walk'dst further than Finsbury. Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath ; and leave in sooth, And such protest of pepper-gingerbread, To velvet guards and Sunday-citizens. Come, sing. Lady P. I will not sing. Hot. 'Tis the next way to turn tailor, or be redbreast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I '11 away within these two hours ; and so, come in when ye will. [Exit. Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer; you are as slow As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go. By this our book is drawn ; we will but seal, And then to horse immediately. With all my heart. Mort. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. > Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HBNRY, and Lords. K. Hen. Lords, give us leave ; the Prince of Wales and I [hand, Must have some conference; but be near at For we shall presently have need of you. Exeunt Lords. I know not whether God will have it so, For some displeasing service I have done, That, in his secret doom, out of my blood He '11 breed revengement and a scourge for me; But thou dost, in thy passages of life, Make me believe that thou art only mark'd For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else, Could such inordinate and low desires, Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts, Such barren pleasures, rude society, &s thou art match'd withal and grafted to, Accompany the greatness of thy blood, And hold their level with thy princely heart ? P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse, As well as I am doubtless I can purge Myself of many I am charg'd withal : Yet such extenuation let me beg, &&, in reproof of many tales devis'd,— Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear, — By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmongers, I may, for some things true, wherein my youth Hath faulty wander'd and irregular, Find pardon on my true submission. K. Hen. God pardon thee! — yet let me wonder, Harry, At thy affections, which do hold a wing Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors. Thy place

in council thou hast rudely lost, Which by thy younger brother is supplied ; And art almost an alien to the hearts Of all the court and princes of my blood : The hope and expectation of thy time Is ruin'd ; and the soul of every man Prophetically does forethink thy fall. Had I so lavish of my presence been, So common-hackney 'd in the eyes of men, So stale and cheap to vulgar company, — Opinion, that did help me to the crown, Had still kept loyal to possession, And left me in reputeless banishment, A fellow of no mark nor likelihood. By being seldom seen, I could not stir But, like a comet, I was wonder'd at ; That men would tell their children, This is het Others would say, — Whereˆ which is Balingbroke ? And then I stole all courtesy from heaven, And dress'd myself in such humility That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts, Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths, Even in the presence of the crowned king. Thus did I keep my person fresh and new ; My presence, like a robe pontifical, Ne'er seen but wonder'd at : and so my state, Seldom but sumptuous, showed like a feast, And won by rareness such solemnity. The skipping king, he ambled up and down With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits, Soon kindled and soon burn'd : carded his state; Mingled his royalty with carping fools ; Had his great name profaned with their scorns ; And gave his countenance, against his name, To laugh at gibing boys, and stand the push Of every beardless vain comparative; Grew a companion to the common streets, EnfeofFd himself to popularity ; That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes, They surfeited with honey, and began To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much. So, when he had occasion to be seen, He was but as the cuckoo is in June, Heard, not regarded, — seen, but with such eyes, As, sick and blunted with community, Afford no extraordinary gaze,

SCENE II.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 4*1 Such as is bent on sun-like majesty When it shines seldom in admiring eyes : But rather drowz'd, and hung their eyelidsdown, Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect As cloudy men use to their adversaries, Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full. And in that very line, Harry, stand' st thou ; For thou hast lost thy princely privilege With vile participation : not an eye But is a- weary of thy common sight, Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more ; Which now doth that I would not have it do,- Make blind itself with foolish tenderness. P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious lord, Be more myself. K. Hen. For all the world, As thou art to this hour, was Richard then When I from France set foot at Ravenspurg; And even as I was then is Percy now. Now, by my sceptre, and my soul to boot, He hath more worthy interest to the state Than thou, the shadow of succession : For, of no right, nor colour like to right, He doth fill fields with harness in the realm ; Turns head against the lion's armed jaws ; And, being no more in debt to years than thou» JLeads ancient lords and reverend bishops on To bloody battles and to bruising arms. What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas ! whose high deeds, Whose hot incursions, and great na*ne in arms, Holds from all soldiers chief majority And military title capital [Christ : Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Thrice hath this Hotspur Mars in swathingclothes. This infant warrior, in his enterprises Discomfited great Douglas ; ta'en him once, Enlarged him, and made a friend of him, To fill the mouth of deep defiance up, And shake the peace and safety of our throne. And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland, The Archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer, Capitulate against us, and are up. But wherefore do I tell these news to thee? Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes, Which art my near'st and dearest enemy? Thou that art like enough, — through vassal fear, Base inclination, and the start of spleen,— To fight against me under Percy's pay, To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns, To show how much thou art degenerate. P. Hen. Do not think so, you shall n it so: so, you shall not find And God forgive them that have so muck sway'd Your majesty's good thoughts away from met I will redeem all this on Percy's head, And, in the closing of some glorious day, Be bold to tell you that I am your son ; When I will wear a garment all of blood, And stain my favours in a bloody mask, [it: Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights, That this same child of honour and renown, This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight, And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet. For every honou/ sitting on his helm, Would they were multitudes, and on my head My shames redoubled ! for the time will come That I shall make this northern youth exchange His glorious deeds for my indignities, Percy is but my factor, good my lord, To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf; And I will call him to so strict account, That he shall render every glory up, Yea, even the slightest worship of his time, Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart. This, in the name of God, I promise here: The which if he be pleas'd I shall perform, I do beseech your majesty, may salve The long-grown wounds of my intemperances If not, the end of life cancels all bands ; And I will die a hundred thousand deaths Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow. K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this :— [herein. Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT. How now, good Blunt ! thy looks are full of speed. [speak of. Blunt. So hath the business that I come to Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word That Douglas and the English rebels met The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury: A mighty and a fearful head they are, If promises be kept on every hand, As ever orTer*d foul play in a state. K. Hen, The Earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day; With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster ; For this advertisement is five days old : — On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set for* ward; On Thursday we ourselves will march : Our meeting is Bridgenorth : and, Harry, you Shall march through Glostershire ; by which account, Our business valued, some twelve days hence Our general forces at Bridjzenorth shall meet.

482 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT in. Our hands are full of business : let 's away ; Advantage feeds him fat while men delay. SCENE III. — EASTCHEAP. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern. Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH. Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown ; I am withered like an old apple-John. Well, I '11 repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking ; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse : the inside of a church ! Company, villanous company, hath been the spoil of me. Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long. Fal. Why, there is it : come, sing me a bawdy song ; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be ; virtuous enough ; swore little; diced not above seven times a week ; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter — of an hour ; paid money that I borrowed — three or four times : lived well, and in good compass: and now I live out of all order, out of all compass. Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, — out of all reasonable compass, Sir John. Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I '11 amend my life : thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the p op, — but 'tis in the nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp. Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you no harm. Fal. No, I Ml be sworn ; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a Death's head or a memento mori: I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives that lived in purple ; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face ; my oath should be, By this fire, that's God's angel; but thou art altogether given over ; and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou rannest up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there 's no purchase in money. O, thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern : but the sack that thou hast drunk me would have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two-and-thirty years; God reward me for it ! [belly ! Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your Fal. God-a-mercy ! so should I be sure to be heart-burn'd. Enter Hostess. How now, Dame Partlet the hen ! have you inquired yet who picked my pocket? Host. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant : the tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before. Fal. You lie, hostess: Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair ; and I' 11 be sworn my pocket was picked. Go to, you are a woman, go. Host. Who, I? no; I defy thee: God's light, I was never called so in mine own house before. Fal. Go to, I know you well enough. Host. No, Sir John; you do not know me, Sir John. I know you, 'Sir John : you owe me money, Sir John ; and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it : I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back. Fal. Dowlas, filthy dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of tflem. Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four-and-twenty pound. Fal. He had his part of it ; let him pay. Host. He? alas, he is poor ; he hath nothing. Fal. How! poor? look upon his face ; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks : I '11 not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn, but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth forty mark. Host. O Jesu, I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper ! Fal. How ! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup: 'sblood, an he were here I would cudgel him like a dog if he would say so. Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS, marching. FALSTAFF meets the PRTNCE, playing on his truncheon like a fife. Fal. How now, lad ! is the wind in that door,, i' faith? must we all march?

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 483 Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion. Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me. P. Hen. What sayest thou, Mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well; he is an honest man. Host. Good my lord, hear me. Fal. Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me. P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack? Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets. P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack ? Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a sealring of my grandfather's. P. Hen. A trifle, some eight-penny matter. Host. So I told him, my lord ; and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said he would cudgel you. P. Hen. What ! he did not? Host. There 's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else. Fal. There 's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune ; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, Maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go. Host. Say, what thing? what thing? Fal. What thing ! why, a thing to thank God on. Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it ; I am an honest man's wife ; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so. Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise. Host. Say, what beast, thou knave, thou? Fal. What beast ! why, an otter. P. Hen. An otter, Sir John ! why an otter? Fal. Why, she 's neither fish nor flesh ; a man knows not where to have her. Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so : thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave, thou ! P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly. Host. So he doth you, my lord ; and said this other day you ought him a thousand pound. P. Hen. Sirraji, do I owe you a thousand pound? Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! a million: thy love is worth a million ; thou owest me thy love. Host. Nay, my lord, he call'd you Jack, and said he would cudgel you. Fal. Did I, Bardolph? Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so. Fal. Yea, — if he said my ring was copper. P. Hen. I say 'tis copper : darest thou be as good as thy word now ? Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but man, I dare : but as thou art prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp. P. Hen. And why not as the lion? Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion : dost thou think I '11 fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break. P. Hen. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees ! But, sirrah, there 's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine, — it is all filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket ! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded, — if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries but these, I am a villain : and yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket-up wrong: art thou not ashamed? Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest in the state of innocency Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do in the days of villany? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess, then, you picked my pocket? P. Hen. It appears so by the story. Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee : go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, lock to thy servants, cherish thy guests : thou shall find me tractable to any honest reason : thou seest I am pacified. — Still? — Nay, pr'ythee, be gone. {Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court : for the robbery, lad, — how is that answe-ed? P. Hen. O, my sweet beef, I must still be gˆod angel to thee: — the money is paid back again. Fal. O, I do not like that paying back ; 'tis a double labour. P. Hen. I am good fr ends with my father, and may do anything. Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwashed hands too. Bard. Do, my lord. [of foot. P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge Fal. L would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O for a fine thief, of the age of two-and -twenty or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels, — they offend none but the virtuous : I laud them, I praise them.

[Exit BARDOLPH. Go, Poins, to horse, to horse; for thou and I Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner-time. — [Exit POINS. Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall At two o'clock in the afternoon : [receive There shalt thou know thy charge, and there Money and order for their furniture. The land is burning ; Percy stands on high ; And either they or we must lower lie. [Exit. Fal. Rare words! brave world! — Hostess, my breakfast ; come : — O, I could wish this tavern were my drum ! [Exit. ACT IV. SCENE I. — The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury. Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS. Hot. Well said, my noble Scot : if speaking truth In this fine age were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas have, As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world. By heaven, I cannot flatter ; I defy The tongues of soothers ; but a braver place In my heart's love hath no man than yourself: Nay, task me to my word ; approve me, lord. Doug. Thou art the king of honour : No man so potent breathes upon the ground But I will beard him. Hot. Do so, and 'tis well.— Enter a Messenger with letters. SCENE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 485 It lends a lustre and more great opinion, A larger dare to our great enterprise, Than if the earl were here : for men must think, If we, without his help, can make a head To push against the kingdom, with his help We sh 11 o'erturn it topsy-turvy down. — Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole. Doug. As heart can think : there is not such a word Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear. Enter SIR RICHARD VERNON. Hot. My cousin Vemon! welcome, by my soul. [lord. Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, The Earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong, Is marching hitherwards; with him Prince John. Hot. No harm: — what more? Ver. And further, I have learn'd The king himself in person is set forth, Or hitherwards intended speedily, With strong and mighty preparation. [son, Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales And his comrades, that daff d the world aside, And bid it pass ? Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms ; All plum'd like estridges, that wing the wind ; Bated like eagles having lately bath'd ; Glittering in golden coats, like images ; As full of spirit as the month of May, And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer ; Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls. I saw young Harry, — with his beaver on, His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd, — Rise from the ground like featherd Mercury, And vaulted with such ease into his seat, As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds, To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus, And witch the world with noble horsemanship. Hot. No more, no more ; worse than the sun in March, This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come. They come like sacrifices in their trim, And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war, All hot and bleeding, will we offer them : The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit, Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh. And yet not ours. — Come, let me taste my horse, Who is to bear me, like a th. nderbolt, Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales : Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse, Meet, and ne'er part till one drop down a corse. — O that Glendower were come ! Ver. There is more news: I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along, He cannot draw his power this fourteen days. Doug. That 's the worst tidings that I hear of yet. [sound. War. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto? Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be : My father and Glendower being both away, The powers of us may serve so great a day. Come, let us take a muster speedily : Doomsday is near ; die all, die merrily. Doug. Talk not of dying ; I am out of fear Of death or death's hand for this one half-year. [Exeunt. SCENE IL — A public Road near Coventry. Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH. Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry ; fill me a bottle of sack : our soldiers shall march through ; we '11 to Sutton-Cop-hill to-night. Bard. Will you give me money, captain? Fal. Lay out, lay out. Bard. This bottle makes an angel. Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour ; and if it make twenty, take them all ; I '11 answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at the town's end. Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit. Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet. I have misused the king's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans ; such a commodity of warm slaves as had as lief hear the devil as a drum ; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services ; and now my whole charge consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores ; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters, and ostlers tradefallen ; the cankers of a calm world and a long peace; ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old-faced ancient : and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out

A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that 's flat : — nay, and the villains march wide betwixt tl legs, as if they had gyves on; for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There 's but a shirt and a half in all my company ; and the half-shirt is two napkins tacked together and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-nose innkeeper of Daventry. But that 's all one ; they '11 find linen enough on every hedge. Enter FRINGE HENRY and WESTMORELAND. P. Hen. How now, blown Jack ! how now, quilt ! FaL What, Hal ! how now, mad wag ! what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? — My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy: I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury. West. Faith, Sir John, 'tis more than time that I were there, and you too ; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all : we must away all night. FaL Tut, never fear me : I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream. P. Hen. I think, to steal cream, indeed ; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after? FaL Mine, Hal, mine. P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals. FaL Tut, tut ; good enough to toss ; food for powder, food for powder ; they '11 fill a pit as well as better : tush, man, mortal men, mortal men. West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare, — too beggarly. FaL Faith, for their poverty, I know not ivhere they had that ; and for their bareness, I am sure they never learned that of me. P. Hen. No I '11 be sworn ; unless you call three fingers on the ribs bare. But, sirrah, make haste : Percy is already in the field. FaL What, is the king encamped? West. He is. Sir John : I fear we shall stay too long. FaL Well, [a feast To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. \Exeunt. SCENE III. — The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury. Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON. Hot. We '11 fight with him to-night. Wor.

It may not be. Doug. You give him, then, advantage. Ver. Not a whit. Hot. Why say you so ? looks he not for supply? Ver. So do we. Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful. Wor. Good cousin, beadvis'd; stir not to-night. Ver. Do not, my lord. Doug. You do not counsel well : You speak it out of fear and cold heart. Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,— And I dare well maintain it with my life-, — If well-respected honour bid me on, I hold as little counsel with weak fear As you, my lord, or any Scot that lives:— Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle Which of us fears. Doug. Yea, or to-night. Ver. Content Hot. To-nightj say I. [much, Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonde* Being men of such great leading as you are, That you foresee not what impediments Drag back our expedition : certain horse Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up: Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day ; And now their pride and mettle is asleep, Their courage with hard labour tame and dull, That not a horse is half the half of himself. Hot. So are the horses of the enemy In general, journey-bated and brought low : The better part of ours is full of rest. Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours. For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in. \The trumpet sounds a parley. Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT. Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king, If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect. Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt ; and would to God You were of our determination ! Some of us love you well ; and even those somr Envy your great deservings and good name, Because you are not of our quality, But stand against us like an enemy, [stand so, Blunt. And God defend but still I should So long as out of limit and true rule

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. You stand against anointed majesty ! But, to my charge. — The king hath sent to know The nature of your griefs ; and whereupon You conjure from the breast of civil peace Such bold hostility; teaching his duteous land Audacious cruelty. If that the king Have any way your good deserts forgot,— Which he confesseth to be manifold, — He bids you name your griefs ; and with all speed You shall have your desires with interest, And pardon absolute for yourself, and these Herein misled by your suggestion. [king Hot. The king is kind ; and well we know the Knows at what time to promise, when to pay. My father and my uncle and myself Did give him that same royalty he wears; And when he was not six-and- twenty strong, Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low, A poor unminded outlaw sneaking home, My father gave him welcome to the shore ; And when he heard him swear, and vow- to God, He came but to be Duke of Lancaster, To sue his livery and beg his peace, With tears of innocency and terms of zeal, — My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd, Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too. Now, when the lords and barons of the realm Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him, The more and less came in with cap and knee : Met him in boroughs, cities, villages; A ttended him on bridges, stood in lanes, Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths, Gave him their heirs as pages, follow'd him Even at the heels in golden multitudes. He presently, — as greatness knows itself, -i Steps me a little higher than his vow Made to my father, while his blood was poor, Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurg ; And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees, That lie too heavy on the commonwealth ; Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep Over his country's wrongs ; and, by this face, This seeming brow of justice, did he win The hearts of all that he did angle for: Proceeded further ; cut me off the heads Of all the favourites that the absent king In deputation left behind him here, When he was personal in the Irish war. Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this. Hot. Then to the point. In short time after, he depos'd the king; Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life ; And, in the neck of that, task'd the whole state : To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March,— Who is, if every owner were well plac'd, Indeed his knig, — to be

incag'd in Wales There without ransom to lie forfeited ; Disgrac'd me in my h?ppy victories; Sought to entrap me by intelligence; Rated my uncle from the council-board ; In rage dismiss'd my father from the court ; Brock oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong; And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out This head of safety; and withal to pry Into his title, the which we find Too indirect for long continuance. Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king? Hot. Not so, Sir Walter: we'll withdraw awhile. Go to the king ; and let there be impawn'd Some surety for a safr return again, And in the morning early shall my uncle Bring him our purposes : and so, farewell. Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love. Hot. And may be so we shall. Blunt. Pray God you do ! _Exeunt. SCENE IV.— YORK. A Room in the ARCHBISHOP'S House. Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, and SIR MICHAEL. Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael ; bear this sealed brief With winged haste to the lord marshal ; This to my cousin Scroop ; and all the rest To whom they are directed. If you knew How much they do import, you would make haste. Sir M. My good lord, I guess their tenor. Arch. Like enough you do. To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men Must bide the touch ; for, sir, at Shrewsbury, As I am truly given to understand, The king, with mighty and quick-raised power, Meets with Lord Harry: and I fear, Sir Michael, What with the sickness of Northumberland, — Whose power was in the first proportion, — And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,— Who with them was a rated sinew too, And comes not in, o'erruled by prophecies,— I fear the power of Percy is too weak To wage an instant trial with the king. Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear ; there is Douglas, And Lord Mortimer.

 Arch. No, Mortimer is not there. Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord Harry Percy, And there is my Lord of Worcester ; and a head Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen. Arch. And so there is ; but yet the king hath drawn The special head of all the land together : — The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt ; And many more corrivals and dear men Of estimation and command in arms, [oppos'd. Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear ; And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed : For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the king Dismiss his power, he means to visit us, — For he hath heard of our confederacy, — And 'tis but wisdom to make strong against him: Therefore make haste. I must go write again To other friends ; and so, farewell, Sir Michael. [Exeunt severally. ACT V. SCENE I. — The KING'S Camp near Shrews biiry. Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and SIR JOHN FALSTAFF. K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yon bosky hill 1 the day looks pale At his distemperature. P. Hen. The southern wind Doth play the trumpet to his purposes ; And by his hollow whistling in me leaves Foretells a tempest and a blustering day. 1C. Hen, Then with the losers let it sympathize, For nothing can seem foul to those that win. [Trumpet sounds. Enter WORCESTER and VERNON. How now, my Lord of Worcester ! 'tis not well That you and I should meet upon such terms As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust ; And made us doff our easy robes of peace, To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel ; This is not well, my lord, this is not well. What say you to it? will you again unknit This churlish knot of all-abhorred war? And move in that obedient orb again Where you did give a fair and natural light ; And be no more an exhal'd meteor, A prodigy of fear, and a portent Of broached mischief to the unborn times! Wor. Hear me, my liege : For mine own part, I could be well content To entertain the lag-end of my life With quiet hours ; for, I do protest, I have not sought the day of this dislike. K. Hen. You have not sought it ! how comes it, then? [it. Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found P. Hen. Peace, chewet, peace ! [looks Wor. It pleas'd your majesty to turn your Of favour from myself and all our house ; And yet I must remember you, my lord, We were the first and dearest of your friends. For you my staff of office did I break In Richard's time ; and posted day and night To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand, When yet you were in place and in account Nothing so strong and fortunate as I. It was myself, my brother, and his son, That brought you home, and boldly did outdare The dangers of the time : you swore to us, — And you did swear that oath at Doncaster, — That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state ; Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right, The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster : To this we swore our aid. But in short space It rain'd down fortune showering on your head ; And such a flood of greatness fell on you, — c What with our help, what with the absent king/ What with the injuries of a wanton time, The seeming sufferances that you had borne, And the contrarious winds that held the king So long in his unlucky Irish wars That all in England did repute him dead, — And, from this swarm of fair advantages, You took occasion to be quickly woo'd To gripe the general sway into your hand ; Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster ; And, being fed by us, you us'd us so As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, Useth the sparrow, — did oppress our nest, Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk [sight That even our love durst not come near your For fear of swallowing ; but with nimble wing We were enforc'd, for safety-sake, to fly Out of your sight, and raise this present head: Whereby we stand opposed by such means As you yourself have forg'd against yourself; By unkind usage, dangerous countenance, And violation of all faith and troth Sworn to us in your younger enterprise. K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulated, Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches ; To face the garment of rebellion With some fine colour that may please the eye Of fickle changelings and poor discontents,

SCENE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 489 Which gape and rub the elbow at the news Of hurlyburly innovation : And never yet did insurrection want Such water-colours to impaint his cause ; Nor moody beggars, starving for a time Of pellmell havoc and confusion. [a soul P. Hen. In both our armies there is many Shall pay full dearly for this encounter, If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew, The Prince of Wales doth join with all the world In praise of Henry Percy : by my hopes, This present enterprise set off his head, I do not think a braver gentleman, More active- valiant or more valiant -young, More daring or more bold, is now alive To grace this latter age with noble deeds. For my part, I may speak it to my shame, I have a truant been to chivalry; And so I hear he doth account me too : Yet this before my father's majesty, — I am content that he shall take the odds Of his great name and estimation, And will, to save the blood on either side, Try fortune with him in a single fight. K. Hen. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee, Albeit considerations infinite Do make against it. — No, good Worcester, no, We love our people well ; even those we love That are misled upon your cousin's part ; And, will they take the offer of our grace, Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man Shall be my friend again, and I '11 be his: So tell your cousin, and bring me word What he will do : but if he will not yield, Rebuke and dread correction wait on us, And they shall do their office. So, be gone ; We will not now be troubled with reply : We offer fair ; take it advisedly. [Exeunt WOR. and VER. P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life : The Douglas and the Hotspur both together Are confident against the world in arms. K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge ; For, on their answer, will we set on them : And God befriend us, as our cause is just ! [Exeunt KING, BLUNT, and P. JOHN. Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so ; 'tis a point of friendship. P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell. Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well. P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death. [Exit. Fal. Tis not due yet ; I would be loth to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me ? Well, tis no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on ? how then ? Can honour set-to a leg? no : or an arm ? no : or take away the grief of a wound ? no. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? no. What is honour ? a word. What is in that word, honour? What is that honour? air. A trim reckoning !— Who hath it ? he that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? no. Doth he hear it ? no. Is it insensible, then ? yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living ? no. Why? detraction will not suffer it :— therefore I 11 none of it : honour is a mere scutcheon • and so ends my catechism. [Exit. SCENE II. —The Rebel Camp. Enter WORCESTER and VERNON. Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard, The liberal kind offer of the king. Ver. 'Twere best he did. Wor. Then are we all undone. It is not possible, it cannot be, The king should keep his word in loving us ; He will suspect us still, and find a time To punish this offence in other faults: Suspicion shall be all stuck full of eyes : For treason is but trusted like the fox, Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up, Will have a wild trick of his ancestors. Look how we can, or sad or merrily, Interpretation will misquote our looks; And we shall feed like oxen at a stall, The better cherish'd still the nearer death. My nephew's trespass may be well forgot, — It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood, And an adopted name of privilege, — A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen .• All his offences live upon my head And on his father's: we did train him on; And, his corruption being ta'en from us, We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all. Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know, In any case the offer of the king. Ver. Deliver what you will, I '11 say 'tis so. Here comes your cousin. Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; Officers and Soldiers behind. Hot. My uncle is return'd : — deliver up My Lord of Westmoreland. — Uncle, what news? Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

490 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT v. Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmoreland. Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so. Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit. Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king. Hot. Did you beg any ? God forbid ! Wor. I told him gently of our grievances, Of his oath-breaking ; which he mended thus, — By now forswearing that he is forsworn : He calls us rebels, traitors ; and will scourge With haughty arms this hateful name in us. Re-enter DOUGLAS. Doug. Arm, gentlemen ; to arms ! for I have thrown A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth, And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it; Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on. Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king, And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight. Hot. O, would the quarrel lay upon our heads ; And that no man might draw short breath today But I and Harry Monmouth ! Tell me, tell me, How show'd his tasking? seem'd it in contempt ? Ver. No, by my soul : I never in my life Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly, Unless a brother should a brother dare To gentle exercise and proof of arms. He "gave you all the duties of a man ; Trimm'd up your praises with a princely tongue; Spoke your deservings like a chronicle ; Making you ever better than his praise, By still dispraising praise valu'd with you : And, which became him like a prince indeed, He made a blushing cital of himself; And chid his truant youth with such a grace, As if he master'd there a double spirit, Of teaching and of learning instantly. There did he pause : but let me tell the world, — If he outlive the envy of this day, England did never owe so sweet a hope, So much misconstru'd in his wantonness. Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured Upon his follies : never did I hear Of any prince so wild o' liberty. But be he as he will, yet once ere night I will embrace him with a soldier's arm, That he shall shrink under my courtesy. — Arm, arm with speed : — and, fellows, soldiers, friends, Better consider what you have to do Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue, Can lift your blood uˆ with persuasion. Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord, here are letters for you. Hot. I cannot read them now. — 0 gentlemen, the time of life is very short ! To spend that shortness basely were too long, If life did ride upon a dial's point, Still ending at the arrival of an hour. An if we live, we live to tread

on kings ; If die, brave death, when princes die with us ! Now, for our consciences, — the arms are fair, When the intent of bearing them is just. Enter another Messenger. Mess. My lord, prepare ; the king comes on apace. [tale, Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my For I profess not talking ; only this, — Let each man do his best : and here draw I A sword, whose temper I intend to stain With the best blood that I can meet withal In the adventure of this perilous day. Now, — Esperance! — Percy! — and set on. — Sound all the lofty instruments of war, And by that music let us all embrace : For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall A second time do such a courtesy. [The trumpets sound. They embrace , and exeunt. SCENE III. — Plain near Shrewsbury. Excursions) and parties fighting. Alarum to the battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and BLUNT, meeting. Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle thus Thou Grossest me ? What honour dost thou seek Upon my head? Doug. Know, then, my name is Douglas ; And I do haunt thee in the battle thus Because some tell me that thou art a king. Blunt. They tell thee true. Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought Thy likeness ; for, instead of thee, King Harry, The sword hath ended him : so shall it thee, Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner. Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot; And thou shalt find a king that will revenge Lord Stafford's death. {They fight, and BLUNT is slain. Enter HOTSPUR. Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus, 1 never had triumph'd upon a Scot.

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. 491 Doug. All 's done, all 's won ; here breathless lies the king. Hot. Where? Doug. Here. Hot. This, Douglas ? no ; I know this face full well : A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt ; Semblably furnish'd like the king himself. Dottg. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes ! A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear : Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king ? Hot. The king hath many masking in his coats. Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats ; I '11 murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece, Until I meet the king. Hot. Up, and away ! Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt. Other alarums. Enter FALSTAFF. Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here : here 's no scoring but upon the pate. — Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt :— there 's honour for you : here 's no vanity ! — I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too : God keep lead out of me ! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. — I have led my raggamuffins where they are peppered : there 's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive ; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. — But who comes here ? Enter PRINCE HENRY. P. Hen. What, stand'st thou idle here ? lend me thy sword : Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies, Whose deaths are unreveng'd : pr'ythee, lend me thy sword. Fal. O Hal, I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe awhile. — Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure. P. Hen. He is, indeed ; and living to kill thee. Lend me thy sword, I pr'ythee. Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive thou gettest not my sword ; but take my pistol, if thou wilt. P. Hen. Give it me : what, is it in the case? Fal. Ay, Hal ; 'tis hot, 'tis hot ; there 's that will sack a city. [The PRINCE draws out a bottle of sack. P. Hen. What, is 't a time to jest and dally now ? \Thrnos it at himt and exit. Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I '11 pierce him. If he do come in my way, so ; if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath : give me life : which if I can save, so ; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there 's an end. [Exit. SCENE IV.— Anotlier part of the Field. Alarums. Excursions. Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN, and WESTMORELAND. K. Hen. I pr'ythee, Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much. — Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him. P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too. P. Hen. I do beseech your majesty, make up, Lest your retirement do amaze your friends. K. Hen. I will do so.— My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent. West. Come, my lord, I will lead you to your tent. P. Hen. Lead me, my lord ? I do not need your help : And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive The Prince of Wales from such a field as this, Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on, And rebels' arms triumph in massacres ! P. John. We breathe too long : — come, cousin Westmoreland, Our duty this way lies ; for God's sake, come. [Exeunt P. JOHN and WEST. P. Hen. By heaven, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster ; I did not think thee lord of such a spirit : Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John ; But now I do respect thee as my soul. K. Hen. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point With lustier maintenance than I did look for Of such an ungrown warrior. P. Hen. O, this boy Lends mettle to us all. [Exit. Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS. Doug. Another king ! they grow like Hydra's heads : I am the Douglas, fatal to all those That wear those colours on them : — What art thou, That counterfeit'st the person of a king ? K. Hen. The king himself, who, Douglas, grieves at heart,

492 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT v. So many of his shadows thou hast met, And not the very king. I have two boys Seek Percy and thyself about the field : But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily, I will assay thee; so, defend thyself! Doug. I fear, thou art another counterfeit ; And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king: But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be, And thus I win thee. [They fight; the KING being in danger, re-enter P. HENRY. P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot., or thou art like Never to hold it up again ! the spirits Of Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms : It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee ; Who never promiseth but he means to pay. [They fight; DOUGLASˆ.?. Cheerly, my lord: how fares your grace? — Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent, And so hath Clifton : I '11 to Clifton straight. K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile : — Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion ; And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me. P. Hen. O God, they did me too much injury That ever said I hearken'd for your death ! If it were so, I might have let alone The insulting hand of Douglas over you, Which would have been as speedy in your end As all the poisonous potions in the world, And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son. K. Hen. Make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit. Enter HOTSPUR. Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth. P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name. Hot. My name is Harry Percy. P. Hen. Why, then I see A very valiant rebel of the name. I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy, To share with me in glory any more : Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere ; Nor can one England brook a double reign, Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales. Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the hour is come To end the one of us ; and would to God Thy name in arms were now as great as mine ! P. Hen. I '11 make it greater ere I part from thee; And all the budding honours on thy crest I '11 crop, to make a aarland for my head. Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight. Enter FALSTAFF. Fal. Well said, Hal ! to it, Hal !— Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you. Re-enter DOUGLAS ; he fights with FALSTAFF, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit DOUGLAS. HOTSPUR is wounded, and falls. Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth ! I better brook the loss of brittle life

Than those proud titles thou hast won of me ; They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh : — But thought 's the slave of life, and life time's fool; And time, that takes survey of all the world, Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy, But that the earthy and cold hand of death Lies on my tongue : — No, Percy, thou art dust, And food for — [Dies. P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy : fare thee well, great heart ! — Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk ! When that this body did contain a spirit, A kingdom for it was too small a bound ; But now two paces of the vilest earth Is room enough: — this earth that bears thee dead Bears not alive so stout a gentleman. If thou wert sensible of courtesy, I should not make so dear a show of zeal :— But let my favours hide thy mangled face ; And, even in thy behalf, I '11 thank myself For doing these fair rites of tenderness. Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven 1 Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave, But not remember'd in thy epitaph ! — [He sees FAL. on the ground. What, old acquaintance ! could not all this flesh Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell ! I could have better spar'd a better man. O, I should have a heavy miss of thee, If I were much in love with vanity. Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day, Though many dearer, in this bloody fray. EmbowelPd will I see thee by and by: Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit. Fal. [Rising slowly.} Embowelled! if thou embowel me to-day, I '11 give you leave to powder me and eat me too to-morrow. 'Sblood , 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? The better part of valour is discretion ; in the which better part I have saved my life. Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead ; how if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I '11 make him sure : yea, and I '11 swear I killed him. Why may not he rise as well as I ? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me. Therefore, sirrah [stabbing him\ with a new wound in your thigh, come you along with me. {Takes HOTSPUR on his back. Re-enter PRINCE HENRY and PRINCE JOHN. P. Hen. Come, brother John, full bravely hast thou flesh'd Thy maiden sword. P. John. But, soft ! whom have we here? Did you not tell me this fat man was dead ? P. Hen. I did ; I saw him dead, breathless and bleeding On the ground. — Art thou alive? or is it fantasy That plays, upon our eyesight? I pr'ythee, speak; We will not trust our eyes without our ears : — Thou art not what thou seem'st. Fal. No, that 's certain ; I am not a double man : but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack". There is Percy {throwing the body down] : if your father will do me any honour, so ; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you. P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead. Fal. Didst thou?— Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying! — I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he ; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so ; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I '11 take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, zounds, I would make him eat a piece of my sword. P. John. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard. P. Hen. This fc the strangest fellow, brother John.— Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back : For my part, if a lie may do thee grace, I '11 gild it with the happiest terms I have. {A retreat is sounded. The trumpet sounds retreat ; the day is ours. Come, brother, let 's to the highest of the field, To see what friends are living, who are dead. {Exeunt P. HENRY and P. JOHN. Fal. I '11 follow, as they say, for reward. He

that rewards me, God reward him ! If I do grow great, I '11 grow ICLS ; for I '11 purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman, should do. {Exit, bearing off the body. SCENE \ '.— Another part of the Field. The Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, PRINCE HENRY, PRINCE JOHN, WESTMORELAND, and others, with WORCESTER and VERNON prisoners. K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke. — Ill-spirited Worcester ! did we not send grace, Pardon, and terms of love to all of you ? And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary? Misuse the tenor of thy kinsman's trust? Three knights upon our party slain to-day, A noble earl, and many a creature else, Had been alive this hour, If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne Betwixt our armies true intelligence. Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me to, And I embrace this fortune patiently, Since not to be avoided it falls on me. K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death, and Vernon too : Other offenders we will pause upon. {E: ntnt WOR. and VER. , guarded. How goes the field? P. Hen. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him, The noble Percy slain, and all his men Upon the foot of fear, — fled with the rest ; And falling from a hill, he was so bruis'd That the pursuers took him. At my tent The Douglas is ; and I beseech your grace I may dispose of him. K. Hen. With all my heart. P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you This honourable bounty shall belong : Go to the Douglas, and deliver him Up to his pleasure, ransom less and free : His valour, shown upon our crests to-day, Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds Even in the bosom of our adversaries. P. John. I thank your grace for this high courtesy, Which 1 shall give away immediately.

 K. Hen. Then this remains, — that we divide our power. — You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland, Towards York shall bend you with your dearest speed, To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop, Who, as we hear, are busily in arms: Myself, — and you, son Harry, — will towards Wales, To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March. Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway, Meeting the check of such another day : And since this business so fair is done, Let us not leave till all our own be wen. [Exeunt.

Before NORTHUMBERLAND'S Castle. Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues. Riim. Open your ears ; for which of you will stop The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks? I, from the orient to the drooping west, Making the v/ind my post-horse, still unfold The acts commenced on this ball of earth : Upon my tongues continual slanders ride, The which in every language I pronounce, Stuffing the ears of men with false reports. I speak of peace, while covert enmity, Under the smile of safety, wounds the world : Anil who but Rumour, who but only I, Make fearful musters and prepared defence; Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief; Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war, And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures ; And of so easy and so plain a stop That the blunt monster with uncounted heads, The still-discordant wavering multitude, Can play upon it. But what need I thus My well-known body to anatomize Among my household? Why is Rumour here? I run before King

Harry's victory ; Who, in a bloody field by Shrewsbury, Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops, Quenching the flame of bold rebellion Even with the rebel's blood. But what mean I To speak so true at first? my office is To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's swords

496 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. CACTI. And that the king before the Douglas' rage Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death. This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns Between that royal field of Shrewsbury And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone, Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland, Lies crafty-sick : the posts come tiring on, And not a man of them brings other news Than they have learn'd of me : from Rumour's tongues They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit. ACT I. aoi&iafl •. ; „ m, SCENE I.— The same. The Porter before the Gate; enter LORD BARDOLPH. L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho? — Where is the earl? Port. What shall I say you are? L. Bard. Tell thou the earl That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here. Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard : Please it your honour, knock but at the gate, And he himself will answer. X. Bard. Here comes the earl. [Exit Porter. Enter NORTHUMBERLAND. North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute now Should be the father of some stratagem : The times are wild ; contention, like a horse, Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose And bears down all before him. L. Bard. Noble earl, I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury. North. Good, an God will ! L. Bard. As good as heart can wish : — The king is almost wounded to the death ; And, in the fortune of my lord your son, Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts (John, Kill'd by the hand of Douglas : young Prince And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field; And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John, Is prisoner to your son : O, such a day, So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won, Came not till now to dignify the times, Since Caesar's fortunes ! North. How is this deriv'd ? Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury? L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that me from thence ; A gentleman well bred and of good name, That freely render'd me these news for true. North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent On Tuesday last to listen after news. Z,, Bard. My lord, I over-rode hˆn on the way; And he is furnish'd with no certainties More than he haply may retail from me. Enter TRAVERS. North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you? [back Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfrevile turn'd me With joyful tidings ; and, being better hors'd, Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard A gentleman, almost forspent with speed,

That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse. He ask'd the way to Chester ; and of him I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. He told me that rebellion had bad luck, And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold. With that, he gave his able horse the head, And, bending forward, struck his armed heels .Against the panting sides of his poor jade Up to the rowel-head ; and starting so, He seem'd in running to devour the way, Staying no longer question. North. Ha !— Again : Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold? Of Hotspur, coldspur? that rebellion Had met ill-luck? L. Bard. My lord, I '11 tell you what ; If my young lord your son have not the day, Upon mine honour, for a silken point I '11 give my barony : never talk of it. North. Why should the gentleman that rode by Travers Give, then, such instances of loss? L. Bard. Who, he? He was some hilding fellow, that had stolen The horse he rode on ; and, upon my life, Spoke at a venture. — Look, here comes more news. Enter MORTON, North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a titleleaf, Foretells the nature of a tragic volume : So looks the strand, whereon the imperious flood Hath left a witness'd usurpation, — Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury? Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord; Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask To fright our party. North. How doth my son and brother ? Thou tremblest ; and the whiteness in thy cheek Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 497 Even such a. man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone, Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd; But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue. And I my Percy's death ere thou report's! it. This thou wouldst say, — Your son did thus and thus; Your brother thus ; so fought the noble Douglas ; Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds : But' in the end to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with — brother, son, and all are dead. Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet ; But, for my lord your son, — North. Why, he is dead. See what a ready tongue suspicion hath I He that but fears the thing he would not know Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton ; Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace, And make thee rich for doing me such wrong. Mor. You are too grer.t to be by me gainsaid : Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy 's dead. I see a strange confession in thine eye : Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; The tongue offends not that reports his death : And he doth sin that doth belie the dead ; Not he which says the dead is not alive. Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office ; and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember'd knolling a departing friend. L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead. Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to God I had not seen; But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rend'ring faint quittance, wearied and outbreath'd, [down To Harry Monmouth ; whose swift wrath beat The never-daunted Percy to the earth, From whence with life he never more sprang up. In few, his death, — whose spirit leirt a fire Even to the dullest peasant in his camp, — Being bruited once, took fire and heat away From the best-temper'd courage in his troops ; For from his metal was his party steel'd ; Which once in him abated, all the rest Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead i And as the thing that 's heavy in itself, Upon enforcement, flies with greatest speed, So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear, That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety, Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester Too soon ta'en prisoner ; and that furious Scot, The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword [king, Had three times slain the appearance of the 'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all Is, that the king hath won ; and hath sent out A speedy power to encounter you, my lord, Under the conduct cf young Lancaster And Westmoreland. This is the news at full. North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. In poison there is physic ; and these news, Having been well, that would have made me sick, Being sick, have in some measure made me well : And as the wretch, whose fever- weaken'd joints, Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life, Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire Out of his keeper's arms ; even so my limbs, Weaken'd with grief, being now earag'd with grief, Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch t A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel, Must glove this hand : and hence, thou sickly quoif! Thou art a guard too wanton for the head Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit. Now bind my brows with iron, and approach The rugged'st hour that time and spite dare bring To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland ! Let heav'n kiss earth ! Now let not Nature's hand Keep the wild flood confined ! let order die ! And let this world no longer be a stage To feed contention in* a lingering act; But let one spirit of the first-born Cam Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set On bloody courses, the rude scene may end, And darkness be the burier of the dead ! Tra. This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord. L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour. Mor. The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health ; the which, if you give o'er To stormy passion, must perforce decay.

49* SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. CACT i. You cast the event of war, my noble lord, And suram'd the account of chance, before you said, Let us make head. It was your presurmise That in the dole o' olows your son might drop: You knew he walk'd o'er perils on an edge, More likely to fall in than to get o'er ; You were advis'd his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars ; and that his forward spirit Would lift him where most trade of danger rang'd : Yet did you say, — Go forth ; and none of this Though strongly apprehended, could restrain The stiff-borne action. What hath, then, befallen, Or what hath this bold enterprise brought forth, More than that being which was like to be? L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas, That if we wrought out life, 'twas ten to one : And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd ; And since we are o'erset, venture again. Come, we will all put forth, body and goods. Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my most noble lord, I hear for certain, and do speak the truth, — The gentle Archbishop of York is up With well-appointed powers : he is a man Who with a double surety binds his followers. My lord your son had only but the corpse, But shadows and the shows of men, to fight : For that same word, rebellion, did divide The action of their bodies from their souls ; And they did fight with queasiness, constraint. As men drink potions; that their weapons only Seera'd on our side, but, for their spirits and souls, This word, rebellion, it had froze them up, As fish are in a pond. But now the archbishop Turns insurrection to religion : Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts, He 's follow'd both with body and with mind ; And doth enlarge his rising with the blood Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones ; Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause ; Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land, Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke ; And more and less do flock - follow him. Worth. I knew of this before ; but, to speak truth, This present grief had wip'd it from my mind Go in with me ; and counsel every man The aptest way for safety and revenge • Get posts and letters, and make mends with speed,— Never so few, and never yet more need. \Exeunt. SCENE II. — LONDON. A Street. Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and btickler. Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water? Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water ; but, for the party that owed it, he might have more diseases than he knew of. Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me : the brain of this foolish-compounded clay, man, is not able to invent anything that tends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me : I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one. If the prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judgment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never manned with an agate till now : but I will set you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back again to your master, for a jewel, — the Juvenal, the prince your master, whose chin is not yet fledged. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one on his cheek ; and yet he will not stick to say his face is a face-royal : God may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amiss yet: he may keep it still as a face-royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it ; and yet he will be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. — What said Master Dumbleton about the satin for my short cloak and my slops? Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph : he would not take his bond and yours; he liked not the security. Fal. Let him be damned, like the glutton ! may his tongue be hotter ! — A whoreson Achi» tophel ! a rascally yea-forsooth knave ! to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security ! — The whoreson smooth -pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles ; and if a man is thorough with them in honest taking up, then they must stand upon security. I hau as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I looked he should have sent me two*

.SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 499 and-twenty yards of satin, as 1 am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, he may sleep in security ; for he hath the horn of abundance, and the lightness of his wife shines through it : and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lantern to light him. — Where's Bardolph? Page. He 's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse. FaL I bought him in Paul's, and he '11 buy me a horse in Smithfield: an I could get me but a wife, in the stews, I were manned, horsed, and wived. Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the prince for striking him about Bardolph. Fal. Wait close ; I will not see him. Enter the Lord Chief-Justice and an Attendant Ch. Just. What's he that goes there? Atten. Falstaff, an 't please your lordship. Ch. Just. Pie that was in question for the robbery? Atten. He, my lord : but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury ; and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster. Ch.Just. What, to York? Call him back again. Atten. Sir John Falstaff! Fal. Boy, tell him, I am deaf. [deaf. Page. Yon must speak louder; my master is Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. — Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him. Atten. Sir John, — Fal. What ! a young knave, and begging ! Is there not wars? is there not employment ? Doth not the king lack subjects ? Do not the rebels need soldiers ? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it. Atten. You mistake me, sir. Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man ? setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lied in my throat if I had said so. Atten. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside ; and give me leave to tell you, you lie in your throat, if you say I am any other than an honest man. Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me ! If thou gettest any leave of me, hang me } if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter, hence! avaunt! Atten. Sir, my lord would speak with you. Ch. Jzisi, Sir John Falstaff, a word with you. Fal. My good lord ! — God give your lordship good time 01 day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad: I heard say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time ; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverend care of your health. Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury. Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales. Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty : — you would not come when I sent for you. Fal.^ And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy. Ch. Just. Well, God mend him ! I pray you let me speak with you. Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling. Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is. Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study, and perturbation of the brain: I have read the cause of his effects in Galen j it is a kind of deafness. Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease ; for you hear not what I say to you. Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an 't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled vvithaL Ch.Jusf. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears ; and I care not if I do become your physician. Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty ; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or, indeed, a scruple itself. Ch.Just. I sent for you when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me. Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come. Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy. Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less. Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

 Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince. Fal. The young prince hath misled me : I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my Ik. fust. Well, I am loth to gall a new-healed wound : your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill : you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'erposting that action. Fal. My lord,— Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so : wake not a sleeping wolf. Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox. Ch.Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out. Fal. A wassail candle, my lord ; all tallow : if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth. Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity. Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy. Ch. fust. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. Fal. Not so, my lord ; your ill angel is light ; but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go: — I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermonger times that true valour is turned bear-herd : pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too. Ch. fust. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all tue characters of age ? Have you not a moist eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John ! Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice, — I have lost it with hollaing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not ; the truth is, I am only old in judgment and understanding ; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, — he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it; and the young lion repents ; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack. Ch. fust. Well, God send the prince a better companion ! Fal. God send the companion a better prince ! I cannot rid my hands of him. Ch.fust. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry: I hear you are going with Lord j ohn of Lancaster against the archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland. Fal. Yea ; I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you, pray, ail you that kiss my Lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day ; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily : if it be a hot day, and I brandish anything but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it-. well, I cannot last ever : but it was alway yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If you will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is : I were better to be eaten to death with rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion. Ch,fust. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition ! Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth? Ch. fust. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well : commend me to my cousin Westmoreland. {Exeunt Chief-Justice and Attendant. Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beetle. — A man can no more separate age and covetousness than he can part young limbs and lechery : but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other ; and so both the diseases prevent my curses. — Boy! — Page. Sir? Fal. What money is in my purse? Page. Seven groats and two pence. Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse : borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. — Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster \ this to the prince ; this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I

About it ; you know where to find me. \Erit Page.] A pox of this gout ! or, a gout of this pox ! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. It is no matter if I do halt ; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything. I will turn diseases to commodity. {Exit. SCENE III.— YORK. A Room in the ARCHBISHOP'S Palace. Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the LORDS HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH. Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and know our means; And, my most noble friends, I pray you all Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes : — And first, lord marshal, what say you to it? Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms ; But gladly would be better satisfied How, in our means, we should advance ourselves To look with forehead bold and big enough Upon the power and puissance of the king. Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice ; And our supplies live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosom bums With an incensed fire of injuries. L. Bard. The question, then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus; — Whether our present five-and-twenty thousand May hold up head without Northumberland? Hast. With him, we may. L. Bard. Ay, marry, there Js the point : But if without him we be thought too feeble, My judgment is, we should not step too far Till we had his assistance by the hand ; For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surmise Of aids uncertain, should not be admitted. Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for, indeed, It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury. L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope, Eating the air on promise of supply, Flattering himself with project of a power Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts : And so, with great imagination, Proper to madmen, led his powers to death, And, winking, leap'd into destruction. [hurt Hast. But, by your leavˆ, it never yet did To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope. L. Bard. Yes, in this present quality of war; — Indeed, the instant action, — a cause on foot, — Lives so in hope, as in an early spnng We see the appearing buds; which, to prove fruit, Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build, We first survey the plot, then draw the model ; And when we see the figure of the houcc. Then must we rate the cost of the erection ; Which, if we find outweighs ability, What do we then but draw anew the model In fewer offices, or at least desist [work, — To build at all? Much more, in this great Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down And set another up, — should we survey The plot of situation and the model, Consent upon a sure foundation, Question surveyors, know our own estate, How able such a work to undergo, To weigh against his opposite ; or else, We fortify in paper and in figures, Using the names of men instead of men : Like one that draws the model of a house Beyond his power to build it ; who, half through. Gives o'er, and leaves his part-created cost A naked subject to the weeping clouds, And waste for churlish winter's tyranny. Hast. Grant that our hopes, — yet likely of fair birth, — Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd The utmost man of expectation ; I think we are a body strong enough, Even as we are, to equal with the king. L. Bard. What, is the king but five-andtwenty thousand? Hast. To us no more ; nay, not so much, Lord Bardolph; For his divisions, as the times do brawl, Are in three heads: one power against the French, And one against Glendower ; perforce a third Must take up us : so is the unfirm king In three divided ; and his coffers sound With hollow poverty and emptiness. Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together, And come against us in rail puissance, Need not be dreaded. Hast. If he should do so, He leaves his back unarm'd, the French and Welsh Baying him at the heels: never fear that L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces hither? Pand ; Hast. 502 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT H. But who is substituted 'gainst the French, I have no certain notice. Arch. Let us on, And publish the occasion of our arms. The commonwealth is sick of their own choice ; Their over-greedy love hath surfeited : An habitation giddy and unsure Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart. O thou fond many ! with what loud applause Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke, Before he was what thou wouldst have him be ! And being now trimm'd in thine own desires, Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up. So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard ; And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up, And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? [die, They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him Are now become enamour'd on his grave: Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head, When through proud London he came sighing on After the admired heels of Bolingbroke, Cry'st now, O earth yield us that king again > And take thou this ! O thoughts of men accurst ! Past, and to come, seems best ; things present, worst. [set on? Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers, and Hast. We are time's subjects, and time bids be gone. [Exeunt. ACT II. SCENE I.— LONDON. A Street. Enter Hostess, FANG and his Boy with her, and SNARE following. Host. Master Fang, have you entered the action ? Fang. It is entered. Host. Where is your yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? will he stand to it? Fang. Sirrah, where 's Snare? Host. O Lord, ay ! good Master Snare. Snare. Here, here. Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff. Host. Yea, good Master Snare ; I have entered him and all. Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab. Host. Alas the day ! take heed of him ; he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly : in good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out : he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither mar., woman, nor child. Fang. If I can close with him, I care not fo: his thrust. Host. No, nor I neither : I '11 be at your elbow. Fang. An I but fist him once ; an he come but within my vice, — Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he is an infinitive thing upon my score : — good Master Fang, hold him sure; — good Master Snare, let him not 'scape. He comes continuantly to Pie-corner, — saving your manhoods, — to buy a saddle ; and he is indited to dinner to the Lubber's Head in Lumbert Street, to Master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear : and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fubbed off, and fubbed off, and fubbed off, from this daj to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing ; unless a woman should be made an ass and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes ; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare ; do me, do me, do me your offices. Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, Page, and BARDOLPH. Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter? Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly. Fal. Away, varlets !— Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head; throw the quean in the channel. Host. Throw me in the channel ! I '11 throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou ? wilt thou ? thou bastardly rogue ! — Murder, murder ! O thou honeysuckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? O thou honey- seed rogue ! thou art a honey-seed ; a inan-queller and a womanqueller. Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph. Fang- A rescue ! a rescue ! Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two. — Thou. wo 't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't thou? do, do, thou rogue ! do, thou hemp-seed ! Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian ! I '11 tickle your catastrophe. Enter the Lord Chief-Justice, attended. Ch. Jtist. What is the matter? keep the peace here, hoi

SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 503 Host. Good my lord, be good to me ! I beseech you, stand to me ! Ch. fast. How now, Sir John ! what, are you brawling here? [business? Doth this become your place, your time, and You should have been well on your way to York. — [on him? Stand from him, fellow: wherefore hang'st thou Host. O my most worshipful lord, an 't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit. Ch. Just. For what sum ? Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, — all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home ; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: — but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare. Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up. Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie ! What man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not ashamed to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own ? Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee? Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a seacoal fire, upon Wednesday in Whitsun-week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, — thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not good wife Keech, the butcher's wife, come in then, and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar; telling us she had a good dish of prawns ; whereby thou didst desire to eat some ; whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone down stairs, desire me to be no more so familiarity with such poor people ; saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy bookoath : deny it, if thou canst ! Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says, up and down the town, that her eldest son is like you : she hath been in good case, and, the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them. Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a

confident brow, ncr the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration : you have, as it appears to me, practised upon the easy yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person. Host. Yea, in troth, my lord. Ch. Just. Pr'ythee, peace.— Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done with her: the one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance. Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness : if a man will make court'sy, and say nothing, he is virtuous: — no, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the king's affairs. Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong : but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman. Fal. Come hither, hostess. \Takes her aside. Enter GOWER. Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, — what news? Gow. The king, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales Are near at hand : the rest this paper tells. [Gives a Utter. Fal. As I am a gentleman, — Host. Nay, you said so before. Fal. As I am a gentleman : — come, no more words of it. Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining- chambers. Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking: and for thy walls, — a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangings and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an it were not for thy humours, there is not a better wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw thy action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me ; dost not know me? come, come, I know thou wast set on to this. Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles: i' faith, I am loth to pawn my plate, so God save me, la. Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift: you '11 be a fool still. Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You"ll pay me all together?

No more words ; let 's have her. [##«««/ HOST., BARD., Officers, Ch. Just. I have heard better news. Fal. What 's the news, my good lord? Ch.Just. Where lay the king last night? GOTO. At Basingstoke, my lord. Fal. I hope, my lord, all 's well : what 's the news, my lord? Ch. Just. Come all his forces back? Gow. No ; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse, Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster, Against Northumberland and the archbishop. Fal. Comes the king back from Wales, my noble lord? [sently: Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me preCome, go along with me, good master Gower. Fal. My lord ! Ch. Just. What 's the matter? Fal. Master Gower, shall 1 entreat you with me to dinner? Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here, —I thank you, good Sir John. Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go. Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower? Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John? FaL Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. — This is the right fencing grace, my lord ; tap for tap, and so part fair. Ch. Just. Now, the Lord lighten thee ! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — The same. Another Street. Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS. P. Hen. Before God, I am exceeding weary. Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood. P. Hen. Faith, it does me; though it discolours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer? Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studiec1 as to remember so weak a composition. P. Hen. Belike, then, my appetite was not pre iseivgot; for, by my troth, I do now reuaembe'r the poor creature, small beer. But, 'indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name? or to know thy face to-morrow? or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast ; viz. , these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones? or to bear the inventory of thy shirts, as, one for superfluity, and one other for use? — but that the tennis court-keeper knows better than I ; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee

when thou keepest not racket there ; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy lowcountries have made a shift to eat up thy holland: and God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom : but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened. Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly ! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is? P. Hen. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins ? Poins. Yes, faith ; and let it be an excellent good thing. P. Hen. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine. Poins. Go to ; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell. P. Hen. Marry, I tell thee,— it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick : albeit I could tell to thee, — as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend, — I could be sad and sad indeed too. Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject. P. Hen. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book as thou and Palstaff for obduracy and persistency : let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick : and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow. Poins. The reason ? P. Hen. What wouldst thou think of me if I should weep? Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite. P. Hen. It would be every man's thought ; arid thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks : never a man's thought in the world keeps the road- way better taan thine : every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so? Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd, and so much engrafted to Falstaff. P. Hen. And to thee.

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 505 Poms. By this light, I am well spoke on ; I can hear it with mine own ears : the worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands ; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. — By the mass, here comes Bardolph. P. Hen. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: he had him from me Christian ; and look, if the fat villain have not transformed him ape. Enter BARDOLPH and Page. Bard. God save your grace ! P. Hen. And yours, most noble Bardolph ! Bard. Come, you virtuous ass [to the Page], you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-atarms are you become? Is it such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead? Page. He called me even now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window : at last I spied his eyes ; and methought he had made two holes in the alewife's new red petticoat, and so peeped through. P. Hen. Hath not the boy profited? Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away ! Page. Away, you rascally Althaea's dream, away! P. Hen. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy? Page. Marry, my lord, Althaea dreamed she was delivered of a fire-brand ; and therefore I call him her dream. P. Hen. A crown's worth of good interpretation:— there it is, boy. [Gives him money. Poins. O that this good blossom could be kept from cankers ! — Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee. Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong. P. Hen. And how doth thy master, Bardolph? Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town; there's a letter for you. Poms. Delivered with good respect. — And how doth the martlemas, your master? Bard. In bodily health, sir. Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not. P. Hen. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog : and he holds his place ; for look you how he writes. Poins. [Reads.] John Falstaff, knight, — every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself: even like those that are kin to the king; for they neve* prick their finger but they say, There is some of the kings blood spilt. — How comes that? says he, that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer i < 5 as ready as a borrower's cap, / am the king's poor cousin, sir. P. Hen. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter : — Poins. [Reads,] Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting. — Why, this is a certificate. P. Hen. Peace! Poins. [Reads.] I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity: — sure he means brevity in breath, short-winded. — / commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins ; for he misuses thy favours so much that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest, and so, farewell. Thine, by yea and no, (which is as much as to say, as thou usest himt) JACK FALSTAFF, with my familiars; JOHN, with my brothers and sisters; and SIR JOHN with all Europe. My lord, I will steep this letter in sack, and make him eat it. P. Hen. That 's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must I marry your sister? Poins. God send the wench have no worse fortune ! but I never said so. P. Hen. Well, thus we play the fools with the time ; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. — Is your master here in London? Bard. Yes, my lord. P. Hen. Where sups he? doth the old boar feed in the old frank? Bard. At the old place, my lord, — in Eastcheap. P. Hen. What company? Page. Ephesians, my lord,— of the old church. P. Hen. Sup any women with him ? Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet. P. Hen. What pagan may that be? Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's. P. Hen. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. — Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper? Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you. P. Hen. Sirrah, you boy, — and Bardolph, — no word to your master that I am yet come to town: there 's for your silence.

SCENE IV.) SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 507 once set a dish of apple-Johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns ; and, putting off his hat, said, / "will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights. It angered him to the heart : but he hath forgot that. 1 Draw. Why, then, cover, and set them down: and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise : Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Despatch : — the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight. 2 Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons ; and Sir John must not know of it : Bardolph hath brought word. 1 Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis : it will be an excellent stratagem. 2 Draw. I '11 see if I can find out Sneak. [Exit. Enter Hostess and DOLL TEARSHEET. Host. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you Ure in an excellent good temperality : your pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose : but, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, What's this? — How do you now? Doll. Better than I was : — hem. Host. Why, that 's well said ; a good heart 's Worth gold. — Look, here comes Sir John. Enter FALSTAFF singing. o o Fal. When Arthur first in court — Empty the jorden. {Exit I Drawer.] — And was a worthy king. — How now, Mistress Doll! Host. Sick of a calm ; yea, good sooth. Fal. So is all her sect ; an they be once in a calm, they are sick. Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me? Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll. Doll. I make them ! gluttony and diseases make them ; I make them not. Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll : we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you ; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that. Doll. Yea, joy, — our chains and our jewels. Fal. Your brooches, pearls, and ouches: — for to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know : to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely ; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely, — Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, yourself! Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion ; you two never meet but you fall to some discord: you are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts ; yoi1 cannot one bear with another's

confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you \to DOLL] : you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel. Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? there 's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him ; you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. — Come, I '11 be friends with thee, Jack : thou art going to the wars ; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. Re-enter First Drawer. I Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol is below, and would speak with you. Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal ! let him not come hither : it is the foul-mouth'dst rogue in England. Host. If he swagger, let him not come here : no, by my faith; I must live amongst my neighbours ; I '11 no swaggerers : I am in good name and fame with the very best: — shut the door ; — there comes no swaggerers here : I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now: — shut the door, I pray you. Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess? — Host. Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here. Fal. Dost thou hear? it is mine ancient. Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, the other day ; and, as he said to me, — it wis no longer ago than Wednesday last, — Neighoour Quickly, says he ; — Master Dumb, our minister, was by then ; — Neighbour Quickly, says he, receive those that are civil; for, saith he, you are in an illname; — now he said so, I can tell whereupon ; for, says \vz,you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive: re ei e, says he, no swaggering companions.— There comes none here; — you would bless you to hear what he said : — no, I '11 no swaggerers. Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith ; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound : he will not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. — Call him up, drawer. [Exit I Drawer. Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater : but I do not love swaggering; by mv troth, I am the

Do I ? yea, in very truth, do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf : I cannot abide swaggerers. Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and PAGE. Pist. God save you, Sir John ! Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack : do you discharge upon mine hostess. Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets. 'Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir ; you shall hardly offend her. Host. Come, I '11 drink no proofs nor no bullets : I '11 drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I. Pkt. Then to you, Mrs. Dorothy; I will charge you. Doll. Charge me ! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What I you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate ! Away, you mouldy rogue, away ! I am meat for your master. Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy. Doll. Away, you cut-purse rascal ! you filthy bung, away ! by this wine, I '11 thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal ! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you ! — Since when, I pray you, sir? — God s light, with two points on your shoulder? much ! Pist. I will murder your ruff for this. Fal. No more, Pistol ; I would not have you go off here : discharge yourself of our company, Pistol. Host. No. good Captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain. Doll. Captain! thou abominable damned cheater, art thou not ashamed to be called captain? If captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earned them. You a captain! you slave, for what? for tearing a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? — He a captain ! hang him, rogue ! He lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word as odious as the word occupy ; which was an excellent good word before it was ill -sorted : therefore captains had need look to it. Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient. Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll. Pist. Not I : I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph,— I could tear her : — I '11 be revenged on her. Page. Pray thee, go down. Pist. I '11 see her damned first ; — to Pluto's damned lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down, faitors ! Have we not Hiren here? Host. Good

Captain Peesel, be quiet ; it is very late, i' faith : I beseek you now, aggravate your choler. Pist. These be good humours, indeed ! Shall packhorses, And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia, Which cannot go but thirty miles a-day, Compare with Caesars, and with Cannibals, And Trojan Greeks? nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus ; and let the welkin roar. Shall we fall foul for toys? Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words. Bard. Be gone, good ancient : this will grow to a brawl anon. Pist. Die men like dogs ! give crowns like pins ! Have we not Hiren here? Host. O' my word, captain; there's none such here. What the good-year ! do you think I would deny her? for Godsake, be quiet. Pist. Then feed and be fat, my fair Calipolis. Come, give me some sack. Se fortuna mi tormenta, lo sperare mi con > tenta. — Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fire: Give me some sack : — and, sweetheart, lie thou there. [Laying down his sword. Come we to full points here ; and are et-ceteras nothing? Fal. Pistol, I would, be quiet. Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neif: what! we have seen the seven stars. Doll. Thrust him downstairs; I cannot endure such a fustian rascal. Pist. Thrust him down stairs ! know we not Galloway nags? Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shovegroat shilling : nay, an he do nothing but speak nothing, he shall be nothing here. Bard. Come, get you down stairs. Pist. What! shall we have incision? shall we imbrue ? — \Snatching up his sword. Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days ! I '11 forswear keeping house afore I '11 be in these tirrits and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. — Alas, alas ! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. [Exeunt PIST. and BARD. Doll. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet ; the rascal is gone. — Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you ! Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? methought he made a shrewd thrust at your belly. Re-enter BARDOLPH. Fal. Have you turned him out of doors? Bard. Yes, sir. The rascal 's drunk : you have hurt him, sir, in the shoulder. Fal. A rascal ! to brave me ! Doll. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you ! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweatest ! come, let me wipe thy face ; — come on, you whoreson chops : — ah, rogue ! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the nine worthies : ah, villain ! Fal. A rascally slave ! I will toss the rogue in a blanket. Doll. Do, if thou darest for thy heart: if thou dost, I '11 canvass thee between a pair of sheets. Enter Musicians. Page. The music is come, sir. Fal. Let them play; — play, sirs. — Sit on my knee, Doll. — A rascal-bragging slave ! the rogue fled from me like quicksilver. Doll. I' faith, and thou followedst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven? Enter, behind, PRINCE HENRY and POINS disguised as Drawers. Fal. Peace, good Doll ! do not speak like a Death's-head; do not bid me remember mine end. Doll. Sirrah, what humour is the prince of? Fal. A good shallow young fellow : he would have made a good pantler; he would have chipped bread well. Doll. They say Poins has a good wit. Fal. He a good wit? hang him, baboon! his wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard ; there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet. Doll. Why does the prince love him so, then? Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness ; and he plays at quoits well ; and eats conger and fennel; and drinks off candles' ends for flapdragons ; and rides the wild mare with the boys; and jumps upon joint-stools ; and swears with a good grace; and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg ; and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties he has,

that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him : for the prince himself is such another ; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois. P. Hen. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off? Poins. Let us beat him before his whore. P. Hen. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot. Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance? Fal. Kiss me, Doll. P. Hen. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanac to that? Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lisping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper. Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses. Doll. By ruy troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart. Fal. I am old, I am old. Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all. Fal. What stuff wilt thou have a kirtle of? I shall receive money on Thursday; thou shall have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come : it grows late ; we will to bed. Thou wilt forget me when I am gone. Doll. By my troth, thou wilt set me a weeping, an thou sayest so : prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return : — well, hearken the end. Fal. Some sack, Francis. P. Hen., Poins. Anon, anon, sir. [Advancing. Fal. Ha ! a bastard son of the king's?— And art not thou Poins, his brother? P. Hen. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead ! Fal. A better than thou : I am a gentleman ; thou art a drawer. P. Hen. Very true, sir, and I come to draw you out by the ears. Host. O, the Lord preserve thy good grace ! by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine ! O Jesu, are you come from Wales? Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of

My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge, and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat. P. Hen. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil, gentlewoman! Host. God's blessing on your good heart ! and so she is, by my troth. Fal. Didst thou hear me? P. Hen. Yes ; and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill : you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience. Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing. P. Hen. I shall drive you, then, to confess the wilful abuse, and then I know how to handle you. Fal. No abuse, Hal, on mine honour; no abuse. P. Hen. Not ! to dispraise me, and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what! Fal. No abuse, Hal. Poins. No abuse ! Fal. No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might notfall in love with him; — in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal ; — none, Ned, none; — no, faith, boys, none. P. Hen. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? is she of the wicked? is thine hostess here of the wicked? or is thy boy of the wicked ? or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked ? Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer. Fal. The fiend hath pricked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privykitchen, where he doth nothing but roast maltworms. For the boy, — there is a good angel about him ; but the devil outbids him too. P. Hen. For the women? Fal. For one of them, — she is in hell already, and burns, poor soul ! For the other, — I owe her money; and whether she be damned for that, I know not. Host. No, I warrant you. Fal. No, I think thou art not ; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law ; for the which I think thou wilt howl. Host. All victuallers do so : what 's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent? P. Hen. You, gentlewoman, — Doll. What says your grace? Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Knocking within. Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Fr?ncis. Enter PETO. P. Hen. Peto, how now ! what news? Pet. The king your father is at Westminster; And there are twenty weak and wearied posts Come from the north : and as I came along I met and overtook a dozen captains, Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff. P. Hen. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame, So idly to profane the precious time ; When tempest of commotion, like the south, Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt, And drop upon our bare unarmed heads. Give me my sword and cloak. — Falstaff, goodnight. [Exeunt P. HEN., POINS, PETO, and BARD. Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence, and leave it unpicked. [Knocking within.'] More knocking at the door ! Re-enter BARDOLPH. How now ! what 's the matter? Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently; a dozen captains stay at door for you, Fal. Pay the musicians, sirrah [to the Page]. — Farewell, hostess; — farewell, Doll. — You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after : the undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches : if I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go. Doll. I cannot speak ; — if my heart be not ready to burst, — well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself. Fal. Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH. Host. Well, fare thee well: I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascodtime ; but an honester and truer-hearted man, — well, fare thee well. Bard. [Within.'} Mistress Tearsheet,— Host. What 's the matter? Bard. [Within.'} Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. Host. O, run, Doll, run; run, good DolL [Exeunt. ACT IIL SCENE I — WESTMINSTER. A Room IK the Palace. Enter KING HENRY in his nightgown, with a Page. K. Hen. Go call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick ; [letters, But, ere they come, bid them o'er- read these And well consider of them : make good speed. [Exit Page. How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep! — O sleep, O gentle sleep, Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down, And steep my senses in forgetfulness? Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, [slumber, And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under high canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sounds of sweetest melody? O thou dull god, why liˆst thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch A watch-case or a common 'larum bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains In cradle of the rude imperious surge, And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the ruffian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them With de?.fening clamour in the slippery shrouds, That, with the hurly, death itself awakes? Canst thou, O partial sleep, give thy repose To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude ; And in the calmest and most stillest night, With all appliances and means to boot, Deny it to a king? Then, happy low, lie down ! Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. Enter WARWICK and SURREY. War. Many good-morrows to your majesty ! K. Hen. Is it good-morrow, lords? War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past. K. Hen. Why, then, good-morrow to you all, my lords. Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you? War. We have, my liege. [kingdom K. Hen. 512 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT in. They say the bishop and Northumberland Are fifty thousand strong. War. It cannot be, my lord ; Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your grace To go to bed. Upon my life, my lord, The powers that you already have sent forth Shall bring this prize in very easily. To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd A certain instance that Glendower is dead. Your majesty hath been this fortnight ill; And these unseason'd hours perforce must add Unto your sickness. K. Hen. I will take your counsel : And, were these inward wars once out of hand, We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land. {Exeunt. SCENE II. — Court before JUSTICE SHALLOW'S House in Gloucestershire. Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE, meeting; MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULLCALF, and Servants, behind. Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir ; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir : an early stirrer, by the rood. And how doth my good cousin Silence? SiL Good-morrow, good cousin Shallow. Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow ? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen? Sil. Alas, a black ousel, cousin Shallow! Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar : he is at Oxford still, is he not? Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost. Shal. He must, then, to the inns of court shortly : I was once of Clement's-inn ; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet. Sil. You were called lusty Shallow then, cousin. Shal. By the mass, I was called anything; and I would have done anything indeed, too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Bare, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele a Cotswold man, — you had not four such swingebucklers in all the inns of court again : and, I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers? Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I saw him break Skogan s head at the court gate, when he was a crack not thus high : and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's-inn. Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that I have spent ! and to see how many of mine old

acquaintance are dead! SiL We shall all follow, cousin. Shal. Certain, 'tis certain ; very sure, very sure : death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all ; all shall die. — How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair? Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there. Shal. Death is certain, — Is old Double of your town living yet? Sil. Dead, sir. Shal. Jesu, Jesu, dead! — he drew a good bow ; and dead ! — he shot a fine shoot : — John of Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead ! — he would have clapp'd in the clout at twelve score, and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. — How a score of ewes now? Sil. Thereafter as they be : a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds. Shal. And is old Double dead? Sil. Here come twc of Sir John Falstaff C men, as I think. Enter BARDOLPH and one with him. Bard. Good-morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow? Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir, a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace : what is your good pleasure with me? Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff, — a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader. Shal. He greets me well, sir; I knew him a good backsword man: how doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth? Bard. Sir, pardon ; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife. Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir ; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated ! — it is good ; yea, indeed, is it : good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated ! — it comes from accommodo: very good ; a good phrase. Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase ; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command. Accommodated ; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated j or, when a man is, being, whereby SCEWE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 513 he may be thought to be accommodated ; which is an excellent thing. ShaL It is very just. — Look, here comes good Sir John. Enter FALSTAFF. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand : by my troth, you look well and bear your years very well : welcome, good Sir John. Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow : — Master Surecard, as I think ? Shal. No, Sir John, it is my cousin Siience, in commission with me. Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace. Sil. Your good worship is welcome. Fal. Fie! this is hot weather. — Gentlemen, have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men? Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit? Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you. Shal. Where's the roll? where 's the roll? where 's the roll ? — let me see, let me see. So, Bo, so, so: — yea, marry, sir: — Ralph Mouldy! —let them appear as I call ; let them do so, let them do so. — Let me see; where is Mouldy? Moul. Here, an 't please you. ˆ Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good limbed fellow; young, strong, and of good friends. Fal. Is thy name Mouldy? Moul. Yea, an 't please you. Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used. Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith ! filings that are mouldy lack use : very singular good ! — in faith, well said, Sir John ; very well said. Fal. Prick him. \To SHALLOW. Moul. I was pricked well enough before, an vou could have let me alone : my old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery: you need not to have pricked me ; there are other men fitter to go out than I. Fal. Go to ; peace, Mouldy ; you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent. Moul. Spent! Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside: know you where you are? — For the other, Sir John : — let me see ; — Simon Shadow ! Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit nnder: he's like to be a cold soldier. Shal. Where's Shadow? Shad. Here, sir. Fal-. Shadow, whose son art thou? Shad. My mother's son, sir. Fal, Thy mother's son ! like enough ; and thy father's shadow : so the son of the female is the shadow of the male : it is often so, indeed ; but not much of the father's substance. Shal. Do you like him, Sir John? Fal. Shadow will serve for summer, — prick him ; for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book. Shal. Thomas Wart ! Fal. Where 'she? Wart. Here, sir. Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir. Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart. Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John? Fal. It were superfluous ; for his apparel is built upon his back, and the whole frame stands upon pins : prick him no more. Shal. Ha, ha, ha! — you can do it, sir; you can do it: I commend you well. — Francis Feeble 1 Fee. Here, sir. Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble? Fee. A woman's tailor, sir. Shal. Shall I prick him, sir? Fal. You may : but if he had been a man's tailor, he would have pricked you. — Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat ? Fee. I will do my good will, sir ; you can have no more. Fal* Well said, good woman's tailor ! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. — Prick the woman's tailor well, Master Shallow ; deep, Master Shallow. Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir. Fal. ˆ I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him, and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier, that is the leader of so many thousands: let that suffice, most forcible Feeble. Fee. It shall suffice, sir. Fal. I am bound to thee, Reverend Feeble. —Who is next? Shal. Peter Bullcalf of the green ! Fal. Yea, marry, let us see Bullcalf. Bull. Here, sir. Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow!— Come, prick me, Bullcalf, till he roar again. Bull. O lord ! good my lord captain, — Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art pricked? Bull. O lord, sir ! I am a diseased man. Fal. What disease hast thou? Bull. A whoreson cold, sir, — a cough, sir, — which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day, sir. Fal. Come, thou shalt go co the wars in a

Here is two more called than your number; you must have but four here, sir: — and so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner. Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow. Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's Fields? Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, no more of that. Shal. Ha, it was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive? Fal. She lives, Master Shallow. Shal. She never could away with me. Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow. Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well? Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow. Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old ; certain she 's old ; and had Robin Nightwork, by old Nightwork, before I came to Clement's-inn. Sil. That 's fifty -five year ago. Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seeii that that this knight and I have seen J — Ha, Sir John, said I well? Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow. Shal. That we have, that we have, that we nave ; in faith, Sir John, we have : our watchword was, Hem, boys ! — Come, let 's to dinner ; come, let's to dinner : — O, the days that we have seen! — come, come. [Exeuni FAL., SHAL., aw^SiL. Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here is four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care ; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends ; else, sir, I did not care for mine own part, so much. Bard. Go to ; stand aside. Moul. And, good master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do anything about her when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself: you shall have forty, si/. Bard. Go to ; stand aside. Fee. By my troth, I care not ; a man can die but once ; we owe God a death : I '11 ne'er bear a base mind : an 't be my destiny, so ; an 't be not, so : no man 's too good to serve his prince ; and, let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next. Bard. Well said ; thou 'rt a good fellow.

Fee. Faith, I '11 bear no base mind. Re-enter FALSTAFF and Justices. Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have? Shal. Four of which you please. Bard. Sir, a word with you : — I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf. Fal. Goto; well. Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have? Fal. Do you choose for me. Shal. Marry, then, — Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow. Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf : — for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service : and for your part, Bullcalf, — grow till you come unto it : I will none of you. Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong : they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best. Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man ! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. — Here 's Wart ; — you see what a ragged appearance it is: he shall charge you and discharge you, with the motion of a pewterer's hammer; come off, and on, swifter than he that gibbetson the brewer's bucket. And this same halffaced fellow, Shadow, — give me this man : he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And, for a retreat, — how swiftly will this Feeble, the woman's tailor, run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. — Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph. Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus. Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So : — very well: — go to: — very good: — exceeding g>od. — O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald shot.— Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou 'rt a good scab : hold, there 's a tester for thee. Shal. He is not his crafts-master, he doth not do it right. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. — God keep you, Master Silence: I will not use many words with you. — Fare you well, gentlemen both : I thank you : I must a dozen mile to-night. — Bardolph, give the soldiers coats. Shal. Sir John, heaven bless you, and prosper your affairs, and send us peace ! as you return, visit my house; let our old acquaintance be renewed : peradventure I will with you to the court. Fal. 'Fore God, I would you would, Master Shallow. Shal. Go to ; I have spoke at a word. Fare you well. [Exeunt SHAL. a«*/SiL. Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. On, Bardolph ; lead the men away. [Exetint BARDOLPH, Recruits, &c.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying ! This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turnbull Street ; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's-inn, like a man made after supper of a cheeze- paring : when he was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife : he was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible: he was the very genius of famine ; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake : he came ever in the rearward of the fashion ; and sung those tunes to the overscutched huswifes that he heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good -nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John of Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him ; and I Ml be sworn he never saw him but once in the Tilt-yard ; and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it, and told John of Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eelskin; the case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court : — and now has he land and beeves. Well, I will be acquainted with him if I return ; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me : if the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason, in the law of nature, but I may snap at him. - Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit. ACT IV. SCENE \.—A Forest in Yorkshire. Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS, and others. Arch. What is this forest call'd ? Hast. Tis Gualtree Forest, an 't shall please your grace. Arch. Here stand, my lords ; and send discoverers forth To know the numbers of our enemies. Hast. We have sent forth already. Arch. 'Tis well done. My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland; Their cold intent, tenour, and substance, thus: — Here doth he wish his person, with such powers As might hold sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; whereupon He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, To Scotland ; and concludes in hearty prayers That your attempts may over-live the hazard And fearful meeting of their opposite. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile, In goodly form comes on the enemy ; And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand. Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out. Let us sway on, and face them in the field. Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here? Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland. Enter WESTMORELAND. West. Health and fair greeting from our general The prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster. Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace, What doth concern your coming. West. Then, my lord, Unto your grace do I in chief address The substance of my speech. If that rebellion Came like itself, in base and abject routs, Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,

 And countenanc'd by boys and beggary,— I say, if damn'd commotion so appear'd, In his true, native, and most proper shape, You, reverend father, and these noble lords, Had not been here, to dress the ugly form Of base and bloody insurrection With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop, — Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd ; Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd ; [tutor'd ; Whose learning and good letters peace hath Whose white investments figure innocence, The dove and very blessed spirit of peace, — Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace, Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war ; Turning your books to greaves, your ink to blood, Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine To a loud trumpet and a point of war? Arch. Wherefore do I this? — so the question stands. Briefly to this end : — we are all diseas'd; And with our surfeiting and wanton hours Have brought ourselves into a burning fever, And we must bleed for it : of which disease Our late king, Richard, being infected, died. But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland, I take not on me here as a physician ; Nor do I, as an enemy to peace, Troop in the throngs of military men ; But, rather, show awhile like fearful war, To diet rank minds sick of happiness, And purge the obstructions which begin to stop Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly. I have in equal balance justly weigh'd What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer, And find our griefs heavier than our offences. We see which way the stream of time doth run, And are enforc'd from our most quiet sphere By the rough torrent of occasion ; And have the summary of all our griefs, When time shall serve, to show in articles ; Which long ere this we offer'd to the king, And might by no suit gain our audience : When we are wrong'd, and would unfold our griefs, We are denied access unto his person [wrong. Even by those men that most have done us The dangers of the days but newly gone, — Whose memory is written on the earth With yet appearing blood, — and the examples Of every minute's instance, — present now, — Have put us in these ill-beseeming arms; Not to break peace, or any branch of it, But to establish here a peace indeed, Concurring both in name and quality. West. When ever yet was your appeal denied ; Wherein

have you been galled by the king ; What peer hath been suborn' d to grate on you;— That you should seal this lawless bloody book Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine, And consecrate commotion's bitter edge? Arch, ˆybrothergeneral, the commonwealth, To brother born an household cruelty, I make my quarrel in particular. West. There is no need of any such redress ; Or if there were, it not. belongs to you. [all Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us That feel the bruises of the days before, And suffer the condition of these times To lay a heavy and unequal hand Upon our honours? West. O, my good Lord Mowbray, Construe the times to their necessities, And you shall say indeed, it is the time, And not the king, that doth you injuries. Yet, for your part, it not appears to me, Either from the king or in the present time, That you should have an inch of any ground To build a grief on : were you not restored To all the Duke of Norfolk's signiories, Your noble and right-well-remember'd father's? Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father lost, That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me? The king, that lov'd him, as the state stood then, Was, force perforce, compell'd to banish him, And then that Henry Bolingbroke and he, — Being mounted and both roused in their seats, Their neighing coursers daring of the spur, Their armed staves in charge, their beavers down, Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel, And the loud trumpet blowing them together, — Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, O, when the king did throw his warder down, His own life hung upon the staff he threw ; Then threw he down himself, and all their lives That by indictment and by dint of sword Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke. West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what. The Earl of Hereford was reputed then In England the most valiant gentleman : Who knows on whom fortune would then have smil'd? But if your father had been victor there, He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry : For all the country, in a general voice,

SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 517 Cried hate upon him ; and all their prayers and love Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on, And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king. But this is mere digression from my purpose. — Here come I from our princely general To know your griefs ; to tell you from his grace That he will give you audience ; and wherein It shall appear that your demands are just, You shall enjoy them, — everything set off That might so much as think you enemies. Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer; And it proceeds from policy, not love. West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so ; This offer comes from mercy, not from fear : For, lo ! within a ken, our army lies : Upon mine honour, all too confident To give admittance to a thought of fear. Our battle is more full of names than yours, Our men more perfect in the use of arms, Our armour all as strong, our cause the best ; Then reason will our hearts should be as good : Say you not, then, our offer is compell'd. Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley. West. That argues but the shame of your offence : A rotten case abides no handling. Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission, In very ample virtue of his father, To hear and absolutely to determine Of what conditions we shall stand upon? West. That is intended in the general's name: I muse you make so slight a question. Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule, For this contains our general grievances : Each several article herein redress'd, All members of our cause, both here and hence, That are insinew'd to this action, Acquitted by a true substantial form, And present execution of our wills To us and to our purposes consign'd, — We come within our awful banks again, And knit our powers to the arm of peace. West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords, In sight of both our battles we may meet ; And either end in peace, — which God so frame ! — Or to the place of difference call the swords Which must decide it. Arch. My lord, we will do so. [Exit WESTMORELAND. Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me That no conditions of our peace can stand. Hast. Fear you not that : if we can make our peace Upon such large terms and so absolute As our conditions shall consist upon, Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains. Mowb. Ay, but our valuation shall be such, That every slight and false-derived cause, Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason, Shall to the king taste of this action ; That, were our royal faitr s martyrs in love, We shall be winnow'd wkh so rough a wind That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff, And good from bad find no partition. Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this, — the king is weary Of dainty and such picking grievances : For he hath found, to end one doubt by death Revives two greater in the heirs of life ; And therefore will he wipe his tables clean, And keep no teil-tale to his memory, That may repeat and history his loss To new remembrance : for full well he knows He cannot so precisely weed this land As his misdoubts present occasion : His foes are so enrooted with his friends That, plucking to unfix an enemy, He doth unfasten so and shake a friend. So that this land, like an offensive wife That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes, As he is striking, holds his infant up, And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm That was uprearM to execution. [rods Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his On late offenders, that he now doth lack The very instruments of chastisement : So that his power, like to a fangless lion, May offer, but not hold. Arch. 'Tis very true : And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal, If we do now make our atonement well, Our peace will, like a broken limb united, Grow stronger for the breaking. Mowb. Be it so, Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland. . Re-enter WESTMORELAND. West. The prince is here at hand : pleaseth your lordship To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies? Mowb. Your grace of York, in God's name, then, set forward. Arch. Before, and greet his grace :— my lord, welcome. \Exeunt.

II. — Another part of the Forest. Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the ARCHBISHOP, HASTINGS, and others: from the other side, PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, Officers and Attendants. P. John. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin Mowbray: Good-day to you, gentle lord archbishop ; And so to you, Lord Hastings, — and to all. — My Lord of York, it better show'd with you When that your flock, assembled by the bell, Encircled you to hear with reverence Your exposition on the holy text, Than now to see you here an iron man. Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum, Turning the word to sword, and life to death. That man that sits within a monarch's heart, And ripens in the sunshine of his favour, Would he abuse the countenance of the king, Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroach In shadow of such greatness ! With you, lord bishop, It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken How deep you were within the books of God? To us the speaker in his parliament; To us the imagin'd voice of God himself; The very opener and intelligencer Between the grace, the sanctities of heaven, And our dull workings. O, who shall believe But you misuse the reverence of your place, Employ the countenance and grace of heaven, As a false favourite doth his prince's name, In deeds dishonourable? You have taken up, Under the counterfeited seal of God, The subjects of his substitute, my father, And both against the peace of heaven and him Have here up-swarm'd them. Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster, I am not here against your father's peace ; But as I told my lord of Westmoreland, The time misorder'd doth, in common sense, Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form, To hold our safety up. I sent your grace The parcels and particulars of our grief, — The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court, — Whereon this Hydra son of war is born ; Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd asleep With grant of our most just and right desires, And true obedience, of this madness cur'd, Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty. Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes To the last man. Hast. And though we here fall down, We have supplies to second our attempt : If they miscarry, theirs shall second them ; And so success of mischief shall be born, And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up Whiles England shall have generation. P.

John. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow, To sound the bottom of the after-times. West. Pleaseth your grace to answer them directly, How far -forth you do like their articles. P. John. I like them all, and do allow them well; And swear here, by the honour of my blood, My father's purposes have been mistook ; And some about him have too lavishly Wrested his meaning and authority. — My lord; these griefs shall be with speed redress'd ; [you, Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please Discharge your powers unto their several counties, As we will ours : and here, between the armies, Let 's drink together friendly, and embrace, That all their eyes may bear those tokens home Of our restored love and amity. Arch. I take your princely word for these re dresses. [word: P. John. I give it you, and will maintain my And thereupon I drink unto your grace. Hast. Go, captain [to an Officer], and deliver to the army [part: This news of peace; let them have pay, and I know it will well please them. Hie thee, captain. [Exit Officer. Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland, [what pains West. I pledge your grace ; and, if you knew I have bestow'd to breed this present peace, You would drink freely: but my love to you Shall show itself more openly hereafter. Arch. I do not doubt you. West. I am glad of it.— Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray. Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season ; For I am, on the sudden, something ill. Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry; But heaviness foreruns the good event. West. Therefore be merry, coz ; since sudden sorrow [morrow. Serves to say thus, — Some good thing comes toArch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit. Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true. • [Shouts within. P.John. The word of peace is render'dhark, how they shout !

Mowb. This had been cheerful after victory. Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest ; For then both parties nobly are subdued, And neither party loser. P. John. Go, my lord, And let our army be discharged too. [Exit WESTMORELAND. And, good my lord, so please you let your trains March by us, that we may peruse the men We should have cop'd withal. Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings, And, ere they be dismissed, let them march by. [Exit HASTINGS. P. John, I trust, my lords, we shall lie tonight together. Re-enter WESTMORELAND. Now, cousin, wherefore stands our army still? West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand, Will not go off until they hear you speak. P. John. They know their duties. Re-enter HASTINGS. Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already: Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses [up, East, west, north, south ; or, like a school broke Each hurries toward his home and sportingplace, [the which West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings ; for I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason : — And you, lord archbishop, — and you, Lord Mowbray. — Of capital treason I attach you both. Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable? West. Is your assembly so? Arch. Will you thus break your faith? P. John. I pawn'd thee none : I promis'd you redress of these same grievances Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour, I will perform with a most Christian care. But for you, rebels, — look to taste the due Meet for rebellion and such acts as yours. Most shallowly did you these arms commence, Fondly brought here, and foolishly sent hence. — Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray : God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day. — Some guard these traitors to the block of death, Treason's true bed and yielder-up of breath. [Exeunt. SCENE III.— Anotlier part of the Forest. Alarums: excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILE, meeting. Fal. What 's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray? •' Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Colevile of the dale. Fal. Well, then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale : Colevile shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your dale, — a dale deep enough; so shall you be still Colevile of the dale. Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff? Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death ; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy. Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff; and in that thought yield me. Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine; and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe : my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. — Here comes our general. Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, and others. P. John. The heat is past, follow no farther now: — Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland. [Exit WESTMORELAND. Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while? When everything is ended, then you come : These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back. Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus : I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility ; I have foundered nine-score and odd posts : and here, travel tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? he saw me, and yielded ; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, — I came, saw, and overcame. P. John. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving. Fal. I know not: — here he is, and here I yield him : and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds ; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top of it, Colevile kissing my foot : to the which course

 if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I, in the clear sky of fame, o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble : therefore let me have right, and let desert mount. P. John. Thine 's too heavy to mount. Fal. Let it shine, then. P. John. Thine 's too thick to shine. Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will. P. John. Is thy name Colevile ? Cole. It is, my lord. P. John. A famous rebel art thou, Colevile. Fal. And a famous true subject took him. Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are That led me hither : had they been rul'd by me, You should have won them dearer than you have. Fal. I know not how they sold themselves : but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis ; and I thank thee for thee. Re-enter WESTMORELAND. P. John. Now, have you left pursuit? West. Retreat is made, and execution stay'd. P. John. Send Colevile, with his confederates, To York, to present execution : — [sure. Blunt, lead him hence ; and see you guard him [Exeunt some with COLEVILE. And now despatch we toward the court, my lords. I hear the king, my father, is sore sick : Our news shall go before us to his majesty, — Which, cousin, you shall bear, — to comfort him; And we with sober speed will follow you. Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go [court, Through Glostershire : and, when you come to Stand, my good lord, pray, in your good report. P. John. Fare you well, Falstaff : I, in my condition, Shall better speak of you than you deserve. [Exeunt all but FAL. Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me ; nor a man cannot make him laugh ; — but that 's no marvel ; he drinks no wine. There 's never any of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches : they are generally fools and cowards ; — which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a twofold operation in it. It accends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy vapours which environ it ; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes ; which delivered o'er to the voice, — the tongue, — which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, — the warming of the blood ; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice : but the sherris warms it, and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme : it illumineth the face; which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage : and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil till sack commences it and sets it in act and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and tilled, with excellent endeavour of drinking good and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be, — to forswear thin potations, and to addict themselves to sack. Enter BARDOLPH. How now, Bardolph ! Bard. The army is discharged all, and gone. Fal. Let them go. I'll through Glostershire: and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, Esquire : I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. [Exeunt. A Room in the SCENE IV. — WESTMINSTER. Palace. Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, PRINCE HUMPHREY, WARWICK, and others. K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give sue cessful end To this debate that bleedeth at our doors, We will our youth lead on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Our navy is address'd, our power collected, Our substitutes in absence well invested,

SCENE IV.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 521 And everything lies level to our wish : Only, we want a little personal strength ; And pause us till these rebels, now afoot, Come underneath the yoke of government. War- Both which we doubt not but your majesty Shall soon enjoy. K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloster, Where is the prince your brother? P. Humph. I think he 's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor. K. Hen. And how accompanied? P. Humph. I do not know, my lord. K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him? P. Humph. No, my good lord, he is in presence here. Cla. What would my lord and father? K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence. How chance thou art not with the prince thy brother? [Thomas ; He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thou hast a better place in his affection Than all thy brothers : cherish it, my boy ; And noble offices thou mayst effect Of mediation, after I am dead, Between his greatness and thy other brethren : Therefore omit him not ; blunt not his love, Nor lose the good advantage of his grace By seeming cold or careless of his will ; For he is gracious if he be observ'd : He hath a tear for pity, and a hand Open as day for melting charity: Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he 's flint ; As humorous as winter, and as sudden As flaws congealed in the spring of day. His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd : Chide him for faults, and do it reverently, When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth ; But, being moody, give him line and scope, Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas, And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends, A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in, That the united vessel of their blood, Mingled with venom of suggestion, — As, force perforce, the age will pour it in, — Shall never leak, though it do work as strong As aconitum or rash gunpowder. Cla. I shall observe him with all care and love. K. Hen. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas? [London. Cla. He is not there to-day ; he dines in K. Hen. And how accompanied ? canst thou tell that? Cla. With Poins, and other his continual followers. K. Hen. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds; And he, the noble image of my youth, Is overspread with them : therefore my grief Stretches itself beyond the hour of death : The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape, In forms imaginary, the unguided days And rotten times that you shall look upon When I am sleeping with my ancestors. For when his headstrong riot hath no curb, When rage and hot blood are his counsellors, When means and lavish manners meet together, O, with what wings shall his affections fly Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay ! War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite : The prince but studies his companions Like a strange tongue; wherein, to gain the language, 'Tis needful that the most immodest word Be look'd upon and learn'd ; which once attain'd, Your highness knows, comes to no further use But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms, The prince will, in the perfectness of time, Cast off his followers ; and their memory Shall as a pattern or a measure live, By which his grace must mete the lives of others, Turning past evils to advantages. K. Hen. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb In the dead carrion, — Enter WESTMORELAND. Who 's here? Westmoreland ? West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness Added to that that I am to deliver ! [hand : Prince John, your son, doth kiss your grace's Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings, and all, Are brought to the correction of your law ; There is not now a rebel's sword unsheathed, But peace puts forth her olive everywhere : The manner how this action hath been borne, Here at more leisure may your highness read, With every course in his particular. K. Hen. O, Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird, Which ever in the haunch of winter sings The lifting-up of day. Look, here 's more news. Enter HARCOURT. Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;

522 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT IV. And, when they stand against you, may they fall As those that I am come to tell you of ! The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bardolph, With a great power of English and of Scots, Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown : The manner and true order of the fight This packet, please it you, contains at large. K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick? Will fortune never come with both hands full, But write her fair words still in foulest letters? She either gives a stomach, and no food, — Such are the poor, in health ; or else a feast, And takes away the stomach, — such are therich, That have abundance, and enjoy it not I should rejoice now at this happy news; And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy: — O me ! come near me, now I am much ill. \Swoons. P. Humph. Comfort, your majesty ! Cla. O my royal father ! West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up. War. Be patient, princes ; you do know, these fits Are with his highness very ordinary. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends; Unless some dull and favourable hand Will whisper music to my weary spirit. War. Call for the music in the other room. K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here. Cla. His eye is hollow, and he changes much. War. Less noise, less noise ! Enter PRINCE HENRY. P. Hen. Who saw the Duke of Clarence? Cla. I am here, brother, full of heaviness. P. Hen. How now ! rain within doors, and none abroad ! How doth the king ? P. Humph. Exceeding ill. P. Hen. Heard he the good news yet? Tell it him. P. Humph. He alter'd much upon the hearing it. P. Hen. If he be sick With joy, he will recover without physic. War. Not so much noise, my lords; — sweet prince, speak low ; The king your father is dispos'd to sleep. Cla. Let us withdraw into the other room. War. Will 't please your grace to go along with us? P. Hen. No ; I will sit and watch here by the king. [Exeunt all but P. H EN R Y. Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow, Being so troublesome a bedfellow? O polish'd perturbation ! golden care ! That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide To many a watchful night ! — sleep with it now ! Yet not so sound and hah0 so deeply sweet As he whose brow with homely biggin bound Snores out the watch of night. O majesty ! When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit Like a rich armour worn in heat of day, That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath There lies a downy feather which stirs not : Did he suspire, that light and weightless down Perforce must move. — My gracious lord! my father !— This sleep is sound indeed ; this is a sleep That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd So many English kings. Thy due from me Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood, Which nature, love, and filial tenderness Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously: My due from thee is this imperial crown, Which, as immediate from thy place and blood, Derives itself to me. Lo, here it sits, — [Putting it on his head. Which God shall guard : and put the world's whole strength Into one giant arm, it shall not force This lineal honour from me : this from thee Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. [Exit. K. Hen. SCENE IV.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 5*3 Re-enter WARWICK and the rest. Cla. Doth the king call ? War. What would your majesty ? how fares your grace ? [my lords ? K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone, Cla. We left the prince my brother here, my liege, Who undertook to sit and watch by you. K. Hen. The Prince of Wales ! Where is he? let me see him : He is not here. War. This door is open ; he is gone this way. P. Humph. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd. K. Hen. Where is the crown ? who took it from my pillow ? War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here. K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence :— go, seek him out. Is he so hasty that he doth suppose My sleep my death ? — [hither. Find him, my Lord of Warwick ; chide him [Exit WARWICK. This part of his conjoins with my disease, And helps to end me. — See, sons, what things * > m you are ! How quickly nature falls into revolt When gold becomes her object ! For this the foolish over-careful fathers Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care, Their bones with industry ; For this they have engrossed and pil'd up The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold ; For this they have been thoughtful to invest Their sons with arts and martial exercises : When, like the bee, tolling from every flower The virtuous sweets, [pack'd, Our thighs with wax, our mouths with honey We bring it to the hive : and, like the bees, Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste Yield his engrossments to the ending father. Re-enter WARWICK. Now, where is he that will not stay so long Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me ? War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room, Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks ; With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow, That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood, Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither. K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away the crown ? Re-enter PRINCE HENRY. Lo, where he comes. — Come hither to me, Harry. — Depart the chamber, leave us here alone. [Exeunt CLAR., P. HUMPH., Lords, &c. P. Hen. I never thought to hear you speak again. K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought : I stay too long by thee, I weary thee. Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours Before thy hour be ripe ? O foolish youth ! Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee. Stay but a little ; for my cloud of dignity Is held from falling with so weak a wind That it will quickly drop : my day is dim. Thou hast stolen that which, after some few hours, Were thine without offence ; and at my death Thou hast seal'd up my expectation : Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not, And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it. Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy thoughts, Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart, To stab at half an hour of my life. What 1 canst thou not forbear me half an hour? Then, get thee gone, and dig my grave thyself; And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear, That thou art crowned, not that I am dead. Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head : Only compound me with forgotten dust ; Give that which gave thee life unto the worms. Pluck down my officers, break my decrees ; For now a time is come to mock at form : — Harry the fifth is crown'd : — up, vanity ! Down, royal state! all you sage counsellors, hence ! And to the English court assemble now, From every region, apes of idleness ! [scum : Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink, dance, Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit The oldest sins the newest kind of ways ? Be happy, he will trouble you no more ; England shall double-gild his treble guilt, — England shall give him office, honour, might ; For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog Shall flesh his tooth in every innocent. O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows ! When that my care could not withhold thy riots, What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?

524 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT iv. O, thou wilt be a wilderness again, Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants ! P. Hen. O, pardon me, my liege ! but for my tears, [Kneeling. The moist impediments unto my speech, I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard The course of it so far. There is your crown ; And He that wears the crown immortally Long guard it yours ! If I affect it more Than as your honour and as your renown, Let me no more from this obedience rise, — Which my most inward and true duteous spirit Teacheth, — this prostrate and exterior bending! God witness with me, when I here came in, And found no course of breath within your majesty, How cold it struck my heart ! If I do feign, O, let me in my present wildness die, And never live to show the incredulous world The noble change that I have purposed ! Coming to look on you, thinking you dead, — And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,— I spake unto the crown as having sense, [ing And thus upbraided it : The care on theedependHath fed upon the body of my father ; Therefore, thou, best of gold, art worst of gold: Other, less fine in carat, is more precious, Preserving life in medicine potable ; \nowrfd, But thou, most fine, most honoured, most reHast eat thy bearer up. Thus, my most royal liege, Accusing it, I put it on my head, To try with it, — as with an enemy That had before my face murder'd my father, — The quarrel of a true inheritor. But if it did infect my blood with joy, Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride ; If any rebel or vain spirit of mine Did with the least affection of a welcome Give entertainment to the might of it, Let God for ever keep it from my head, And make me as the poorest vassal is, That doth with awe and terror kneel to it ! K. Hen. O my son, God put it in thy mind to take it hence, That thou mightst win the more thy father's love, Pleading so wisely in excuse of it ! Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed ; And hear, I think, the very latest counsel That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son, By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways I met this crown ; and I myself know well How troublesome it sat upon my head : To thee it shall descend with better quiet, Better opinion, better confirmation ; For all the soil of the achievement goes With me into the earth. It seem'd in me But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand; And I had many living to upbraid My gain of it by their assistances ; Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed, Wounding supposed peace : all these bold fears Thou see'st with peril I have answered ; For all my reign hath been but as a scene Acting that argument : and now my death Changes the mode ; for what in me was purchas'd, Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort ; So thou the garland wear'st successively. Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do, Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green ; And all my friends, which thou must make thy friends, Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en out; By whose fell working I was first advanc'd, And by whose power I well might lodge a fear To be again displac'd : which to avoid, I cut them off; and had a purpose now To lead out many to the Holy Land, Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry, Be it thy course to busy giddy minds [out, With foreign quarrels ; that action, hence borne May waste the memory of the former days. More would I, but my lungs are wasted so, That strength of speech is utterly denied me. How I came by the crown, O God forgive ; And grant it may with thee in true peace live ! P. Hen. My gracious liege, You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me ; Then plain and right must my possession be : Which I with more than with a common pain 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain. K. Hen. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster. Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WARWICK, Lords, and others. P. John. Health, peace and happiness to my royal father ! K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John f But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown From this bare wither'd trunk : upon thy sight, My worldly business makes a period. — Where is my Lord of Warwick ? P. Hen. My Lord of Warwick ! K. Hen. Doth any name particular belong Unto the lodging where I first did swoon ? War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord. K. Hen. Laud be to God ! — even there my life must end.

SCENE IV.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. It hath been prophesied to me many years, I should not die but in Jerusalem ; Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land : — But bear me to that chamber ; there I '11 lie ; In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt. ACT V. SCENE L— GLOUCESTERSHIRE. A Hall in SHALLOW'S House, Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page. Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. — What, Davy, I say! Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert Shallow. Shal, I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve ; you shall not be excused. — Why, Davy ! Enter DAVY. Davy. Here, sir. Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, — let me see, Davy; let me see: — yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. — Sir John, you shall not be excused. Davy. Marry, sir, thus ; — those precepts cannot be served : and, again, sir, — shall we sow the headland with wheat? Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: — are there no young pigeons? Davy. Yes, sir. — Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough -irons. Shal. Let it be cast, and paid. — Sir John, you shall not be excused. Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had : — and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair? Shal. He shall answer iL, — Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook. Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir? Shal. Yea, Davy, I will use him well: a friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy ; for they are arrant knaves, and wi'*'I backbite. Davy. No worse than they are back-bitten, sir ; for they have marvellous foul linen. Shal. Well conceited, Davy:— about thy business, Davy. Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance William Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill. Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge. Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for 'himself, when a knave is not. I have served your, worship truly, sir, this eight years ; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship, let him be countenanced. Shal. Go to ; I say, he shall have no wrong. Look about, Davy. [Exit DAVY.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots. — Give me your hand, Master Bardolph. Bard. I am glad to see your worship. Shal. I thank thee with all my heart, kind Master Bardolph: — and welcome, my tall fellow [to the Page]. — Come, Sir John. Fal. I 'II follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit SHALLOW.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt BARDOLPH and Page.] If I were sawed into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his : they, by observing of him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a justice-like servingman : their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow, I would humour his men with the imputation of being near their master : if to his men, I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of ano her: therefore, let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, — which is four terms, or two actions, — and he shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much that a lie with a slight oath, and a jest with a sad brow, will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders ! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid up ! Shal. [Within.} Sir John ! Fal. \ come, Master Shallow; I come, Master Shallow. [Exit.

526 SECOND PART. OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT v. SCENE II. — WESTMINSTER. A Room in the Palace. Enter, severally, WARWICK and the Lord Chief-Justice. War. How now, my lord chief-justice! whither away? Ch.Just. How doth the Icing? [ended. War. Exceeding well ; his cares are now all Ch. Just. I hope, not dead. War. He 's walk'd the way of nature ; And to our purposes he lives no more. Ch. Just. I would his majesty had call'd me with him: The service that I truly did his life Hath left me open to all injuries. [you not. War. Indeed I think the young king loves Ch. Just. I know he doth not ; and do arm myself To welcome the condition of the time ; Which cannot look more hideously upon me Than I have drawn it in my fantasy. War. Here come the heavy issue of dead Harry: 0 that the living Harry had the temper Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen ! How many nobles then should hold their places, That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort ! Ch. Just. O God, I fear all will be overturn'd. Enter PRINCE JOHN, PRINCE HUMPHREY, CLARENCE, WESTMORELAND, and others. P. John. Good-morrow, cousin Warwick, good-morrow. P. Humph,, Cla. Good -morrow, cousin. P. John. We meet like men that had forgot to speak. War. We do remember ; but our argument Is all too heavy to admit much talk. P.John. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy ! Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier! P. Htimph. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend indeed ; And I dare swear you borrow not that face Of seeming sorrow, — it is sure your own. P. John. Though no man be assur'd what frace to find, in coldest expectation: 1 am the sorrier ; would 'twere otherwise. Cla. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair ; Which swims against your stream of quality. Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour, Led by the impartial conduct of my soul ; And never shall you see that I will beg A e(j an(j forestall'd remission. If truth and upright innocency fail me, I '11 to the king my master that is dead, And tell him who hath sent me after him. War. Here comes the prince. Enter KING HENRY V. Ch. Just. Good-morrow; and God save yoˆr majesty ! [majesty, King. This new and gorgeous garment, Sits not so easy on me as you think. — Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear : This is the English, not the Turkish court ; Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds, But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers, For, to speak truth, it very well becomes you : Sorrow so royally in you appears That I will deeply put the fashion on, And wear it in my heart: why, then, be sad; But entertain no more of it, good brothers, Than a joint burden laid upon us all. For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd, I '11 be your father and your brother too; Let me but bear your love, I '11 bear your cares : Yet weep that Harry 'c dead ; and so will I ; But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears, By number, into hours of happiness. P.John, <5rV. We hope no other from your majesty. King. You all look strangely on me: — and you most ; [To the Chief-Justice. You are, I think, assur'd I love you not. Ch.Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly, Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me. King. No! How might a prince of my great hopes forget So great indignities you laid upon me? What ! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison The immediate heir of England ! Was this easy? May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten? Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your father; The image of his power lay then in me : And, in the administration of his law, Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth, Your highness pleased to forget my place, And majesty and power of law and justice, The image of the king whom I presented, And struck me in my very seat of judgment; Whereon, as an offender to your father, I gave bold way to my authority, And did commit you. If the deed were ill, Be you contented, wearing now the garland, To have a son set your decrees at naught, To pluck down justice from your awful benchf

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. 527 To trip the course of law, and bb'nt the sword That guards the peace and safety of your person ; Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image, And mock your workings in a second body. Question your royal thoughts, make the case yours ; Be now the father, and propose a son ; Hear your own dignity so much profan'd, See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted, Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd ; And then imagine me taking your part, And, in your power, soft silencing your sont After this cold ccnsiderance, sentence me ; And, as you are a king, speak in your state What I have done that misbecame my place, My person, or my liege's sovereignty. King. You are right, justice, and you weigh this well ; Therefore still bear the balance and the sword : And I do wish your honours may increase Till you do live to see a son of mine Offend you, and obey you, as I did. So shall I live to speak my father's words Happy am I, that have a man so bold. That dares do justice on my proper son ; And not less happy, having such a son, That would deliver up his greatness so Into the hands of justice. — You did commit me : For which I do commit into your hand The unstain'd sword that you have us'd to bear ; With this remembrance, — that you use the same With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand; You shall be as a father to my youth : My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear; And I will stoop and humble my intents To your well-practis'd wise directions. — And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you ; — My father is gone wild into his grave, For in his tomb lie my affections ; And with his spirit sadly I survive, To mock the expectation of the world, To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down After my seeming. The tide of blood in me Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now : Now doth it turn, and ebb back to the sea, Where it shall mingle with *he state of floods, And flow henceforth in formal majesty. Now call we our high court of parliament: And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel, That the great body of our state may go In equal rank with the best-govern'd nation ; That war or peace, or both at once, may be As things acquainted and familiar to us ; In which you, father, shall have foremost hand. [To the Lord Chief- Justice. Our coronation done, we will accite, As I before remember'd, all our state : And, — God consigning to my good intents, — No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say, God shorten Harry's happy life one day. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — GLOUCESTERSHIRE. The Garden of SHALLOW'S House. Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, BARDOLPH, the Page, and DAVY. Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own graffing, with a dish of carraways, and so forth : — come, cousin Silence : — and then to bed. Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich. Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John : — marry, good air. — Spread, Davy; spread, Davy: well said, Davy. Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses ; he is your serving-man and your husband. Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John: — by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper : — a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down : — come, cousin. < Sil. Ah, sirrah ! quoth-a, — we shall Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer, [Singing. And praise heaven for the merry year ; When flesh is cheap, and females dear, And lusty lads roam here and there, So merrily ', And ever among so merrily. Fal. There 's a merry heart ! — Good Master Silence, I '11 give you a health for that anon. Shal. Give Master Bardolphsoine wine, Davy. Davy. Sweet sir, sit [seating BARDOLPH and the Page at another table]; I'll be with you anon; most sweet sir, sit. — Master Page, good Master Page, sit. — Preface! What you want in meat, we '11 have in drink. But you must bear; the heart 's all. [Exit. Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; — and, my little soldier there, be merry. Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all; [Singing. For women are shrews, both short and tall; 5 Tis merry in hall when beards wag all, And welcome merry shrove-tide. Be merry, be merry, &c. Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle. Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

S28 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV. [ACT v. Re-enter DAVY. Davy. There is a dish of leather-coats for you. " {.Setting them before BARD. Shal. Davy,— Davy. Your worship? — I'll be with you straight [to BARD.] — A cup of wine, sir? Sil. A cup of wine that 's brisk and fine, [Singing. And drink unto the leman mine; And a merry heart lives long-a. Fal Well, said, Master Silence. Sil. And we shall be merry ; — now comes in the sweet of the night. Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence. Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come ; [Singing. I* II pledge you a mile to the bottom. Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome : if thou wan test anything, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. — Welcome, my little tiny thief [to the Page] ; and welcome indeed too. — I '11 drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleroes about London. Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die. Bard. An I might see you there, Davy, — Shal. By the mass, you '11 crack a quart together,— ha! will you not, Master Bardolph? Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot. Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee :— the knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that : he will not out ; he is true bred. Bard. And I '11 stick by him, sir. Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing : be merry. [Knocking heard.] Look who's at door there, ho! who knocks? [Exit DAVY. Fal. Why, now you have done me right. [To SIL., who has drunk a bumper. Sil. Do me right, [Singing. And dub me knight: Samingo. Is 't not so? Fal. 'Tis so. Sil. Is't so? Why, then, say an old man can do somewhat. Re-enter DAVY. Davy. An it please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news. Fal. From the court ! let him come in. Enter PISTOL, How now, Pistol ! Pist. Sir John, God save you ! Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol? Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good.— Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in the realm. Sil. By 'r lady, I think he be, but goodman Puff of Barson. Pist. Puff? Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base ! — Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee ; And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, And golden times, and happy news of price. Fal. I pr'ythee now, deliver them like a man of this world. [base ! Pist. A foutra for the world and worldlings I speak of Africa and golden joys. Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news? Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof. Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and

John. [Singing. Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons? And shall good news be baffled? Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap. Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding. Pist. Why, then, lament, therefore. Shal. Give me pardon, sir : — if, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there is but two ways ; either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the king, in some authority. Pist. Under which king, bezonian? speak, or die. Shal. Under King Harry. Pist. Harry the fourth? or fifth? Shal. Harry the fourth. Pist. A foutra for thine office ! — Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king ; Harry the fifth 's the man. I speak the truth : When Pistol lies, do this ; and fig me, like The bragging Spaniard. Fal. What! is the old king dead? Pist. As nail in door : the things I speak are just. Fal. Away, Bardolph ! saddle my horse.— Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. — Pistol, I will doublecharge thee with dignities. Bard. O joyful day ! I would not take a knighthood for my fortune. Pist. What, I do bring good news? Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed.— Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, be what thou wilt ; I am fortune's steward. Get on thy boots: we'll ride aii night:— O sweet Pistol !— away, Bardolph! [Exit BARDOLPH.] — Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and, withal, devise something to do thyself good.— Boot, boot, Master

Shallow : I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses ; the laws of England are at my commandment. Happy are they which have been my friends; and woe unto my Lord Chief-Justice ! Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also ! Where is the life that late I led? say they : Why, here it is; — welcome this pleasant day! [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — LONDON. A Street. Enter Beadles, dragging in HOSTESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET. Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would I might die, that I might have thee hanged : thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint. I Bead. The constables have delivered her over to me ; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her : there hath been a man or two lately killed about her. Doll. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on ; I 'II tell thee what, thou damned tripevisaged rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou hadst better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-faced villain. Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come ! he would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry ! I Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me ; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat among you. Doll. I '11 tell thee what, thou thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swinged for this, — you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy famished correctioner, if you be not swinged, I '11 forswear half-kirtles. I Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come. [might ! Host. O God, that right should thus overcome Well, of sufferance comes ease. [a justice. Doll. Come, you rogue, come ; bring me to Host. Ay, come, you starved bloodhound. Doll. Goodman death, goodman bones ! Host. Thou atomy, thou ! Doll. Come, you thin thing ; come, you rascal. I Bead. Very well. [Exeunt. SCENE V. — A public Place near Westminster Abbey. Enter two Grooms, strewing rushes. 1 Groom. More rushes, more rushes. 2 Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice. I Groom. It will be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation : despatch, despatch. [Exeunt. Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and the Page.* Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow ; I will make the king do you grace : I will leer upon him, as he comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me. Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight. Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. — O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you \to SHALLOW]. But 'tis no matter ; this poor show doth better : this doth infer the zeal I had to see him, — . Shal. It doth so. Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection, — Shal. It doth so. Fal. My devotion, — Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth. Fal. As it were, to ride day and night ; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me,— Shal. It is most certain. Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him. Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nthil est: 'tis all in every part. Shal. 'Tis so, indeed. Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, And make thee rage. Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance and contagious prison; Haul'd thither By most mechanical and dirty hand : — [snake, Rouse up revenge from ebon den withfell Alecto's For Doll is in. Pistol speaks naught but truth. Fal. I will deliver her. {Shouts within, and the trumpets sound. Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpetclangor sounds. Enter the KING and his Train, the Chief-Justice among them. Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal; my royal Hal ! Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame ! Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy ! [man. King. My lord chief-justice, speak to that vain Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak? [heart ! Fal. My king ! my Jove ! I speak to thee, my King. I know thee not, old man : fall to thy prayers;

530 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT v. How ill white hairs become a fool and jester ! I have long dream'd of such a kind of man, So sul feit-swell'd, so old, and so profane ; But, being awake, I do despise my dream. Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace ; Leave gormandizing ; know the grave doth gape For thee thrice wider than for other men. — Reply not to me with a fool-born jest : Presume not that I am the thing I was ; For God doth know, so shall the world perceive, That I have turn'd away my former self; So will I those that kept me company. When thou dost hear I am as I have been, Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast, The tutor and the feeder of my riots : Till then I banish thee, on pain ot death, — As I have done the rest of my misieaders, — Not to come near our person by ten mile. For competence of life I will allow you, That lack of means enforce you not to evil : And, as we hear you do reform yourselves, We will, according to your strength and qualities, Give you advancement. — Be it your charge, my lord, To see perform'd the tenor of our word. — Set on. [Exeunt KING and his Train. Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound. Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John ; which I beseech you to let me have home with me. Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow. Do not you grieve at this ; I shall be sent for in private to him : look you, he must seem thus to the world : fear not your advancement ; I will be the man yet that shall make you great. Shal. I cannot perceive how, — unless you give me your doublet, and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand. Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word : this that you heard was but a colour. [Sir John. Shal. A colour, I fear, that you will die in, Fal. Fear no colours : go with me to dinner. Come, Lieutenant Pistol ; — come, Bardolph : — I shall be sent for soon at night. Re-enter PRINCE JOHN, the Chief-Justice, Officers, &c. Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet ; Take all his company along with him. Fal. My lord, my lord, — [you soon. — Ch. Jitst. I cannot now speak : I will hear Take them away. \contenta. Pist. I like this fair proceeding of the king's : He hath intent his wonted followers Shall all be very well provided for ; But all are banish'd till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world. Ch.Just. And so they are. P.John. The king hath call'd his parliament, my lord. Ch. Jus!. He hath. P. John. I will lay odds that, ere this year expire, We bear our civil swords and native fire As far as France : I heard a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the king. Come, will you hence ? [Exeunt. EPILOGUE.— Spoken by a Dancer. First my fear; then my court'sy ; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure ; my court'sy, my duty ; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me : for what I have-to say is of mine own making ; and what, indeed, I should say will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. — Be it known to you, — as it is very well, — I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it, and to promise you a better. I did mean, indeed, to pay you with this ; which, if, like an ill venture, it come unluckily home, I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose. Here I promised you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies: bate me some, and I will pay you some, and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely. If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs ? and yet that were but light payment, — to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will make any possible satisfaction, and so will I. All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me : if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly. One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloyed with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France : where, for anything I know, Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already he be killed with your hard opinions ; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary; when my legs are too, I will bid you good-night : and so kneel down before you ; — but, indeed, to pray for the queen.

532 KING HENRY V. [ACT i. But that the scambling and unquiet time Did push it out of further question. [now? Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us, We lose the better half of our possession : For all the temporal lands, which men devout By testament have given to the church, Would they strip from us; being valu'd thus, — As much as would maintain, to the king's honour, Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights, Six thousand and two hundred good esquires ; And, to relief of lazars and weak age, Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil, A hundred alms-houses right well supplied ; And to the coffers of the king, beside, [bill. A thousand pounds by the year : thus runs the Ely. This would drink deep. Cant. 'T would drink the cup and all. . Ely. But what prevention ? [gard. Cant. The king is full of grace and fair reEly. And a true lover of the holy church. Cant. The courses of his youth promis'dit not. The breath no sooner left his father's body But that his wildness, mortified in him, Seem'd to die too : yea, at that very moment, Consideration, like an angel, came, ;-I «2&' And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him, Leaving his body as a paradise, To envelop and contain celestial spirits. Never was such a sudden scholar made ; Never came reformation in a flood, With such a heady current, scouring faults ; Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness So soon did lose his seat, and all at once, As in this king. Ely. We are blessed in the change. Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity, And, all-admiring, with an inward wish You would desire the king were made a prelate : Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs, You would say, it hath been all-in-all his study : List his discourse of war, and you shall hear A fearful battle render' d you in music : Turn him to any cause of policy, The Gordian knot of it he will unloose, Familiar as his garter : — that, when he speaks, The air, a charter'd libertine, is still, And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears. To steal his sweet and honeyed sentences ; So that the art and practice part of life Must be the mistress to this theoric : [it, Which is a wonder how his grace should glean Since his addiction was to courses vain ; His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow ; His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports ; And never noted in him any study, Any retirement, any sequestration From open haunts and popularity.

[nettle, Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality : And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation Under the veil of wildness ; which, no doubt, Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night, Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty. Cant. It must be so ; for miracles are ceas'd ; And therefore we must needs admit the means How things are perfected. Ely. But, my good lord, How now for mitigation of this bill Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty Incline to it, or no ? Cant. He seems indifferent ; Or, rather, swaying more upon our part Than cherishing the exhibitors against us : For I have made an offer to his majesty, — Upon our spiritual convocation, And in regard of causes now in hand, Which I have open'd to his grace at large, As touching France, — to give a greater sum Than ever at one time the clergy yet Did to his predecessors part withal. [lord? Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty; Save that there was not time enough to hear, — As, I perceiv'd, his grace would fain have done, — The severals and unhidden passages Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms, And, generally, to the crown and seat of France, Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather. Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off? [stant Cant. The French ambassador upon that inCrav'd audience : and the hour, I think, is come To give him hearing: is it four o'clock? Ely. It is. Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy ; Which I could, with a ready guess, declare, Before the Frenchman speak a word of it. Ely. I '11 wait upon you ; and I long to hear it. \Exeunt. SCENE II. — The same. A Room of State in the same. Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and Attendants. K. Hen. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury? Exe. SCENE H.] KING HENRY V. 533 K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle. West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege? [resolv'd, K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin ; we would be Before we hear him, of some things of weight, That task our thoughts, concerning us and France. Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and BISHOP OF ELY. Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne, And make you long become it ! K. Hen. Sure, we thank you. My learned lord, we pray you to proceed, And justly and religiously unfold Why the law Salique, that they have in France, Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim : And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord, That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading, Or nicely charge your understanding soul With opening titles miscreate, whose right Suits not in native colours with the truth ; For God doth know how many, now in health, Shall drop their blood in approbation Of what your reverence shall incite us to : Therefore take heed how you impawn our person, How you awake the sleeping sword of war : We charge you, in the name of God, take heed ; For never two such kingdoms did contend Without much fall of blood; whose guiltless drops Are every one a woe, a sore complaint 'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto the swords That make such waste in brief mortality. Under this conjuration, speak, my lord ; For we will hear, note, and believe in heart That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd As pure as sin with baptism. Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, — and you peers, That owe yourselves, your lives, and services To this imperial throne. — There is no bar To make against your highness' claim to France But this, which theyproducefromPharamond, — In terrain Salicam mulieres ne succedanf, No woman shall succeed in Saligue land: Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze To be the realm of France, and Pharamond The founder of this law and female bar. Yet their own authors faithfully affirm That the land Salique is in Germany, Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe ; Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons, There left behind and settled certain French ; Who, holding in disdain the German women For some dishonest manners of their life, Establish'd then this law, — to wit, no female Should be inheritrix in Salique land : Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala, Is at this day in Germany called Meisen. Then doth it well appear, the Salique law Was not devised for the realm of France : Nor did the French possess the Salique land Until four hundred one-and-twenty years After defunction of King Pharamond, Idly suppos'd the founder of this law ; Who died within the year of our redemption Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French Beyond the river Sala, in the year Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say, King Pepin, which deposed Childerick, Did, as heir general, being descended Of Blithild, which was daughter to King Clothair, Make claim and title to the crown of France. Hugh Capet also, — who usurp'd the crown Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great, — To fine his title with some show of truth, — Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught, — Conveyed himself as heir to the Lady Lingare, Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son To Louis the emperor, and Louis the son Of Charles the Great. Also King Louis the Tenth, Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet, Could not keep quiet in his conscience, Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother, Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Lorraine : [Great By the which marriage the line of Charles the Was re-united to the Crown of France. So that, as clear as is the summer's sun, King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim, King Louis his satisfaction, all appear To hold in right and title of the female : So do the kings of France unto this day ; Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law To bar your highness claiming from the female ; And rather choose to hide them in a net Than amply to imbar their crooked titles Usurp'd from you and your progenitors. K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim ? Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign !

534 KING HENRY V. LACT i. For in the book of Numbers is it writ,When the man dies, let the inheritance Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord, Stand for your own ; unwind your bloody flag ; Look back unto your mighty ancestors : Go, my dread lord, to your great -grandsire's tomb, From whom you claim ; invoke his warlike spirit, And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince, Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy, Making defeat on the full power of France, Whiles his most mighty father on a hill Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp Forage in blood of French nobility. O noble English, that could entertain With half their forces the full pride of France, And let another half stand laughing by, All out of work and cold for action ! [dead, Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant And with your puissant arm renew their feats : You are their heir ; you sit upon their throne ; The blood and courage that renowned them Runs in your veins ; and my thrice -puissant liege Is in the very May- morn of his youth, Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises. Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth Do all expect that you should rouse yourself, As did the former lions of your blood. West. They know your grace hath cause and means and might: — So hath your highness ; never king of England Had nobles richer and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England, And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France. Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear liege, With blood and sword and fire to win your right : In aid whereof we of the spiritualty Will raise your highness such a mighty sum As never did the clergy at one time Bring in to any of your ancestors. [French, K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us With all advantages. [reign, Cant. They of those marches, gracious soveShall be a wall sufficient to defend Our inland from the pilfering borderers. K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only, But fear the main intendment of the Scot, Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us ; For you shall read that my great-grandfather Never went with his forces into France But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom Came pouring, like the tide into a breach, With ample and brim fulness of his force ; Galling the gleaned land with hot essays, Girding with grievous siege castles and towns ; That England, being empty of defence, Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbourhood. Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege; For hear her but exampled by herself: — When all her chivalry hath been in France, And she a mourning widow of her nobles, She hath herself not only well defended, But taken, and impounded as a stray, The king of Scots ; whom she did send to France, To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings, And make her chronicle as rich with praise As is the ooze and bottom of the sea With sunken wreck and sumless treasuries. West. But there 's a saying, very old and true, — If that you -will France win, Then with Scotland first begin : For once the eagle England being in prey, To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot Comes sneaking, and so sucks her princely eggs; Playing the mouse in absence of the cat, To tear and havoc more than she can eat. Exe. It follows, then, the cat must stay at home: Yet that is but a curs'd necessity, Since we have locks to safeguard necessaries, And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves. While that the armed hand doth fight abroad, The advised head defends itself at home ; For government, though high, and low, and lower, Put into parts, doth keep in one concent ; Congruing in a full and natural close, Like music. Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide The state of man in divers functions, Setting endeavour in continual motion ; To which is fixed, as an aim or butt, Obedience : for so work the honey bees ; Creatures that, by a rule in nature, teach The act of order to a peopled kingdom. They have a king, and officers of sorts : Where some, like magistrates, correct at home ; Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad ; Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings, Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds ; Which pillage they with merry march bring home To the tent-royal of thek emperor : Who, busied in his majesty, surveys The singing masons building roofs of gold ; The civil citizens kneading up the honey ;

SCENE II.] KING HENRY V. 535 The poor mechanic porters crowding in Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate ; The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum, Delivering o'er to executors pale The lazy yawning drone. I this infer, — That many things, having full reference To one concent, may work contrariously : As many arrows, loosed several ways, Fly to one mark ; As many several ways meet in one town ; As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea ; As many lines close in the dial's centre : So may a thousand actions, once afoot, End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege. Divide your happy England into four ; Whereof take you one quarter into France, And you withal shall make all Gallia shake. If we, with thrice such powers left at home, Cannot defend our own doors from the dog, Let us be worried, and our nation lose The name of hardiness and policy. K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. [Exit an Attendant. Now are we well resolv'd t and, by God's help And yours, the noble sinews of our power, France being ours, we '11 bend it to our awe, Or break it all to pieces : or there we '11 sit, Ruling in large and ample empery O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms, Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn, Tombless, with no remembrance over them : Either our history shall with full mouth Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave, Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth, Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph. Enter Ambassadors of France. Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure Of our fair cousin Dauphin ; for we hear Your greeting is from him, not from the king. i Amb. May it please your majesty to give us leave Freely to render what we have in charge ; Or shall we sparingly show you far off The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy? K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king; Unto whose grace our passion is as subject As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons : Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainness Tell us the Dauphin's mind. i Amb. Thus, then, in few. Your highness, lately sending into France, Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third. In answer of which claim, the prince our master Says, that you savour too much of your youth ; And bids you be advis'd there 's naught in France That can be with a nimble galliard

won ; — You cannot revel into dukedoms there. He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit, This tun of treasure ; and, in lieu of this, Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks. K. Hen. What treasure, uncle? Exe. Tennis-balls, my liege. K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us; His present and your pains we thank you for : When we have match'd our rackets to these balls, We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard. Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler That all the courts of France will be disturb'd With chases. And we understand him well, How he comes o'er us with our wilder days, Not measuring what use we made of them. We never valu'd this poor seat of England ; And therefore, living hence, did give ourself To barbarous license ; as 'tis ever common That men are merriest when they are from home. But tell the Dauphin, I will keep my state ; Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness, When I do rouse me in my throne of France : For that I have laid by my majesty, And plodded like a man for working-days ; But I will rise there with so full a glory That I will dazzle all the eyes of France, Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones ; and his soul Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance [widows That shall fly with them ; for many a thousand Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands ; [down ; Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles And some are yet ungotten and unborn [scorn. That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's But this lies all within the will of God, To whom I do appeal ; and in whose name, Tell you the Dauphin, I am coming on, To venge me as I may, and to put forth My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause. So, get you hence in peace ; and tell the Dauphin His jest will savour but of shallow wit, [it. — When thousands weep, more than did laugh at Convey them with safe conduct. — Fare you well. [Exeunt Ambassadors.

 Exe. This was a merry message. K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it. Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour That may give furtherance to our expedition ; For we have now no thought in us but France, Save those to God, that run before our business. Therefore let our proportions for these wars Be soon collected, and all things thought upon That may with reasonable swiftness add More feathers to our wings ; for, God before, We '11 chide this Dauphin at his father's door. Therefore let every man now task his thought, That this fair action may on foot be brought. {Exeunt. Enter Chorus. Chor. Now all the youth of England are on fire, And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies : Now thrive the armourers, and honour's thought Reigns solely in the breast of every man : They sell the pasture now to buy the horse ; Following the mirror of all Christian kings, With winged heels, as English Mercuries, For now sits Expectation in the air ; And hides a sword from hilts unto the point With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets, Promis'd to Harry and his followers. The French, advis'd by good intelligence Of this most dreadful preparation, Shake in their fear ; and with pale policy Seek to divert the English purposes. O England ! — model to thy inward greatness, Like little body with a mighty heart, — What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do, Were all thy children kind and natural ! [out But see thy fault ! France hath in thee found A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills With treacherous crowns ; and three corrupted men, — [second, One, Richard Earl of Cambridge ; and the Henry Lord Scroop of Masham ; and the third, Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland, — Have, for the guilt of France, — Oguiltindeed! — Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France ; And by their hands this grace of kings must die,— If hell and treason hold their promises, — Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton. Linger your patience on ; and well digest The abuse of distance, while we force a play. The sum is paid ; the traitors are agreed ; The king is set from London ; and the scene Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton,— There is the play-house now, there must you sit : And thence to France shall we convey you safe, And bring you back, charming the narrow seas To give you gentle pass ; for, if we may, We '11 not offend one stomach with our play. But, till the king come forth, and not till then, Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. [Exit. ACT II. SCENE I. — LONDON. Before the Boar's HcaoL Tavern, Eastcheap. Enter, severally, NYM and BARDOLPH. Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym. Nym. Good-morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph. Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet ? Nym. For my part, I ca/e not : I say little ; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles ; — but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight ; but I will wink, and hold out mine iron : it is a simple one ; but what though ? it will toast cheese : and it will endure cold as another man's sword will, and there 's the humour of it. Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends ; and we '11 be all three sworn brothers to France : let it be so, good Corporal Nym. Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that 's the certain of it ; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may : that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it. Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly : and, certainly, she did you wrong; for you were troth-plight to her. Nym. I cannot tell : — things must be as they may : men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time ; and, some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may : though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. Th-re must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell. Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife : — good corporal, be patient here. Enter PISTOL and Hostess. How now, mine host Pistol ! Fist. Base tike, call'st thou me host ? Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term ', Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers. Host. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours, — That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery ! Trumpet sounds. Enter'Kiˆ G HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, Lords, and Attendants. K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard. My Lord of Cambridge, — and" my kind Lord of Masham, — • [thoughts : And you, my gentle knight, — give me your Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France, Doing the execution and the act For which we have in head assembled them? Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best. [persuaded K. Hen. I doubt not that ; since we are well We carry not a heart with us from hence That grows not in a fair consent with ours, Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us. Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd [subject Than is your majesty : there 's not, I think, a That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government. Grey. True: those that were your father's enemies [you Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve With hearts create of duty and of zeal. K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness ; And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner than quittance of desert and merit According to the weight and worthiness. Scroop. So service shall with steel'd sinews toil, And labour shall refresh itself with hope, To do your grace incessant services. K. Hen. We judge no less. — Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday, That rail'd against our person : we consider It was excess of wine that set him on ; And on his more advice we pardon him. Scroop. That 's mercy, but too much security: Let him be punish'd, sovereign ; lest example Breed, by his sufferance', more of such a kind. K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful. [too. Cam. So may your highness, and yet punish Grey.

Sir, you show great mercy if you give. him life, After the taste of much correction. [of me K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch ! If little faults, proceeding on distemper, Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye [digested, When capital crimes, chew'd, swal.low'd, and Appear before us? — We '11 yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care And tender preservation of our person, Would have him punish'd. And now to out French causes : Who are the late commissioners? Cam. I one, my lord : Your highness bade me ask for it to-day. Scroop. So did you me, my liege. Grey. And me, my royal sovereign. K. Hen. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours ; — [sir knight, There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham ; — and, Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours : — Read them, and know I know your worthiness.— [eter, — My Lord of Westmoreland, — and uncle ExWe will aboard to-night. — Why, how now, gentlemen ' What see you in those papers, that you lose So much complexion? — Look ye, how they change ! [there Their cheeks are paper.— Why, what read you That hath so cowarded and chas'd your blood Out of appearance? Cam. I do confess my fault, And do submit me to your highness' mercy. Grey, Scroop. To which we all appeal. K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd : You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy ; For your own reasons turn into your bosoms, As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.— See you, my princes and my noble peers,

SCENE II.] KING HENRY V. 539 These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here, — You know how apt our love was to accord To furnish him with all appertinents Belonging to his honour ; and this man Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd, And sworn unto the practices of France, To kill us here in Hampton : to the which This knight, no less for bounty bound to us Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. — But, O, [cruel, What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature! Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels, That knew'st the very bottom of my soul, That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold, Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy use, — May it be possible that foreign hire Could out of thee extract one spark of evil That might annoy my finger ? tis so strange That, though the truth of it stands off as gross As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it. Treason and murder ever kept together, As two yoke-devils sworn to cither's purpose, Working so grossly in a natural cause That admiration did not whoop at them t But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder: And whatsoever cunning fiend it was That wrought upon thee so preposterously Hath got the voice in hell for excellence : And other devils, that suggest by treasons, Do botch and bungle up damnation [fetch'd With patches, colours, and with forms being From glistering semblances of piety ; But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up, Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason, Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus Should with his lion gait walk the whole world, He might return to vasty Tartar back, And tell the legions, / can never win A soul so easy as that Englishman's. O, how hast thou with jealousy infected The sweetness of affiance ! Show men dutiful ? Why, so didst thou : seem they grave and learned? Why, so didst thou : come they of noble family? Why, so didst thou : seem they religious? Why, so didst thou : or are they spare in diet ; Free from gross passion, or of mirth or anger ; Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood ; Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement ; Not working with the eye without the ear, And but in purged judgment trusting neither? Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem : And thus thy fall hath left a kind of

blot, To mark the full-fraught man and best indu'd With some suspicion. I will weep for thee ; For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man. — Their faults are open : Arrest them to the answer of the law ; — And God acquit them of their practices ! Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland. Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd ; And I repent my fault more than my death ; Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it. Cam. For me, — the gold of France did not seduce ; Although I did admit it as a motive The sooner to effect what I intended : But God be thanked for prevention ; Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God and you to pardon me. Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice At the discovery of most dangerous treason Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself, Prevented from a damned enterprise : My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign. K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy ! Hear your sentence. You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death ; Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter, His princes and his peers to servitude, His subjects to oppression and contempt, And his whole kingdom into desolation. Touching our person seek we no revenge ; But we our kingdom's safety must so tender, Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws We do deliver you. Get you, therefore, hence, Poor miserable wretches, to your death : The taste whereof God of his mercy give you Patience to endure, and true repentance Of all your dear offences! — Bear them hence. [Exeunt Conspirators, guarded. Now, lords, for France ; the enterprise whereof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious. We doubt not of a fair and lucky war : Since God so graciously hath brought to light This dangerous treason, lurking in our way To hinder our beginnings, we doubt not now But every rub is smoothed on our way.

Enter PISTOL, Hostess, NYM, BARDOLPH, and Boy. Host. Pr'ythee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines. Fist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn. — Bardolph, be blithe ; — Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins; — [is dead, Boy, bristle thy courage up; — for Falstaff he And we must yearn therefore. Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell ! Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away, an it had been any christom child ; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide : for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way ; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbled of green fields. How now, Sir John! quoth I : what, man ! be o' good cheer. So 'a cried out — God, God, God! three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet : I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone ; then I felt to his knees, and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone. Nym. They say he cried out of sack. Host. Ay, that 'a did. Bard. And of women. Host. Nay, that 'a did not. Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said they were devils incarnate. Host. 'A could never abide carnation ; 'twas a colour he never liked. Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women. Host. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women ; but then he was rheumatic, and talked of the whore of Babylon. Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell? Bard. Enter the FRENCH KING, attended; the DAUPHIN, the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, the Constable, and others. Fr. King. Thus come the English with full power upon us ; And more than carefully it us concerns To answer royally in our defences. Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Bretagne, Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth, — And you, Prince Dauphin, — with all swift despatch, To line and new repair our towns of war With men of courage and with means defendant ; For England his approaches makes as fierce As waters to the sucking of a gulf. It fits us, then, to be as provident As fear may teach us, out of late examples Left by the fatal and neglected English Upon our fields. Dau. My most redoubted father, It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe ; For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom,— Though war, nor no known quarrel, were in question, — But that defences, musters, preparations, Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected, As were a war in expectation. Therefore, I say, 'tis meet we all go forth To view the sick and feeble parts of France :

SCENE IV.] KING HENRY V. And let us do it with no show of fear ; No, with no more than if we heard that England Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance : For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd, Her sceptre so fantastically borne By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, That fear attends her not. Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin ! You are too much mistaken in this king : Question your grace the late ambassadors, — With what great state he heard their embassy, How well supplied with noble counsellors, How modest in exception, and withal How terrible in constant resolution, — And you shall find his vanities forespent Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus, Covering discretion with a coat of folly ; As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots That shall first spring and be most delicate. Dau. Well, 'tis not so, my lord high-constable; But though we think it so, it is no matter : In cases of defence 'tis best to weigh The enemy more mighty than he seems : So the proportions of defence are fill'd ; Which, of a weak and niggardly projection, Doth like a miser spoil his coat with scanting A little cloth. Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong ; And, princes, look you strongly arm to meet him. The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us ; And he is bred out of that bloody strain That haunted us in our familiar paths : Witness our too-much memorable shame When Cressy battle fatally was struck, And all our princes captiv'd by the hand Of that black name, Edward Black Prince of Wales; [standing, Whiles that his mountain sire, — on mountain Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun, — Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him, Mangle the work of nature, and deface The patterns that by God and by French fathers Had twenty years been made. This is a stem Of that victorious stock ; and let us fear The native mightiness and fate of him. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England Do crave admittance to your majesty. Fr. King. We '11 give them present audience. Go, and bring them. {Exeunt Mess, and certain Lords. You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends. Turn head and stop pursuit ; for coward dogs Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten Runs far before them. Good my sovereign, Take up the English short ; and let them know Of what a monarchy you are the head : Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin As self-neglecting. Re-enter Lords, -with EXETER and Train. Fr.

King. From our brother England? Exe. From him ; and thus he greets your majesty. He wills you, in the name of God Almighty, That you divest yourself, and lay apart The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven, By law of nature and of nations, 'long To him and to his heirs ; namely, the crown, And all wide-stretched honours that pertain, By custom and the ordinance of times, Unto the crown of France. That you may know 'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim, [days, Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd, He sends you this most memorable line, {Gives a paper. In every branch truly demonstrative ; Willing you overlook this pedigree : And when you find him evenly deriv'd From his most fam'd of famous ancestors, Edward the Third, he bids you then resign Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held From him the native and true challenger. Fr. King. Or else what follows? [crown Exe. Bloody constraint ; for if you hide the Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it : Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming, In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove, — That if requiring fail, he will compel ; — And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord, Deliver up the crown ; and to take mercy On the poor souls for whom this hungry war Opens his vasty jaws : and on your head Turns he the widows' tears, the orphans' cries, The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans, For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers, That shall be swallow'd in this controversy. This is his claim, his threatening, and my mesUnless the Dauphin be in presence here, To whom expressly I bring greeting too. Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further : To-morrow shall you bear our full intent Back to our brother England. Dau. For the Dauphin, I stand here for him : what to him from England?

542 KING HENRY V. [ACT in. Exe. Scorn and defiance ; slight regard, contempt, And anything that may not misbecome The mighty sender, doth he prize you at. Thus says my king : an if your father's highness Do not, in grant of all demands at large, Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty, He '11 call you to so hot an answer for it That caves and womby vaultages of France Shall chide your trespass and return your mock In second accent of his ordinance. Dau. Say, if my father render fair return, It is against my will ; for I desire Nothing but odds with England : to that end, As matching to his youth and vanity, I did present him with the Paris balls. Exe. He '11 make your Paris Louvre shake for it, Were it the mistress court of mighty Europe : And, be assur'd, you '11 find a difference, — As we, his subjects, have in wonder found, — Between the promise of his greener days And these he masters now : now he weighs time Even to the utmost grain : — that you shall read In your own lessees if he stay in France. Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. [king Exe. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our Come here himself to question our delay ; For he is footed in this land already. Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair conditions: A night is but small breath and little pause To answer matters of this consequence. \Exeunt. Enter Chorus. Cho. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies, In motion of no less celerity [seen Than that of thought. Suppose that you have The well-appointed king at Hampton pier Embark his royalty ; and his brave fleet With silken streamers the young Phoebus fanning: Play with your fancies ; and in them behold Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing , Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give To sounds confus'd ; behold the threaden sails, Borne with the invisible and creeping wind, Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea, Breasting the lofty surge : O, do but think You stand upon the rivage and behold A city on the inconstant billows dancing ; For so appears this fleet majestical, Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow ! Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy; And leave your England, as dead midnight still, Guarded withgrandsires, babies, and old women, Either past or not arrived to pith and puissance ; For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd With one appearing hair, that will not follow These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France? [siege; Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a Behold the ordnance on their carriages, With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur. Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back; Tells Harry that the king doth offer him Katharine his daughter ; and with her, to dowry, Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms. The offer likes not : and the nimble gunner With linstock now the devilish cannon touches, [Alarum, and chambers go off, within. And down goes all before them. Still be kind, And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit. ACT III. SCENE I. — FRANCE. Before Harfteur. Alarums. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, and Soldiers, with scalingladders. K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more; Or close the wall up with our English dead ! In peace there 's nothing so becomes a man As modest stillness and humility: But when the blast of war blows in our ears, Then imitate the action of the tiger ; Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood, Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage ; Then lend the eye a terrible aspect; Let it pry through the portage of the head Like the brass cannon ; let the brow o'erwhelm it As fearfully as doth a galled rock O'erhang and jutty his confounded base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide ; Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit To his full height ! — On, on, you noble English, Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof! — Fathers that, like so many Alexanders, Have in these parts from morn till even fought, And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument : — Dishonour not your mothers ; now attest That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you ! Be copy now to men of grosser blood, And teach them how to war !— And you, good yeomen,

SCENE I.] KING HENRY V. 543 Whose limbs were made in England, show us here The mettle of your pasture ; let us swear That you are worth your breeding: which I doubt not ; For there is none of you so mean and base, That hath not noble lustre in your eyes. I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips, Straining upon the start. The game 's afoot : Follow your spirit ; and upon this charge Cry — God for Harry ! England ! and Saint George ! [Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off > within. Enter NYM, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy. Bard. On, on, on, on, on ! to the breach, to the breach ! Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay: the knocks are too hot ; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives : the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it. Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound: Knocks go and come ; God's vassals drop and die * And sword and shield In bloody field Doth win immortal fr me. Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London ! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety. Pist. And I : If wishes would prevail with me, My purpose should not fail with But thither would I hie. Boy. As duly, but not as truly, As bird doth sing on bough. Enter FLUELLEN. Flu. Up to th« preach, you dogs! avaunt, you cullions! [Driving them forward. Pist. Be merciful , great duke, to men of mould ! Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage ! Abate thy rage, great duke ! [chuck ! Good bawcock, bate thy rage ! use lenity, sweet Nym. These be good humours ! — your honour wins bad humours. [Exeunt NYM, PISTOL, and BARDOLPH, followed by FLUELLEN. Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me ; for, indeed, three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph,— he is white-livered and red-faced ; by the means whereof 'a faces it out, but fights not For Pistol, — he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword ; by the means whereof 'a breaks words and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, — he hath heard that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers lest 'a should be thought a coward : but his few bad words are matched with as few good deeds ; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in niching ; and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel : I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers : which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine ; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service : their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up. [Exit. Re-enter FLUELLEN, GO\VER following. Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines ; the Duke of Gloster would speak with you. Flu. To the mines ! tell you the duke it is not so goot to come to the mines ; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war : the concavities of it is not sufficient ; for, look you, th' athversary, — you may discuss unto the duke, look you, — is digt himself four yard under the countermines ; by Cheshu, I think 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions. Gow. The Duke of Gloster, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, — a very valiant gentleman, i' faith. Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not ? Gow. I think it be. Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the 'orld : I will verify as much in his peard : he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog. Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him. Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions : by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the 'orld, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

544 KING HENRY V. [ACT in. Enter MACMORRIS and JAMY, at a distance. Jamy. I say gud-day, Captain Fluellen. Flu. God-den to your worship, goot Captain Jamy. Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris ! have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o'er? Mac. By Chrish la, tish ill done : the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and by my father's soul, the work ish ill done ; it ish give over : I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la, in an hour : O, tish ill done, tish ill done ; by my hand, tish ill done ! Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, a" partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication ; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline ; that is the point. Jamy. It sail be very gud, gud feith, gud captains bath : and I sail quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion ; that sail I, mary. Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish Nsave me : the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes : it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet call us to the breach ; and we talk and, by Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all : so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still ; it is shame, by my hand : and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done ; and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la. Jamy. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile do gud service, or aile lig i' the grund for it ; ay, or go to death ; and aile pay 't as valorously as I may, that sail I suerly do, that is the breffand the long. Mary, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway. Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation, — Mac. Of my nation ! What ish my nation? what ish my nation? Who talks of my nation ish a villain, and a basterd, and a knave, and a rascal. Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you ; being as goot a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities. Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head. Gow. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other. Jamy. Att! that's a foul fault. \^A parley sounded. Gow. The town sounds a parley. Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more petter opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so pold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war ; and there is an end. _Exeunt. SCENE II. — The same. Before the Gates of Harfleur. The Governor and some Citizens on the walls ; the English Forces below. Enter KING HENRY and his Train. K. Hen. I low yet resolves the governor of the town? This is the latest parley we will admit : Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves ; Or like to men proud of destruction, Defy us to our worst : for as I am a soldier, — A name that, in my thoughts, becomes me best, — If I begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur Till in her ashes she lie buried. The gates of mercy shall be all shut up ; And the flesh'd soldier, — rough and hard of heart, — In liberty of bloody hand shall range With conscience wide as hell ; mowing like grass Your fresh-fair virgins and your flowering infants. What is it then to me if impious war, — Array 'd in flames, like to the prince of fiends,— Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation? What is 't to me when you yourselves are cause, If your pure maidens fall into the hand Of hot and forcing violation? What rein can hold licentious wickedness When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless spend our vain command Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil, As send precepts to the Leviathan [fleur, To come ashore. Therefore, you men of HarTake pity of your town and of your people Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command ; Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds Of heady murder, spoil, and villany. What say you? will you yield, and this avoid? Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd ? Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end : The Dauphin, whom of succour we entreated, Returns us that his powers are not yet ready To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great king, We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy. Enter our gates ; dispose of us and ours ; For we no longer are defensible. [Exeter, K. Hen. Open your gates. — Come, uncle Go you and enter Harfleur ; there remain, And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French : Use mercy to them all. 546 KING HENRY V. [ACT III. Spurt up so suddenly into the clouds, And overlook their grafters? Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards ! Mort de ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm In that nook-shotten isle of Albion. Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle ? Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull ; On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water, [broth, A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barleyDecoct their cold blood to such valiant heat? And shall our quick blood, spirited v/ith wine, Seem frosty? O, for honour of our land, Let us not hang like roping icicles Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people [fields, — Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich Poor we may call them in their native lords ! Dau. By faith and honour, Our madams mock at us, and plainly say Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth To new-store France with bastard warriors. Bour. They bid us to the English dancingschools, And teach lavoltas high and swift corantos; Saying our grace is only in our heels, And that we are most lofty runaways. Fr. King. Where is Montjoy, the herald? speed him hence: Let him greet England with our sharpdefiance. — Up, princes ! and, with spirit of honour edg'd More sharper than your swords, hie to the field : Charles De-la-bret, high-constable of France ; You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri, Aleˆon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy; Jaques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont, Beaumont, Grandpree, Roussi, and Fauconberg, Foix,Lestrale, Bouciqualt, and Charolois; High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights, [shames. For your great seats, now quit you of great Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur : Rush on his host as doth the melted snow Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon : Go down upon him, — you have power enough, — And in a captive chariot into Rouen Bring him our prisoner, Con. This becomes the great. Sorry am I his numbers are so few, His soldiers sick, and famish'd in their march ; For I am sure, when he shall see our army, He '11 drop his heart into the sink of fear, And for achievement offer us his ransom. Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy; And let him say to England that we send To know what willing ransom he will give. — Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen. Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty. Fr. King. Be patient ; for you shall remain with us. — Now forth, lord constable and princes all, And quickly bring us word of England's fall. [Exeunt. SCENE V.—The English Camp in Picardy. Enter ; severally ', GOWER and FLUELLEN. Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen ! come you from the bridge? Flu. I assure you there is very excellent services committed at the pridge. Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe? Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power: he is not, — God be praised and plessed ! — any hurt in the 'orld ; but keeps the pridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an auncient there at the pridge, — I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony ; and he is a man oi no estimation in the 'orld ; but I did see him do as gallant service. Gow. What do you call him? Flu. He is called Auncient Pistol. Gow. I know him not. Flu. Here is the man. Enter PISTOL. Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours : The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well. Fht. Ay, I praise Got ; and I have merited some love at his hands. [heart, Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of Of buxom valour, hath by cruel fate And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel, — That goddess blind, That stands upon the rolling restless stone,— Flu. By your patience, Auncient Pistol. Fortune is painted plind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is plind : and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him ; [be, — For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must ?a A damned death ! Let gallows gape for dog ; let man go free, And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate : But Exeter hath given the doom of death For pax of little price. [voice ; Therefore, go speak, — the duke will hear thy And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut With edge of penny cord and vile reproach : Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite. Flu. Auncient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning. Pist. Why, then, rejoice therefore. Flu. Certainly, Auncient, it is not a thing to rejoice at : for if, look you, he were my prother I would desire the duke to use his goot pleasure, and put him to execution ; for discipline ought to be used. [friendship ! Pist. Die and be damn'd ! and fico for thy Flu. It is well. Pist. The fig of Spain ! [Exit. Flu. Very goot. Gow. Why, thisisan arrant counterfeit rascal ; I remember him now; a bawd, a cutpurse. Flu. I '11 assure you, 'a uttered as prave 'ords at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well ; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names : and they will learn you by rote where services were done ; — at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy ; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on ; and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths : and what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook. Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower, I do perceive he is not the man that lie would gladly make show to the 'orld he is : if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind. [Drum within.'] Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, and Soldiers. Got bless your majesty ! K. Hen. How now, Fluellen ! cam'st thou from the bridge? Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pridge : the French is gone off, look you ; and there is gallant and most prave passages : marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge ; but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge : I can tell your majesty the duke is a prave man. K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen? Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great : marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbinga church, — one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man : his face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, and flames of fire; and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed and his fire 's out. K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: — and we give express charge that in our marches through the country there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom the gentler gamester is the soonest winner. Tucket sounds. Enter MONTJO&I Mont. You know me by my habit. K. Hen. Well, then, I know thee: what shall I know of thee? Mont. My master's mind. K. Hen. Unfold it. Mont. Thus says my king: — Say thou to Harry of England : Though we seemed dead we did but sleep ; advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuked him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe : — now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom ; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested ; which, in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses his exchequer is too poor ; for the effusion of our blood the

What is thy name? I know thy Mont. Montjoy. [thee back, K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn And tell thy king, — I do not seek him now ; But could be willing to march on to Calais Without impeachment : for, to say the sooth, — Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage, — My people are with sickness much enfeebled ; My numbers lessen'd ; and those few I have Almost no better than so many French ; Who, when they were in health, I tell thee, herald, I thought upon one pair of English legs [God, Did march three Frenchmen. — Yet, forgive me, That I do brag thus ! — this your air of France Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent. Go, therefore, tell thy master here I am ; My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk ; My army but a weak and sickly guard : Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself, and such another neighbour, [Montjoy. Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Go, bid thy master well advise himself: If we may pass, we will ; if we be hinder'd, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood Discolour : and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of ail our answer is but this : We would not seek a battle as we are ; Nor as we are, we say, we will not shun it : So tell your master. Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. [Exit. Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now. K. Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs. [night : — March to the bridge; it now draws toward Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves; And on to-morrow bid them march away. _Exeunt. SCENE VI.— The French Camp near Agtncourt. Enter the Constable of France, the LORD RAMBURES, the DUKE OF ORLEANS, the DAUPHIN, and others. Con. Tut ! I have the best armour of the woild. — Would it were day! Orl. You have an excellent armour ; but let my horse have his due. Con. It is the best horse of Europe. Orl. Will it never be morning? Dau. My Lord of Orleans and my lord highconstable, you talk of horse and armour, — Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world. Dau. What a long night is this ! — I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha! he bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, qui a les nannes de feu\ When I bestride him I soar, I am a hawk : he trots the air ; the earth sings when he touches it ; the basest horn of his hoof is more musica\ than the pipe of Hermes. Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus : he is pure air and fire ; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him : he is indeed a horse ; and all other jades you may call beasts. Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse. Dau. It is the prince of palfreys ; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage. Orl. No more, cousin. Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey : it is a theme as fluent as the sea ; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all : 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on ; and for the world, — familiar to us and unknown, — to lay apart their particular functions and wonder at him. I once wrt a sonnet in his praise, and began thus: Wonder of nature, — Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress. Dau. Then did they imitate that which i composed to my courser: for my horse is my mistress. Orl. You:: mistress bears well. Dau. Me well ; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress. Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back. Dau. So, perhaps, did yours. Con. Mine was not bridled. Dau. O, then, belike she was old and gentle ; and you rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off arid in your strait strossers.

SCENE VI.] KING HENRY V. 549 Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship. Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress. Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade. Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair. Con. I could make as true a boast as that if I had a sow to my mistress. Dau. Le chien est retourne a son propre vomissement, et la truie lavee au boiirbier: thou makest use of anything. Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress ; or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose. Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it? Con. Stars, my lord. [hope. Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I Con. And yet my sky shall not wanti > ijf«V Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away. Con. Even as your horse bears your praises ; who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted. Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! — Will it never be day? — I will trot, to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces. Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: but I would it were morning ; for I would fain be about the ears of the English. Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners? Con. You must first go yourself to hazard ere you have them. Dau. "Tis midnight ; I '11 go arm myself. [Exit. Or I. The Dauphin longs for morning. Ram. He longs to eat the English. Con. I think he will eat all he kills. Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he 's a gallant prince. Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath. Orl. He is, simply, the most active gentleman of France. Con. Doing is activity; and he will still be doing. Orl. He never did harm that I heard of. Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still. Orl. I know him to be valiant Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you. Orl. What 'she? Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he cared not who knew it. Orl. He needs not ; it is no hidden virtue in him. Con. By my faith, sir, but it is ; never anybody saw it but his lackey : 'tis a hooded valour • and when it appears it will bate. Orl. Ill-will never said well. Con. I will cap that proverb with — There is flattery in friendship. Orl. And I will take up that with— Give the devil his due. Con. Well placed : there stands your friend for the devil : have at the very eye of that proverb with — A pox of the devil. Orl. You are the better at proverbs by how much — A fool's bolt is soon shot. Con. You have shot over. Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord high-constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents. Con. Who hath measured the ground? Mess. The Lord Grandpree. Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. — Would it were day ! — Alas, poor Harry of England ! he longs not for the dawning as we do. Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fatbrained followers so far out of his knowledge ! Con. If the English had any apprehension they would run away. Orl. That they lack ; for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces. Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures ; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage. Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples ! You may as well say, that 's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion. Con. Just, just ; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming-on, leaving their wits with their wives : and then give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. [of beef. Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm : come, shall we about it?

55° KING HENRY V. [ACT iv. Orl. It is now two o'clock : but, let me see, — by ten We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. [Exeunt. Enter Chorus. Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time When creeping murmur and the poring dark Fills the wide vessel of the universe. From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night The hum of either army stilly sounds, That the fix'd sentinels almost receive The secret whispers of each other's watch : Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames Each battle sees the other's umber'd face : Steal threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs Piercing the night's dull ear ; and from the tents The armourers, accomplishing the knights, With busy hammers closing rivets up, Give dreadful note of preparation : The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll, And the third hour of drowsy morning name. Proud of their numbers and secure in soul. The confident and over- lusty French Do the low-rated English play at dice ; And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night, Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp So tediously away. The poor condemned English, Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires Sit patiently, and inly ruminate The morning's danger ; and their gesture sad Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats Presenteth them unto the gazing moon [hold So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will beThe royal captain of this ruin'd band [tent, Walking from watch to watch, from tent to Let him cry, Praise and glory on his head ! For forth he goes and visits all his host; Bids them good-morrow with a modest smile, And calls them brothers, friends, and countrymen. Upon his royal face there is no note How dread an army hath enrounded him ; Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour Unto the weary and all-watched night; But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty; That every wretch, pining and pale before, Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks : A largess universal, like the sun, His liberal eye doth give to every one, Thawing cold fear. Then, mean and gentle all , Behold, as may unworthiness define, A little touch of Harry in the night : And so our scene must to the battle fly ; Where, — O for pity ! — we shall much disgrace With four or five most vile and ragged foils, Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous, The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see ; Minding true things by what their mockeries be. [Exit. ACT IV. SCENE I. —

FRANCE. The English Camp at Agincourt. Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOSTER. K. Hen. Gloster, 'tis true that We are in great danger; The greater therefore should our courage be. — Good-morrow, brother Bedford. — God Almighty ! There is some soul of goodness in things evil, Would men observingly distil it out ; For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers, Which is both healthful and good husbandry : Besides, they are our outward consciences And preachers to us all : admonishing That we should dress us fairly for our end. 552 KING HENRY V. [ACT TV, Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after ; for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects : if his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us. Will. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day and cry all, We died at such a place; some swearing; some crying for a surgeon ; some upon their wives left poor behind them ; some upon the debts they owe ; some upon their children rawly left. I am afeared there are few die well that die in a battle ; for how can they charitably dispose of anything when blood is their argument ? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it ; who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection. K. Hen. So if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him : or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irreconciled iniquities, vou may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation : — but this is not so : the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant ; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers: some perad venture have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder ; some of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some making the wars their bulwark that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men they have no wings to fly from God : war is his beadle, war is his vengeance ; so that here men are punished for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel : where they feared the death they have borne life away ; and where they would be safe they perish : then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now

visited. Every subject's duty is the king's ; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed,— wash every mote out of his conscience : and dying so, death is to him advantage ; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained : and in him that escapes it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare. Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head, — the king is not to answer for it. Bales. I do not desire he should answer for me ; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him. K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed. Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully : but when our throats are cut he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser. K. Hen. If I live to see it I will never trust his word after. Will. You pay him then ! That 's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch ! you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You '11 never trust his word after ! come, 'tis a foolish saying. K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round : I should be angry with you if the time were convenient. ' Will. Let it be a quarrel between us if you live. K. Hen. I embrace it. Will. How shall I know thee again ? K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet : then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it I will make it my quarrel. Will, Here 's my glove : give me another of thine. K. Hen. There. Will. This will I also wear in my cap : if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, This is my glove, by this hand I will take thee a box on the ear. [lenge it. K. Hen. If ever I live to see it I will chalWill. Thou darest as well be hanged. K. Hen. Well, I will do it though I take thee in the king's company. Will. Keep thy word : fare thee well. Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends : we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon. K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us ; for they bear them on their shoulders: but it is no English treason to cut French crowns ; and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper. \Exeunt Soldiers.

SCENE I.] KING V. 553 Upon the king ! — let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, our children, and Our sins lay on the King ! We must bear all. O hard condition, twin-born with greatness, Subject to the breath of every fool, [ing ! Whose sense no more can feel but his own wringWhat infinite heart's-ease must kings neglect That private men enjoy ! And what have kings that privates have not too, Save ceremony, — save general ceremony ? And what art thou, thou idol ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer' st more Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers ? What are thy rents ? what are thy comings-in ? 0 ceremony, show me but thy worth ! What is thy soul of adoration ? Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form, Creating awe and fear in other men ? Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd Than they in fearing. What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet, But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness, And bid thy ceremony give thee cure ! Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation ? Will It give place to flexure and low bending ? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee, Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream, That play'st so subtly with a king's repose : 1 am a king that find thee ; and I know Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball, The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, The intertissued robe of gold and pearl, The farced title running 'fore the king, The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp That beats upon the high shore of this world, — No, not all these, thrice gorgeous ceremony, Not all these, laid in bed majestical, Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave Who, with a body fill'd and vacant mind, Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread; Never sees horrid night, the child of hell ; But, like a lackey, from the rise to set Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night Sleeps in Elysium ; next day, after dawn, Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse ; And follows so the ever-running year, With profitable labour, to his grave : And but for ceremony, such a wretch, Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep, Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king. The slave, a member of the country's peace, Enjoys it ; but in gross brain little wots What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace Whose hours the peasant best advantages. Enter ERPINGHAM. Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence, Seek through your camp to find you. K. Hen. Good old knight. Collect them all together at my tent : I '11 be before thee. Erp. I shall do 't, my lord. [Exit. K. Hen. O God of battles 1 steel my soldiers' hearts; Possess them not with fear ; take from them now The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers Pluck their hearts from them ! — Not to-day, O Lord, O, not to-day, think not upon the fault My father made in compassing the crown ! I Richard's body have interred new, And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears Than from it issu'd forced drops of blood : Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay, Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood ; and I have built Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do; Though all that I can do is nothing worth, Since that my penitence comes after all, Imploring pardon. Enter GLOSTER. Glo. My liege! K. Hen. 554 KING HENRY V. [ACT IV. Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides, That their hot blood may spin in English eyes, And dout them with superfluous courage, ha ! Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood? Ho\\ shall we, then, behold their natural tears? Enter a Messenger. Mess. The English are embattled, you French peers. Oon. To horse, you gallant princes ! straight to horse ! Do but behold yon poor and starved band, And your fair show shall suck away their souls, Leaving them but the shales and husks of men. There is not work enough for all our hands ; Scarce blood enough in all their sicidy veins To give each naked curtle-axe a stain, That our French gallants shall to-day draw out, And sheathe for lack of sport : let, us but blow on them, The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them, 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants, — Who in unnecessary action swarm About our squares of battle, — were enow To purge this field of such a hilding foe ; Though we upon this mountain's basis by Took stand for idle speculation, — But that our honours must not. What 's to say? A very little little let us do, And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound The tucket-sonance and the note to mount : For our approach shall so much dare the field That England shall couch down in fear and yield. Enter GRANDPREE. Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France? Yond island carrions, desperate of then- bones, Ill-favouredly become the morning field: Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose, And our air shakes them passing scornfully : Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar 'd host, And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps : The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks With torch-staves in their hand ; and their poor jades Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips, Thegjum down-ropingfrom their pale-dead eyes, And in their pale dull mouths the gimmel-bit Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless; And their executors, the knavish crows, Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour. God's will ! I pray thee, wish not one man more.  find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon ; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth : it is called Wye at Monmouth ; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river ; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well ; for there is figures in all things. Alexander, — Got knows, and you know, — in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Clytus. Gow. Our king is not like him in that : he never killed any of his friends. Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it : as Alexander is kill his friend Clytus, being in his ales and his cups ; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his goot judgments, turned away the fat knight with the great pelly-doublet : he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name. How now ! what means this, herald ? know'st thou not That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom? Com'st thou again for ransom? Mont. No, great king: I come to thee for charitable license, That we may wander o'er this bloody field To book our dead, and then to bury them ; To sort our nobles from our

common men ; For many of our princes, — woe the while ! — Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood ; — So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs In blood of princes ; — and their wounded steeds Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters, Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king, To view the field in safety, and dispose Of their dead bodies ! K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald, I know not if the day be ours or no ; For yet a many of your horsemen peer And gallop o'er the field. Mont. The day is yours. K. Hen. An 't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night ; who, if alive and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear : or if I can see my glove in his cap, — which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive,— I will strike it out soundly. K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath ? Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an 't please your majesty, in my conscience. K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree. Flu. Though he be as goot a gentleman as the tevil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath : if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack sauce as ever his plack shoe trod upon Got's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la. K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow. Will. So I will, my liege, as I live. K. Hen. Who servest thou under? Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege. Flu. Gower is a goot captain, and is goot knowledge and literatured in the wars. K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier. Will. I will, my liege. [Exit. K. Hen. Here, Fluellen ; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap: when Alen9on and myself were down together I pluck'd this glove from his helm : if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alen9on and an enemy to our person ; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost love me. Flu. Your grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggriefed at this glove, that is all ; but I would fain see it once, and please Got of his grace that I might see it. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story, That I may prompt tˆem : and of such as have, I humbly pray them to admit the excuse Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, Which cannot in their huge and proper life Be here presented. Now we bear the king Toward Calais: grant him there; there seen, Heave him away upon your winged thoughts Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach Pales in the flood with men, with wives, and boys, Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deepmouth'd sea, Which, like a mighty whiffler, 'fore the king Seems to prepare his way : so let him land ; And solemnly see him set on to London. So swift a pace hath thought that even now You may imagine him upon Blackheath ; Where that his lords desire him to have borne His bruised helmet and his bended sword Before him through the city : he forbids it, Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride ; Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent, Quite from himself to God. But now behold, In the quick forge and working-house of thought, How London doth pour out her citizens ! The mayor and all his brethren, in best sort, — Like to the senators of the antique Rome, With the plebeians swarming at their heels, — Go forth, and fetch their conquering Csesar in : As, by a lower but by loving likelihood, Were now the general of our gracious empress,-— As in good time he may, — from Ireland coming, Bringing rebellion broached on his sword, How many would the peaceful city quit To welcome him ! much more, and much more cause, Did they this Harry. Now in London place him; — As yet the lamentation of the French Invites the King of England's stay at home ; The emperor's coming in behalf of France, To order peace between them ; — and omit All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd, Till Harry's back-return again to France : There must we bring him; and myself have pla/d The interim, by remembering you 'tis past. Then brook abridgment; and your eyes advance, After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit. ACT V. SCENE L— FRANCE. An English Court of Guar*. Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER. Gow. Nay, that 's right ; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past. Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things : I will tell you, as my friend, Captain Gower: — the rascally, scald, peggarly, lousy, praggmg knave, Pistol, — which you and yourself, and all the 'orld, know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits, — he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and pid me eat my leek : it was in a place where I could not preed no contention with him ; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires. Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock. Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. Enter PISTOL. Got pless you, Auncient Pistol! you scurvy, lousy knave, Got pless you ! Pist. Ha ! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Trojan, To have me fold up Parca's fatal web? Hence ! I am qualmish at the smell of leek. Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurvy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek : because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it. Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats. Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will you be so goot, scald knave, as eat it? Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die. Flu. You say very true, scald knave, — when Got's will is : I will desire you to live in the meantime and eat your victuals : come, there is sauce for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday mountain-squire ; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to : if you can mock a leek you can eat a leek. Gow. Enough, captain : you have astonished him.

562 KING HENRY V, [ACT v. Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days. — Pite, I pray you ; it is goot for your green wound and your ploody coxcomb. Pist. Must I bite? Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt, and out of question too, and ambiguities. Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge : I eat, and eke, I swear — Flu. Eat, I pray you: will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by. Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost see I eat. Flu. Much goot do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is goot for your proken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em ; that is all. Pist. Good. Flu. Ay, leeks is goot : — hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate. Pist. Me a groat ! Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it ; or I have another leek in my pocket which you shall eat. Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge. Flu. If I owe you anything I will pay you in cudgels : you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God b* wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. [Exit. Pist. All hell shall stir for this. Gow. Go, go ; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, — begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, — and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words ? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit. Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now? News have I that my Nell is dead i' the spital Of malady of France ; And there my rendezvous is quite cut off. Old I do wax ; and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgell'd. Well, bawd will I turn, And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand. To England will I steal, and there I '11 steal : And patches will I get unto these scars, And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. [Exit. SCENE II.— TROVES in Champagne. An Apartment in the FRENCH KING'S Palace. Enter at one door, KING HENRY, BEDFORD, GLOSTER, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND, and other Lords ; at another, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, the PRINCESS

KATHARINE, Lords, Ladies, &c.t the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and his Train. K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met ! Unto our brother France, and to our sister, Health and fair time of day ; — joy and good wishes [ine ; — To our most fair and princely cousin KatharAnd, — as a branch and member of this royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriv'd, — We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy ; — And, princes French, and peers, health to you all ! [your face, Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold Most worthy brother England ; fairly met : — So are you, princes English, every one. Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, Of this good day and of this gracious meeting As we are now glad to behold your eyes ; Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them Against the French, that met them in their bent, The fatal balls of murdering basilisks : The venom of such looks, we fairly hope, Have lost their quality ; and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love. K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear. Q. Isa. YouEnglishprincesall,Idosaluteyou. Biir. My duty to you both, on equal love. Great Kings of France and England ! That I have labour'd [ours, With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavTo bring your most imperial majesties Unto this bar and royal interview, Your mightiness on both parts best can witness. Since then my office hath so far prevail'd That face to face and royal eye to eye You have congreeted, let it not disgrace me If I demand, before this royal view, What rub or what impediment there is Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace, Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births, Should not, in this best garden of the world, Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage? Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd ! And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in its own fertility. Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleach'd,

SCENE II.] KING HENRY V. 563 Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair, Put forth disorder'd twigs ; her fallow leas The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts, That should deracinate such savagery ; The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth The freckled coM'slip, burnet, and green clover, Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs, Losing both beauty and utility. [hedges, And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and Defective in their natures, grow to wildness, Even so our houses and ourselves and children Have lost, or do not learn for want of time, The sciences that should become our country ; But grow, like savages, — as soldiers will, That nothing do but meditate on blood, — To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire, And everything that seems unnatural. Which to reduce into our former favour You are assembl'd : and my speech entreats That I may know the let why gentle Peace Should not expel these inconveniences, And bless us with her former qualities. K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace Whose want gives growth to the imperfections Which you have cited, you must buy that peace With full accord to all our just demands ; Whose tenors and particular effects You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands. Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which as yet There is no answer made. K. Hen. Well, then, the peace Which you before so urg'd lies in his answer. Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye O'erglanc'd the articles : pleaseth your grace To appoint some of your council presently To sit with us once more, with better heed To re-survey them, we will suddenly Pass our accept and peremptory answer. K. Hen. Brother, we shall. — Go, uncle Exeter, — [Gloster, — And brother Clarence, — and you, brother Warwick, — and Huntingdon, — go with the king; And take with you free power to ratify, Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best Shall see advantageable for our dignity, Anything in or out of our demands ; And we'll consign thereto. — Will you, fair sister, Go with the princes or stay here with us? Q. ha. Our gracious brother, I will go with them ; Haply a woman's voice may do some good When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on. K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us : She is our capital demand, compris'd

Within the fore-rank of our articles. Q. Isa. She hath good leave. _Exeunt all but K. HEN.,' KATH., and ALICE. K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair ! Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms Such as will enter at a lady's ear, And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart? Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your England. K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate? Kath. Pardonnez-moi) I cannot tell vat is like me. K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel. Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis seniblable & les anges? Alice. Ouiy vraiment, sauf votre grace , ainsi dit-il. K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it. Kath. O ben Dieu! les langues dcs homnics sont pleines de tromperies. K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits? Alice. Out, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits, — dat is de princess. K. Hen. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding : I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say I love you : then, if you urge me further than to say, Do you in faith ? I wear out my suit. Give me your answer ; i' faith, do ; and so clap hands and a bargain : how say you, lady? Kath. Saufvotrehonneur, me understand veil. K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me : for the one I have neither words nor measure, and for the other I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my. back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack -an -apes, never off.

KING HENRY V. [ACT v. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation; only downright oaths, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose Face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier : if thou canst love me for this, take me ; if not, to say to thee that I shall die is true, — but for thy love, by the Lord, no ; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy ; for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places : for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What ! a speaker is but a prater ; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall ; a straight back will stoop ; a black beard will turn white ; a curled pate will grow bald ; a fair face will wither ; a full eye will wax hollow : but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon; or, rather, the sun, and not the moon, — for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me : and take me, take a soldier ; take a soldier, take a king: and what sayest thou, then, to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee. Kath. Is it possible dat I should love de enemy of France ? K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate : but in loving me you should love the friend of France ; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it ; I will have it all mine : and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat. K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French ; which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Quand fai la possession de France, et quand vous avez la possession de moi, — let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed ! — done votre est France et vous ties mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me. Katk. Sauf votre honneur, le Fran$ais que vous parlez est meilleur que I Anglais lequel je parle. K. Hen. No, faith, is 't not, Kate : but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English, — Canst thou love me? Kath. I cannot tell. K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate ? I '11 ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me : and at night, when you come into your closet, you '11 question this gentlewoman about me ; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully ; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st mine, Kate, — as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, — I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder : shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce? Kath. I do not know dat. K. Hen. No ; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy ; and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon tres chere et divine deesse? Kath. Your majeste'&iQfausse French enough to deceive de most sage damoiselle dat is en France. K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate : by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me ; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now, beshrew my father's ambition ! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me : therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better I shall appear : my comfort is that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my fece : thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst ; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better : — and therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand and say, — Harry of England, I am thine : which word thou shaft no sooner bless mine ear withal but I will tell thee aloud, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine ; who, though I speak it before his face,

Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night ! Comets, importing change of times and states, Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky, And with them scourge the bad revolting stars That have consented unto Henry's death ! Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long i England ne'er lost a king of so m«ch worth. Glo. England ne'er had a king until his time. Virtue he had, deserving to command : His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams; His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings ; His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire, More dazzled and drove back his enemies Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces. What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech : He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered. Exe. We mourn in black : why mourn we not in blood ? 568 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT I. And death's dishonourable victory We with our stately presence glorify, Like captives bound to a triumphant car. What ! shall we curse the planets of mishap, That plotted thus our glory's overthrow ? Or shall we think the subtle- witted French Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him, By magic verses have contriv'd his end ? Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings, Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day So dreadful will not be as was his sight. The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought : The church's prayers made him so prosperous. Glo. The church ! where is it ? Had not church-men pray'd, His thread of life had not so soon decayed : None do you like but an effeminate prince, Whom, like a school-boy, you may overawe. Win. Gloster, whate'er we like, thou art protector, And lookest to command the prince and realm. Thy wife is proud ; she hoideth thee in awe More than God or religious churchmen may. Glo. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh ; [go'st, And ne'er throughout the year to church thou Except it be to pray against thy foes. Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace ! Let 's to the altar : — heralds, wait on us : — Instead of gold, we '11 offer up our arms ; Since arms avail not, now that Henry 's dead. — Posterity, await for wretched years, When at their mother's moisten'd eyes babes shall suck ; Our isle be made a marish of salt tears, And none but women left to wail the dead. — Henry the Fifth ! thy ghost I invocate ; Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils ! Combat with adverse planets in the heavens ! A far more glorious star thy soul will make Than Julius Caesar or bright — Enter a Messenger. Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all ! Sad tidings bring I to you out of France, Of loss, of ! :er, and discomfiture : Guienne, Champaigne, Rheims, Orleans, Paris, Guysors, Poictiers, are all quite lost. Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse? Speak softly ; or the loss of those great towns Will make him burst his lead and rise from death. Glo. Is Paris lost ? is Rouen yielded up ? If Henry were recall'd to life again, These news would cause him once more yield the ghost. [us'd ? Exe. How were they lost ? what treachery was Mess. No treachery but want of men and money. Among the soldiers this is muttered, — That here you maintain several factions ; And whilst a field

should be despatch'd and fought, You are disputing of your generals : One would have ling'ring wars, with little cost ; Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings ; A third man thinks, without expense at all, By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd. Awake, awake, English nobility ! Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot : Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms ; Of England's coat one half is cut away. Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral, These tidings would call forth her flowing tides. Bed. Me they concern ; regent I am of France. — [France. — Give me my steeled coat ! I '11 fight for Away with these disgraceful wailing robes ! Wounds will I lend the French, instead of eyes, To weep their intermissive miseries. Enter a second Messenger. 2 Mess. Lords, view these letters, full of bad mischance. France is revolted from the English quite, Except seme petty towns of no import : The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims; The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd ; Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part; The Duke of Alencon flieth to his side. Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! all fly to him! O, whither shall we fly from this reproach? Glo. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats : — Bedford, if thou be slack I '11 fight it out. Bed. Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness? An army have I muster'd in my thoughts, Wherewith already France is overrun. Enter a third Messenger. 3 Mess. My gracious lords, — to add to your laments, [hearse, — Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's I must inform you of a dismal fight Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French. Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? is't so? [thrown : 3 Mess. O, no ; wherein Lord Talbot was o'erThe circumstance I '11 tell you more at large.

SCRNE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 569 The tenth of August last this dreadful lord, Retiring from the siege of Orleans, Having full scarce six thousand in his troop, By three-and-twenty thousand of the French Was round encompassed and set upon. No leisure had he to enrank his men ; He wanted pikes to set before his archers ; Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges, They pitched in the ground confusedly, To keep the horsemen off from breaking in. More than three hours the fight continued ; Where valiant Talbot, above human thought, Enacted wonders with his sword and lance : Hundreds he 'sent to hell, and none durst stand him ; Here, there, and everywhere, enrag'd he flew : The French exclaim'd the devil was in arms ; All the whole army stood agaz'd on him : His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit, A Talbot ! a Talbot ! cried out amain, And rush'd into the bowels of the battle. Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward : He, being in the vaward, — plac'd behind, With purpose to relieve and follow them, — Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke. Hence grew the general wreck and massacre ; Enclosed were they with their enemies : A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace, Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back ; Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength, Durst not presume to look once in the face. Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself, For living idly here in pomp and ease, Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid, Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd. 3 Mess. O no, he lives ; but is took prisoner, And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford: Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise. Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay : I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne, — His crown shall be the ransom of my friend ; Four of their lords I '11 change for one of ouˆs. — Farewell, my masters ; to my task will I ; Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make, To keep our great Saint George's feast withal : Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take, Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake. [sieg'd ; 3 Mess. So you had need ; for Orleans is beThe English army is grown weak and feint : The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply, And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, Since they, so few, watch such a multitude. Exe. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn, Either to quell the Dauphin utterly, Or bring him in obedience to your yoke. Bed. I do remember it ; and here take my leave, To go about my preparation. \Exit. Glo. I'll to the Tower, with all the haste I can, To view the artillery and munition ; And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit. Exe. To Eltham will I, where the young king is, Being ordain'd his special governor ; And for his safety there I '11 best devise. [Exit. Win. Each hath his place and function to attend : I am left out ; for me nothing remains. But long I will not be Jack-out-of-orBce : The king from Eltham I intend to steal, And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. [Exit. Scene closes. • ; u-iorfJ wpfi-'M h.folp SCENE II. — FRANCE. Before Orleans. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces ; ALENC.ON, REIGNIER, and others. ,::,:> Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens, So in the earth, to this day is not known : Late did he shine upon the English side ; Now we are victors, upon rs he smiles. What towns of any moment but we have ? At pleasure here we lie near Orleans ; Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts, Faintly besiege us one hour in a month. Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves : Either they must be dieted like mules, And have their provender tied to their mouths, Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice. Reig. Let 's raise the siege : why live we idly here ? Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear : Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury ; And he may well in fretting spend his gall, — Nor men nor money hath he to make war. Char. Sound, sound alarum ! we will rush on them. Now for the honour of the forlorn French ! — Him I forgive my death that killeth me, When he sees me go back one foot or flee. [Exeunt.

FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT I. Alarums; excursions ; afterwards a retreat Re-enter CHARLES, ALENˆON, REIGNIER, and others. Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I !— Dogs ! cowards ! dastards ! I would ne'er have fled But that they left me midst my enemies. Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide ; He fighteth as one weary of his life. The other lords, like lions wanting food, Do rush upon us as their hungry prey. Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records, England all Olivers and Rowlands bred During the time Edward the Third did reign. More truly now may this be verified ; For none but Samsons and Goliasses It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten ! Lean raw-bon'd rascals ! who would e'er suppose They had such courage and audacity ? Char. Let 's leave this town ; for they are hair-brain'd slaves, And hunger will enforce them to be more eager : Of old I know them ; rather with their teeth The walls they '11 tear down than forsake the siege. Reig. I think, by some odd gimmers or device, Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike on ; Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do. By my consent, we '11 even let them alone. Alen. Be it so. Enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS. Bast. Where 's the Prince Dauphin ? I have news for him. [us. Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd : Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence ? Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand : A holy maid hither with me I bring, Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven, Ordained is to raise this tedious siege, And drive the English forth the bounds of France. The spirit of deep prophecy she hath, Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome : What 's past and what 's to come she can descry. Speak, shall I call her in ? Believe my words, For they are certain and infallible. Char. Go, call her in. [Exit BASTARD.] But first, to try her skill, Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place : Question her proudly ; let thy looks be stern : By this means shall we sound what skill she hath. [Retires. Re-enter the BASTARD OF ORLEANS, with LA PUCELLE. Reig. Fair maid, is 't thou wilt do these wondrous feats ? Puc. Reignier, is 't thou that thinkest to beguile me ?— [behind ; Where is the Dauphin ?— Come, come from I know thee well, though never seen before. Be not amaz'd, there 's nothing hid from me : In private will I talk with thee apart. — Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile. Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash. [daughter, Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's My wit untrain'd in any kind of art. Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd To shine on my contemptible estate : Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs, And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks, God's mother deigned to appear to me, And in a vision full of majesty Will'd me to leave my base vocation, And free my country from calamity : Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success : In complete glory she reveal'd herself ; And whereas I was black and swart before, With those clear rays which she infus'd on me, That beauty am I bless'd with which you see. Ask me what question thou canst possible, And I will answer unpremeditated : My courage try by combat if thou dar'st, And thou shall find that I exceed my sex. Resolve on this, — thou shalt be fortunate If thou receive me for thy warlike mate. Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms : Only this proof I'll of thy valour make, — In single combat thou shalt buckle with me ; And if thou vanquishes!, thy words are true : Otherwise I renounce all confidence. Puc. I am prepar'd : here is my keen-edg'd sword, Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side ; The which at Touraine, in Saint Katherine's churchyard, Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth. Char. Then come, o' God's name ; I fear no woman. Puc. And while I live I '11 ne'er fly from a man. [They fight. Char. Stay, stay thy hands ! thou art an Amazon, And fightest with the sword of Deborah. Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak. [help me : Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must SCENE II.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. Impatiently I burn with thy desire ; My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd. Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so, Let me thy servant and not sovereign be : ;Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus. PMC. I must not yield to any rites of love, For my profession 's sacred from above : When I have chased all thy foes from hence, Then will I think upon a recompense. Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall. Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk. Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock ; Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech. Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean ? Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know : These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues. Reig. My lord, where are you ? what devise you on ? Shall we give over Orleans, or no ? Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants! Fight till the last gasp ; I will be your guard. Char. What she says I 'il confirm : we '11 fight it out. Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge. This night the siege assuredly I '11 raise : Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days, Since I have entered into these wars. Glory is like a circle in the water, Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself, Till by broad spreading it disperse to naught. With Henry's death the English circle ends ; Dispersed are the glories it included. Now am I like that proud insulting ship Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once. Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove ? Thou with an eagle art inspired, then. Helen, the mother of great Constantine, Nor yet Saint Philip's daughters, were like thee. Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth, How may I reverently worship thee enough ? Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege. Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours ; Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd. Char. Presently we '11 try : — come, let 's away about it ; — No prophet will I trust if she prove false. [Exeunt. SCENE III.— LONDON. Before the Gates of the Tower. Enter the DUKE OF GLOSTER, with his Serving-men in blue coats. Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day : [ance. — Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyWhere be these warders, that they wait not here ? Open the gates : Gloster it is that calls. [Within.] The Lord protect him ! so we answer him : We do no otherwise than we are will'd. Glo. Who willed you ? or whose will stands but mine ? There 's none protector of the realm but I. — Break up the gates, I '11 be your warrantize : Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms ? [GLOSTER'S Servants rush at the Tower-gates. Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? what traitors have we here ? Glo. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear? Open the gates; here's Gloster that would enter. Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble Duke j I may not open ; The Cardinal of Winchester forbids : From him I have express commandment That thou nor none of thine shall be let in. Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him 'fore me, — Arrogant Winchester ? that haughty prelate Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook? Thou art no friend to God or to the king : Open the gates, or I '11 shut thee out shortly, i Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector, [quickly. Or we '11 burst them open if that you come not [GLOSTER's Servants rush again at the Tower-gates. Enter WINCHESTER, with his Serving-men in tawny coats. Win. How now, ambitious Humphry ! what means this ? Glo. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

572 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT i. Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor, And not protector of the king or realm. Glo. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, Thou that contriv'dst to murder our dead lord ; Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin : I '11 canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat, If thou proceed in this thy insolence. Win. Nay, stand thou back ; I will not budge a foot : This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain, To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt, [back : Glo. I will not slay thee, but I '11 drive thee Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth I '11 use to carry thee out of this place. Win. Do what thou dar'st ; I beard thee to thy face. [face ? — Glo. What ! am I dar'd, and bearded to my Draw, men, for all this privileged place ; Blue-coats to tawny-coats. — Priest, beware your beard ; I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly : Under my feet I '11 stamp thy cardinal's hat ; In spite of pope or dignities of church, Here by the cheeks I '11 drag thee up and down. Win. Gloster, thou wilt answer this before the pope. [rope ! — Glo. Winchester goose! I cry, a rope! a Now beat them hence, why do you let them stay?— Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array. — Out, tawny-coats ! — Out, scarlet hypocrite ! GLOSTER and his Servants attack the other Party. In the tumult, enter the Mayor of London and Officers. May. Fie, lords ! that you, being supreme magistrates, Thus contumeliously should break the peace! Glo. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs : Here 's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king, Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use. Win. Here 's Gloster, too, a foe to citizens ; One that still motions war, and never peace', O'ercharging your free purses with large fines ; That seeks to overthrow religion, Because he is protector of the realm ; And would have armour here out of the Tower, To crown himself king and suppress the prince. Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. [Here they skirmish again. May. Naught rests for me, in this tumultuous strife, But to make open proclamation : — Come, officer, as loud as e'er thou canst. Off. [Reads. ~\ All manner of men assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highnessˆ name, to repair to your several dwelling-places ; and not to wear, handle, or use any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death Glo. Cardinal,

I '11 be no breaker of the law : But we shall meet and break our minds at large. Win. Gloster, we '11 meet, to thy dear cost, be sure: Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work. May. I '11 call for clubs if you will not away: — This cardinal 's more haughty than the devil. Glo. Mayor, farewell : thou dost but what thou mayst. Win. Abominable Gloster ! guard thy head ; For I intend to have it ere long. [Exeunt severally, GLO. and WIN. , with their Servants. May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart. — Good God, these nobles should such stomachs bear! I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — FRANCE. Before Orleans. Enter, on the walls, the Master- Gunner and his Son. M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd, And how the English have the suburbs won. Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them, Howe'er, unfortunate, I missed my aim. M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me : Chief master-gunner am I of this town ; Something I must do to procure me grace. The prince's espials have informed me How the English, in the suburbs close intrench'd, Wont, through a secret grate of iron bars In yonder tower, to overpeer the city, And thence discover how with most advantage They may vex us with shot or with assault. To intercept this inconvenience, A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd ; And even these three days have I watch'd if I Could see them. Now do thou watch, for I can stay no longer. If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word ; And thou shalt find me at the governor's. [Exit. Son. Father, I warrant you ; take you no care ; I '11 never trouble you if I may spy them.

SCENE I V.I FIRST PART OF KINO HENRY VI. 573 Enter, in an upper Chamber of a Tower, the LORDS SALISBURY and TALBOT, SIR WILLIAM GLANSDALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE, and others. Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd ! How wert thou handled being prisoner? Or by what means gott'st thou to be releas'd? Discourse, I pr'ythee, on this turret's top. Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santrailles ; For him I was exchang'd and ransomed. But with a baser man of arms by far Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me: Which I, disdaining, scorn'd ; and craved death Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd. In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd. [heart ! But, O ! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my Whom with my bare fists I would execute If I now had him brought into my power. Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd. [taunts. Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious In open market-place produc'd they me, To be a public spectacle to all : Here, said they, is the terror of the French, The scarecrow that affrights our children so. Then broke I from the officers that led me, And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground To hurl at the beholders of my shame : My grisly countenance made others fly ; None durst come near for fear of sudden death. In iron walls they deem'd me not secure ; So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread That they suppps'd I could rend bars of steel, And spurn in pieces posts of adamant : Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had, That walk'd about me every minute- whil e ; And if I did but stir out of my bed, Ready they were to shoot me to the heart. Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd; But we will be reveng'd sufficiently. Now it is supper-time in Orleans: Here, through this grate, I can count each one, And view the Frenchmen how they fortify : Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.— Sir Thomas Gargrave and Sir William Glansdale, Let me have your express opinions Where is best plare to make our battery next. Gar. I think at the north gate; for there stand lords. Glan. And I here, at the bulwark of the bridge. Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd, Or with light skirmishes enfeebled. \Shotfrom the town. SAL. and SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE fall. Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners ! Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man ! Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us? — Speak, Salisbury ; at least, if thou canst speak : How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men? One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off!— Accursed tower ! accursed fatal hand That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy ! In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame ; Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars; Whilst any trump did sound or drum struck up, His sword did ne ?r leave striking in the field. — Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail, One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace : The sun with one eye vieweth all the world. — Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands ! — Bear hence his body ; I will help to bury it. Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life ? Speak unto Talbot ; nay, look up to him.— Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort ; Thou shalt not die whiles — He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me, As who should say, When I am dead and gone, Remember to avenge me on the French. — Plantagenet, I will ; and like thee, Nero, Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn : Wretched shall France be only in my name. {Thunder heard ; afterwards an alarum. What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens ? Whence cometh this alarum, and the noise ? Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head : The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd, — A holy prophetess new risen up, — Is come with a great power to raise the siege. [SAL. lifts himself and groans. Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan! It irks his heart he cannot be revengM. — Frenchmen, I '11 be a Salisbury to you : — Pucelle or puzzle, dolphin or dogfish, Your hearts I '11 stamp out with my horse's heels, And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.—

Before one of the Gates. Alarum , skirmishings. Enter TALBOT, ptirsuing the DAUPHIN, drives him z«, and exit : then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them : then re-enter TALBOT. Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force? Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them ; A woman clad in armour chaseth them. Here, here she comes. Enter LA PUCELLE. I '11 have a bout with thee ; Devil or devil's dam, I '11 conjure thee : Blood will I draw on thee, — thou art a witch, — And straightway give thy soul to him thouserv'st. Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee. [They fight. Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail? My breast I '11 burst with straining of my courage, And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder, But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet. [They fight again. Puc. [Retiring.] Talbot, farewell : thy hour is not yet come : I must go victual Orleans forthwith. O'ertake.me if thou canst ; I scorn thy strength. Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men ; Help Salisbury to make his testament : This day is ours, as many more shall be. [LA Puc. enters the town -with Soldiers. Tal. Enter on the walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGN IER, ALENCON, and Soldiers. Fuc. Advance our waving colours on the walls ; Rescu'd is Orleans from the English : — Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word. Char. Divinest creature, Astisea's daughter, How shall I honour thee for this success ? Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens, That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next. — France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess .' — Recover'd is the town of Orleans : More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state. Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town ? Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires, And feast and banquet in the open streets, To celebrate the joy that God hath given us. Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy When they shall hear how we have play'd the men. Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won ;

For which I will divide my crown with her ; And all the priests and friars in my realm Shall in procession sing her endless praise. A statelier pyramis to her i '11 rear Than Rhodope's of Memphis ever was : In memory of her when she is dead, Her ashes, in an urn more precious Than the rich jewell'd coffer of Darius, Transported shall be at high festivals Before the kings and queens of France. No longer on Saint Denis will we cry, But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint. Come in, and let us banquet royally, After this golden day of victory. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 575 ACT II. SCENE I. — Before Orleans. Enter to the Gate a French Sergeant and two Sentinels. Serg, Sirs, take your places and be vigilant : If any noise or soldier you perceive Near to the walls, by some apparent sign Let us have knowledge at the court of guard. i Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.] Thus are poor servitors, When others sleep upon their quiet beds, Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold. Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, and Forces, with scaling-ladders ; their drums beating a dead march. Tal. Lord regent and redoubted Burgundy, — By whose approach the regions of Artois, Walloon, and Picardy are friends to us, — This happy night the Frenchmen are secure, Having all day carous'd and banqueted : Embrace we, then, this opportunity, As fitting best to quittance their deceit, Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery,. Bed. Coward of France ! — how much he wrongs his fame, Despairing of his own arm's fortitude, To join with witches and the help of hell. Bur. Traitors have never other company. — But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure? Tal. A maid, they say. Bed. A maid ! and be so martial ! £ur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere If underneath the standard of the French She carry armour, as she hath begun. Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits : God is our fortress, in whose conquering name Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks. Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot ; we will follow thee. Tal. Not all together : better far, I guess, That we do make our entrance several ways ; That, if it chance the one of us do fail, The other yet may rise against their force. Bed. Agreed : I '11 to yon corner. Btir. And I to this. Tal. And here will Talbot mount or make his grave*-*- •Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right Of English Henry, shall this night appear How much in duty I am bound to both. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds, Hearing alarums at our chamber - doors. Alen. Of all exploitssince first I follow'd arms, Ne'er heard I

of a warlike enterprise More venturous or desperate than this. Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell. Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him. [he sped. Alen. Here cometh Charles : I marvel how Bast. Tut ! holy Joan was his defensive guard. Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE. Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame? ;Aˆ Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal, Make us partakers of a little gain, That now our loss might be ten times so much ? Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend ? At all times will you have my power alike ? Sleeping or waking, must I still prevail, Or will you blame and lay the fault on me ? Improvident soldiers ! had your watch been good This sudden mischief never could have fall'n. Char. Duke of Alencon, this was your default, That, being captain of the watch to-night, Did look no better to that weighty charge. Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept As that whereof I had the government, We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd. Bast. Mine was secure. Reig. And so was mine, my lord. Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night, Within her quarter and mine own precinct I was employ 'd in passing to and fro, About relieving of the sentinels : Then how or which way should they first break in ? [case, Puc, Question, my lords, no further of the How or which way ; 'tis sure they found some place

Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. [Retreat sounded. T'al. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury, And here advance it in the market-place, The middle centre of this cursed town. Now have I paid my vow unto his soul ; For every drop of blood was drawn from him, There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night. And that hereafter ages may behold What ruin happen'd in revenge of him, Within their chiefest temple I '11 erect A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd : Upon the which, that every one may read, Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans, The treacherous manner of his mournful death, And what a terror he had been to France. But, lords, in all our bloody massacre, I muse we meet not with the Dauphin's grace, His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc, Nor any of his false confederates. Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began, Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds, They did, amongst the troops of armed men, Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field. Bttr. Myself, — as far as I could well discern For smoke and dusky vapours of the night, — Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull, When arm in arm they both came swiftly running, Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves, That could not live asunder day or night. After that things are set in order here, We '11 follow them with all the power we have. Enter a Messenger. Mess. All hail, my lords ! Nay, then, I see our wars Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport, When ladies crave to be encounter'd with. — You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit. Tal. Ne'er trust me then ; for when a world of men Could not prevail with all their oratory, Yet hath a woman's kindness overrul'd : — And therefore tell her I return great thanks, And in submission will attend on her. — Will not your honours bear me company ? Bed. No, truly ; it is more than manners will : And I have heard it said, unbidden guests Are often welcomest when they are gone. Tal. Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad That with his name the mothers still their babes? I see report is fabulous and false : I thought I should have seen some Hercules, A second Hector, for his grim aspect, And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs. Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf ! It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp Should strike such terror to his enemies. Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you ; But since your ladyship is not at leisure, I '11 sort some other time to visit you. [Going. Count. What means he now ? — Go ask him whither he goes. Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot ; for my kdy craves To know the cause of your abrupt departure. Tal. Marry, for that she 's in a wrong belief, I go to certify her Talbot 's here. Re-enter Porter with keys. Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner Tal. Prisoner ! to whom ? Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord ; And for that cause I train'd thee to my house. Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me, For in my gallery thy picture hangs : But now the substance shall endure the like ; And I will chain these legs and arms of thine, That hast by tyranny these many years Wasted our country, slain our citizens, And sent our sons and husbands captivate. Tal. Ha, ha, ha ! Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan. Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow Whereon to practise your severity. Count. Why, art not thou the man ? Tal. I am indeed. Count. Then have I substance too. Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself : You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here ; For what you see is but the smallest part And least proportion of humanity : I tell you, madam, were the whole frame here, It is of such a spacious lofty pitch, Your roof were not sufficient to contain 't. Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce ; He will be here, and yet he is not here : How can these contrarieties ap Tal. That will I show you presently. _He winds a Horn. Drums heard ; then a Peal of Ordnance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers. How say you, madam ? are you now persuaded That Talbot is but shadow of himself? These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength, With which he yoketh your rebellious necks, Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns, And in a moment makes them desolate. Count. Victorious Talbot ! pardon my abuse : I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited, And more than may be gather'd by thy shape. Let my presumption net provoke thy wrath ; For I am sorry that with reverence I did not entertain thee as thou art. Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady ; nor misconstrue The mind of Talbot as you did mistake The outward composition of his body. What you have done hath not offended me : No other satisfaction do I crave But only — with your patience — that we may Taste of your wine, and see what cates you have ; For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well. Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured To feast so great a warrior in my house. [Exeunt. SCENE IV.— LONDON. The Temple Garden. Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer, But dare maintain the party of the truth, Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me. War. No, Plantagenet, 'Tis not for fear, but anger that thy cheeks Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses, And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error. Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset ? Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet? Plan. Ay, sharp and

I Keep. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come : We sent unto the Temple, to his chamber ; And answer was return'd that he will come. . Mor. Enough : my soul shall then be satisfied.— Poor gentleman ! his wrong dotn equal mine. Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign, — Before whose glory I was great in arms, — This loathsome sequestration have I had j And even since then hath Richard been obscurM, Depriv'd of honour and inheritance. But now the arbitrator of despairs, Just death, kind umpire of men's miseries, With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me hence . I would his troubles likewise were expir'd That so he might recover what was lost. Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET. i Keep. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck, And in his bosom spend my latter gasp : O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks, That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. — And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock, Why didst thou say of late thou wert despis'd ? Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm ; And, in that ease, I '11 tell thee my disease. This day, in argument upon a case, Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me ; Among which terms he us'd his lavish tongue, And did upbraid me with my father's death : Which obloquy set bars before my tongue, Else with the like I had requited him. Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake, In honour of a true Plantagenet, And for alliance sake, declare the cause My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head. Mor.  Was, for that, — young King Richard thus remov'd, Leaving no heir begotten of his body, — I was the next by birth and parentage ; For by my mother I derived am From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son To King Edward the Third ; whereas he From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree, Being but fourth of that heroic line. But mark : as in this haughty great attempt They laboured to plant the rightful heir, I lost my liberty, and they their lives. Long after this, when Henry the Fifth, Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign, Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York, Marrying my sister, that thy mother was, Again, in pity of my hard distress, Levied an army, weening to redeem And have install'd me in the diadem : But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl, And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers, In whom the title rested, were suppress'd. Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last. Mor. True ; and thou see'st that I no issue have, And that my feinting words do warrant death : Thou art my heir ; the rest I wish thee gather : But yet be wary in thy studious care. Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me : But yet methinks my father's execution Was nothing less than bloody tyranny. Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic ; Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster, And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd. But now thy uncle is removing hence ; As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd With long continuance in a settled place. Plan. O uncle, would some part of my young years Might but redeem the passage of your age ! Mor. Thou dost then wrong me, — as the slaughterer doth Which giveth many wounds when one will kill. Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good ; Only, give order for my funeral : And so, farewell ; and fair be all thy hopes, And prosperous be thy life in peace and war ! [Dies. Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul ! In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage, And like a hermit overpass'd thy days. — Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast ; And what I do imagine, let that rest. — Keepers, convey him hence ; and I myself Will see his burial better than his life. — [Exeimt Keepers, bearing out the body of MOR. Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer, Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort : — And for those wrongs, those bitter injuries, Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house, I doubt not but with honour to redress ; And therefore haste I to the Parliament, Either to be restored to my blood, Or make my ill the advantage of my good. [Exit, ACT III. SCENE I. — LONDON. The Parliament House. Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, GLOSTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK ; the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, and others. GLOSTER offers to put up a bill ; WINCHESTER snatches it, and tears it. Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines, With written pamphlets studiously devis'd, , Humphrey of Gloster ? if thou canst accuse, Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge, Do it without invention, suddenly : As I with sudden and extemporal speech Purpose to answer what thou canst object. Glo. Presumptuous priest ! this place commands my patience, Or thou should^t find thou hast dishonour'd me. Think not, although in writing I preferr'd The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes, That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen : No, prelate ; such is thy audacious wickedness. Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks, As very infants prattle of thy pride. Thou art a most pernicious usurer ; Froward by nature, enemy to peace ; Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems A man of thy profession and degree ; And for thy treachery, what 's more manifest, — In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life, As well at London bridge as at the Tower ? Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted, The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt From envious malice of thy swelling heart. Win. Gloster, I do defy thee. — Lords, vouchsafe To give me hearing what I shall reply. If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,

SCENE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 581 As he will have me, how am I so poor ? Or how haps it I seek not to advance Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling ? And for dissension, who preferreth peace More than I do, — except I be provok'd ? No, my good lords, it is not that offends ; It is not that that hath incens'd the duke : It is because no one should sway but he ; No one but he should be about the king ; And that engenders thunder in his breast, And makes him roar these accusations forth. But he shall know I am as good — Glo. As good ! Thou bastard of my grandfather ! — Win. Ay, lordly sir ; for what are you, I pray, But one imperious in another's throne ? Glo. Am I not protector, saucy priest ? Win. And am not I a prelate of the church ? Glo. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps, And useth it to patronage his theft. Win. Unreverent Gloster ! Glo. Thou art reverent Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life. Win. Rome shall remedy this. War. Roam thither then. Som. My lord, it were your duty to forbear. War. Ay, see the bishop be not overborne. Som. Methinks my lord should be religious, And know the office that belongs to such. War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler ; It fitteth not a prelate so to plead. Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near. War. State holy or unhallow'd, what of that? Is not his grace protector to the king? Plan. Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue, Lest it be said, Speak, sirrah, when you should ; Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords ? Else would I have a fling at Winchester. [Aside. K. Hen. Uncles of Gloster and of Winchester, The special watchmen of our English weal, I would prevail, if prayers might prevail, To join your hearts in love and amity. O, what a scandal is it to our crown That two such noble peers as ye should jar ! Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell Civil dissension is a viperous worm That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth. [A noise within, " Down with the tawny coats." What tumult 's this ? War. An uproar, I dare warrant, Begun through malice of the bishop's men ! [A noise again, " Stones ! Stones ! " Enter thi Mayor of London, attended. May. O, my good lords, — and virtuous Henry, — Pity the city of London, pity us ! The bishop and the Duke of Gloster's men, Forbidden late to carry any weapon, Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones, And, banding themselves in contrary parts, Do pelt so fast at one another's pate, [out : That many have their giddy brains knock'd Our windows are broke down in every street, And we, for fear, compell'd to shut our shops. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we '11 fall to it with our teeth. 2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute. [Skirmish again. Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil, And set this unaccustom'd fight aside. [man 3 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a Just and upright ; and for your royal birth Inferior to none but to his majesty : And ere that we will suffer such a prince, So kind a father of the commonweal, To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate, We, and our wives and children, all will fight, And have our bodies slaughter'd by thy foes. I Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails Shall pitch a field when we are dead. [Skirmish again. Glo. Stay, stay, I say ! And if you love me, as you say you do, Let me persuade you to forbear awhile. K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflict my Soul!— Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold My sighs and tears, and will not once relent ? Who should be pitiful if you be not ? Or who should study to prefer a peace, If holy churchmen take delight in broils ? War. Yield, my lord protector ; — yield, Winchester ; — Except you mean, with obstinate repulse, To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm. You see what mischief, and what murder too, I lath been enacted through your enmity ; Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood. Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield

Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand. K. Hen. Fie, uncle Beaufort ! I have heard you preach That malice was a great and grievous sin ; And will not you maintain the thing you teach, But prove a chief offender in the same ? War. Sweet king ! — the bishop hath a kindly gird. — For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent ! What, shall a child instruct you what to do ? Win. Well, Duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee; Love for thy love and hand for hand I give. Glo. Tal. But yet, before we go, let 's not forget The noble Duke of Bedford, late deceas'd, But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen : A braver soldier never couched lance, A gentler heart did never sway in court ; But kings and mightiest potentates must die, For that 's the end of human misery. [Exeunt. : ?Jfl£ SCENE III. — The Plains near Rouen. Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD, ALEN9ON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces. Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident, Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered : Care is no cure, but rather corrosive, For things that are not to be remedied. Let frantic Talbot triumph for awhile, And like a peacock sweep along his tail ; We'll pull his plumes and take away his train, If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd. Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto, And of thy cunning had no diffidence : One sudden foil shall never breed distrust. Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies, And we will make thee famous through the world. Alen. We '11 set thy statue in some holy place, And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint : Employ thee, then, sweet virgin, for our good. Puc. Then thus it must be ; this doth Joan devise : By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words, We will entice the Duke of Burgundy To leave the Talbot and to follow us. [that, Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do France were no place for Henry's warriors ; Nor should that nation boast it so with us, But be extirped from our provinces. Alen. Hark ! by the sound of drum you may perceive Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward. An English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his Forces. There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread, And all the troops of English after him. A French March. Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and his Forces. Now in the rearward comes the duke and his : Fortune in favour makes him lag behind. Summon a parley ; we will talk with him. [A parley sounded. Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy ! Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy? Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman. Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching hence. Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words. [France ! Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee. Bur. Speak on ; but be not over-tedious. Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France, And see the cities and the towns defac'd By wasting ruin of the cruel foe ! As looks the mother on her lovely babe When death doth close his tender dying eyes, See, see the pining malady of France ; Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds, Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast ! O, turn thy edged sword another way ; Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help ! [bosom One drop of blood drawn from thy country's Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore : Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears, And wash away thy country's stained spots. Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words, Or nature makes me suddenly relent. Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny. Who join'st thou with but with a lordly nation That will not trust thee but for profit's sake ? When Talbot hath set footing once in France, And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill, Who then but English Henry will be lord, And thou be thrust out like a fugitive ? Call we to mind, — and mark but this for proof, — Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe ? And was he not in England prisoner ? But when they heard he was thine enemy, They set him free, without his ransom paid, In spite of Burgundy and all his friends. See, then, thou fight'st against thy countrymen, And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-men. Come, come, return ; return, thou wand'ring lord ; Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms. Bur. I am vanquished ; these haughty words of hers Have batter'd me like roaring cannon-shot, And made me almost yield upon my knees. — Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen ! And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace : My forces and my power of men are yours : So, farewell, Talbot ; I '11 no longer trust thee. Puc. Done like a Frenchman, — turn, and turn again ! Char. Welcome, brave duke ! thy friendship makes us fresh. [breasts. Bast. And doth beget new courage in our Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this, And doth deserve a coronet of gold. Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers ; And seek how we may prejudice the foe. _Exeunt. SCENE IV.— PARIS. A Room in the Palace. Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, and other Lords, VERNON, BASSET, &c. To them TALBOT and some of his Officers. Tal. My gracious prince, — and honourable peers, — Hearing of your arrival in this realm, I have awhile given truce unto my wars, To do my duty to my sovereign : In sign whereof, this arm,— that hath reclaim'd To your obedience fifty fortresses, Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength, Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem, — Lets fall his sword before your highness' feet, And with submissive loyalty of heart Ascribes the glory of his conquest got First to my God and next unto your grace. K. Hen. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloster, That hath so long been resident in France ?

586 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT IV. Glo. Yes, if it please your majesty, my liege. K. Hen. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord ! When I was young, — as yet I am not old, — I do remember how my father said A stouter champion never handled sword. Long since we were resolved of your truth, Your faithful service, and your toil in war ; Yet never have you tasted our reward, Or been reguerdon'd with so much as thanks, Because till now we never saw your face : Therefore, stand up ; and for these good deserts We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury ; And in our coronation take your place. {Exeunt K. HEN., GLO., TAL., and Nobles. Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea, Disgracing of these colours that I wear In honour of my noble Lord of York, — Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st ? Bas. Yes, sir ; as well as you dare patronage The envious barking of your saucy tongue Against my lord the Duke of Somerset. Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is. Bas. Why, what is he? as good a man as York. Ver. Hark ye ; not so : in witness, take ye that. [Strikes him. Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such That whoso draws a sword 'tis present death, Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood. But I '11 unto his majesty, and crave I may have liberty to venge this wrong ; When thou shalt see I '11 meet thee to thy cost. Ver. Well, miscreant, I '11 be there as soon as you ; And, after, meet you sooner than you would. [Exeunt. ACT IV. SCENE I.— PARIS. A Room of State. Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, EXETER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WINCHESTER, WARWICK, TALBOT, the Governor of Paris, and others. Glo. Lord bishop, set the crown upon his head. [sixth ! Win. God save King Henry, of that name the Glo. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath, — [Governor kneels. That you elect no other king but him ; Esteem none friends but such as are his friends, And none your foes but such as shall pretend Malicious practices against his state : This shall ye do, so help you righteous God ! [Exeunt Gov. and his Train. Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE. Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais, To haste unto your coronation, A letter was deliver'd to my hands, Writ to your grace from the Duke of Burgundy. Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee ! [next, I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee To tear the garter from thy craven's leg, — [Plucking it off.

Which I have done, — because unworthily Thou wast installed in that high degree. — Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest : This dastard, at the battle of Patay, When but in all I was six thousand strong, And that the French were almost ten to one, — Before we met, or that a stroke was given, Like to a trusty squire, did run away : In which assault we lost twelve hundred men ; Myself, and divers gentlemen beside, Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners. Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss ; Or whether that such cowards ought to wear This ornament of knighthood, yea or no. Glo. To say the truth, this fact was infamous, And ill beseeming any common man, Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader. Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords, Knights of the garter were of noble birth, Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage, Such as were grown to credit by the wars ; Not fearing death nor shrinking for distress, But always resolute in most extremes. He, then, that is not furnish'd in this sort Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight, Profaning this most honourable order, And should, — if I were worthy to be judge, — Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain That doth presume to boast of gentle blood. K. Hen. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom ! Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a knight : Henceforth we banish thee, on pain of death. [Exit FASTOLFE. And now, my lord protector, view the letter Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy. Glo. What means his grace, that he hath chang'd his style? Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord : For though he seem with

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left? Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out, Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it. K. Hen. Good Lord, what madness rules in brainsick men, When for so slight and frivolous a cause Such factious emulations shall arise ! — Good cousins both, of York and Somerset, Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace. And perish ye, with your audacious prate ! Presumptuous vassals, are you not asham'd With this immodest clamorous outrage To trouble and disturb the king and us? — And you, my lords, — methinks you do not well To bear with their perverse objections ; Much less to take occasion from their mouths To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves : Let me persuade you take a better course. 588 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT iv. My tender years ; and let us not forego That for a trifle that was bought with blood ! Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife. I see no reason, if I wear this rose, [Putting on a red rose. That any one should therefore be suspicious I more incline to Somerset than York : Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both : As well they may upbraid me with my crown, Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd. But your discretions better can persuade Than I am able to instruct or teach : And therefore, as we hither came in peace, So let us still continue peace and love. — Cousin of York, we institute your grace To be our regent in these parts of France : — And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot; And like true subjects, sons of your progenitors, Go cheerfully together, and digest Your angry choler on your enemies. Ourself, my lord protector, and the rest, After some respite, will return to Calais ; From thence to England ; where I hope ere long To be presented, by your victories, With Charles, Alen9on, and that traitorous rout. An if I wist he did, — but let it rest ; Other affairs must now be managed. [Exeunt YORK, WAR., andVER. Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice : For had the passions of thy heart burst out, I fear we should have seen decipher'd there More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils, Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd. But howsoe'er, no simple man that sees This jarring discord of nobility, This shouldering of each other in the court, This factious bandying of their favourites, But that it doth presage some ill event. 'Tis much when sceptres are in children's hands ; But more when envy breeds unkind division ; There comes the ruin, there begins confusion. {Exit. SCENE II.— FRANCE. Before Bourdeaux. Enter TALBOT, with his Forces. Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter: Summon their general unto the wall. Trumpet sounds a parley. Enter, on the walls ˆ the General of the French Forces, and others. English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth, Servant in arms to Harry King of England ; And thus he would, — Open your city gates; Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours, And do him homage as obedient subjects ; And I '11 withdraw me and my bloody power : But if you frown upon this proffer'd peace You tempt the fury of my three attendants, Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire ; Who, in a moment, even with the earth Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers, If you forsake the offer of their love. Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death, Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge ! The period of thy tyranny approacheth. On us thou canst not enter but by death ; For, I protest, we are well fortified, And strong enough to issue out and fight : If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed, Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee : On either hand thee there are squadrons pitch'd, To wall thee from the liberty of flight ; And no way canst thou turn thee for redress But death doth front thee with apparent spoil, And pale destruction meets thee in the face. Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament, To rive their dangerous artillery Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot. Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man, Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit ! This is the latest glory of thy praise That I, thy enemy, due thee withal ; For ere the glass that now begins to run Finish the process of his sandy hour, These eyes, that see thee now well coloured, Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead. [Drum afar off. Hark ! hark ! the Dauphin's drum, a warning bell, Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul ; And mine shall ring thy dire departure out. [Exeunt General, &c. from the Walls Tal. He fables not ; I hear the enemy : — Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings. — O, negligent and heedless discipline ! How are we park'd and bounded in a pale,—

SCENE III.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 589 A little herd of England's timorous deer, Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs ! If we be English deer, be, then, in blood ; Not rascal-like to fall down with a pinch, But rather, moody-mad and desperate stags, Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel, And make the cowards stand aloof at bay : Sell every man his life as dear as mine, And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends. — [right, God and Saint George, Talbot and England's Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight ! SCENE III. — Plains in Cascony. Enter YORK, with Forces ; to him a Messenger. York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again, That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin? Mess. They are return'd, my lord ; and give it out That he is march 'd to Bourdeaux with his power, To fight with Talbot : as he march'd along, By your espials were discovered Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led, Which join'd with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux. York. A plague upon that villain Somerset, That thus delays my promised supply Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege ! Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid ; And I am louted by a traitor villain, And cannot help the noble chevalier: God comfort him in this necessity ! If he miscarry, farewell wars in France. Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY. Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength, Never so needful on the earth of France, Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot, Who now is girdled with a waist of iron, And hemm'd about with grim destruction : To Bourdeaux, warlike duke ! to Bourdeaux, York ! [honour. Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's York. O God, that Somerset, — who in proud heart Doth stop my cornets, — were in Talbot's place ! So should we save a valiant gentleman By forfeiting a traitor and a coward. Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me weep, That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep. Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord! York. He dies, we lose ; I break my warlike word ; We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get; All 'long of this vile traitor Somerset. Lucy. Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul ; [since And on his son, young John, who two hours I met in travel toward his warlike father ! This seven years did not Talbot see his son; And now they meet where both their lives are done. York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have To bid his young son welcome to his grave? Away ! vexation almost stops my breath, That sunder'd friends greet in the hour of death. — Lucy, farewell : no more my fortune can, But curse the cause I cannot aid the man. — Maine, Blois, Poictiers, and Tours are won away, 'Long all of Somerset and his delay. [Exit, -with Forces. Lucy. Thus, while the vulture of sedition Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders, Sleeping neglection doth betray to loss The conquest of our scarce-cold conqueror, That ever-living man of memory, Henry the Fifth : — whiles they each other cross, Lives, honours, lands, and all, hurry to loss. [Exit. SCENE IV.—Oiher Plains of Gascon? . Enter SOMERSET, with his Forces ; an Officer of TALBOT'S -with him. Som. It is too late ; I cannot send them now : This expedition was by York and Talbot Too rashly plotted ; all our general force Might with a sally of the very town Be buckled with : the over-daring Talbot Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure: York set him on to fight and die in shame, That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name. Off. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me Set from our o'er-matched forces forth for aid. Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY. Som. How now, Sir William ! whither were you sent? Lucy. Whither, my lord ! from bought and sold Lord Talbot ; Who, ring'd about with bold adversity, Cries out for noble York and Somerset, To beat assailing death from his weak legions; And whiles the honourable captain there

Too late comes rescue ; he is ta'en or slain : For fly he could not, if he would have fled ; And fly would Talbot never, though he might. Som. Ifhe be dead, brave Talbot, then, adieu ! Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. _Exeunt, SCENE V. — The English Camp nearBourdeaux. Enter TALBOT and JOHN his Son. Tal. O young John Talbot ! I did send for thee To tutor thee in stratagems of war, That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd When sapless age and weak unable limbs Should bring thy father to his drooping chair. But, — O malignant and ill-boding stars ! — Now thou art come unto a feast of death, A terrible and unavoided danger : [horse ; Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest And I '11 direct thee how thou shalt escape By sudden flight : come, dally not, begone. John. Is my name Talbot ? and am I your son? And shall I fly ? O, if you love my mother, Dishonour not her honourable name, To make a bastard and a slave of me ! The world will say, he is not Talbot's blood That basely fled when noble Talbot stood. Tal. Fly to revenge my death, if I be slain. John. He that flies so will ne'er return again. TaL If we both stay we both are sure to die. John. Then let me stay ; and, father, do you fly: Your loss is great, so your regard should be ; My worth unknown, no loss is known in me. Upon my death the French can little boast ; In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost. Flight cannot stain the honour you have won ; But mine it will, that no exploit have done ; You fled for vantage, every one will swear ; But if I bow, they'll say it was for fear. There is no hope that ever I will stay, If the first hour I shrink and run away. Here, on my knee, I beg mortality, Rather than life preserv'd with infamy. Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb ? [womb. John. Ay, rather than I '11 shame my mother's Tal. Upon my blessing I command thee go. John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe. TaL Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee. John. No part of him but will be shame in me. [lose it. Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not John. Yes, your renowned name : shall flight abuse it ? Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain. John. You cannot witness for me, being slain. If death be so apparent, then both fly. Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die ? My age was never tainted with such shame. John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame ? No more can I be sever'd from your side Than can yourself yourself in twain divide : Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I ; For live I will not if my father die. [son, Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon. Come, side by side together live and die ; And soul with soul from France to heaven fly. [Exeunt. SCENE VI.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 591 And left us to the rage of France his sword. Where is John Talbot ? — pause, and take thy breath ; I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from death. John. O, twice my father, twice am I thy son ! The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done, Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate, To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date. Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire, It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age, Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike rage, Beat down Alenc,on, Orleans, Burgundy, And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee. The ireful bastard Orleans, — that drew blood From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood Of thy first fight, — I soon encountered, And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed Some of his bastard blood ; and, in disgrace, Bespoke him thus, — Contaminated ', base, And misbegotten blood I spill of thine , Mean and right poor , for that pure blood of mine Which thou didst force from Talbot ', my brave boy : — Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy, [care, — Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's Art thou not weary, John? how dost thou fare? Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry? Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead : The help of one stands me in little stead. O, too much folly is it, well I wot, To hazard all our lives in one small boat ! If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage, To-morrow I shall die with mickle age : By me they nothing gain an if I stay, — 'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day : In thee thy mother dies, our household's name, My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame : All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay ; All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away. John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart ; [heart : These words of yours draw life-blood from my On that advantage, bought with such a shame, — To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame, — Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly, The coward horse that bears me fall and die ! And like me to the peasant boys of France ; To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance ! Surely, by all the glory you have won, An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son : Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot ; If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot. [Crete, Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Thou Icarus ; thy life to me is sweet : If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side ; And, commendable prov'd, let 's die in pride. [Exeunt. SCENE VII. — Another part of the same. Alarum : excursions. Enter TALBOT wounded, supported by a Servant. Tal. Where is my other life ? — mine own is gone ; — [John ? — O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity, Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee: — When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee, His bloody sword he brandish'd over me, And like a hungry lion did commence Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience ; But when my angry guardant stood alone, Tendering my ruin, and assail'd of none, Dizzy-e/d fury and great rage of heart Suddenly made him from my side to start Into the clustering battle of the French ; And in that sea of blood my boy did drench His overmounting spirit ; and there died My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride, [borne! Serv. O my dear lord ! lo where your son is Enter Soldiers, bearing the body of JOHN TALBOT. Tal. Thou antic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn, Anon, from thy insulting tyranny, Coupled in bonds ot perpetuity, Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky, In thy despite, shall 'scape mortality.— O thou whose wounds become hard-favour'd death, Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath ! Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no j Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe. — Poor boy ! he smiles, methinks, as who should say, [to-day. — Had death been French, then death had died Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms : My spirit can no longer bear these harms. Soldiers, adieu ! I have what I would have, Now my old arms are young Talbot's grave. _Dies. Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leav* ing the two bodies. Enter CHARLES, ALEN90N, BURGUNDY, BASTARD, LA PUCELLB, and P orces. Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in, We should have found a bloody day of this.

592 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [AC Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging- wood, Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood ! Puc. Once I encounter 'd him, and thus I said, Thou maiden youth, be vanquished by a maid: But, with a proud majestical high scorn, He answer'd thus, Young Talbot was not born To be the pillage of a giglot wench: . So, rushing in the bowels of the French, He left me proudly, as unworthy fight. Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble knight : — See where he lies inhersed in the arms Of the most bloody nurser of his harms ! Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder, Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder. Char. O, no ; forbear ! for that which we have fled During the life, let us not wrong it dead. Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY, attended; a French Herald preceding. Lucy. Herald, Conduct me to the Dauphin's tent, to know Who hath obtain'd the glory of the day, Char. On what submissive message art thou sent? Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word; We English warriors wot not what it means. I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en, And to survey the bodies of the dead. Char. For prisoners aslc'st thou? hell our prison is. But tell me whom thou seek'st. [field, Lucy. But where 's the great Alcides of the Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury,— Createc, for his rare success in arms, [ence ; Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and ValLord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield, Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton, [Sheffield, Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of The thrice victorious Lord of Falconbridge ; Knight of the noble order of Saint George, Worthy Saint Michael, and the Golden Fleece; Great Marshal to Henry the Sixth Of all his wars within the realm of France? Puc. Here is a silly-stately style indeed ! The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath. Writes not so tedious a style as this. — Him that thou magnifies! with all these titles, Stinking and fly-blown, lies here at our feet. Lucy. Is Talbot slain, — the Frenchmen's only scourge, Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis? O were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd, That I, in rage, might shoot them at your faces'. O that I could but call these dead to life ! It were enough to fright the realm of France: Were but his picture left among you here, It would amaze the proudest of you all. Give me their bodies, that I may bear themhence, And give them

burial as beseems their worth. Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost, He speaks with such a proud commanding spirit. [here, For God's sake, let him have 'em ; to keep them They would but stink, and putrefy the air. Char. Go, take their bodies hence. Lucy. I '11 bear them hence : But from their ashes shall be rear'd A phoenix that shall make all France afeard. Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt. — And now to Paris in this conquering vein : All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain. {Exeunt. ACT V. SCENE I. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter KING HENRY, GLOSTER, and EXETER. K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope, The emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac? Glo. I have, my lord: and their intent is this,— They humbly sue unto your excellence To have a godly peace concluded of Between the realms of England and of France. K. Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion? [means Glo. Well, my good lord ; and as the only To stop effusion of our Christian blood, And stablish quietness on every side, [thought K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always It was both impious and unnatural That such immanity and bloody strife Should reign among professors of one faith. Glo. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect And surer bind this knot of amity, The Earl of Armagnac, — near knit to Charles, A man of great authority in France, — Proffers his only daughter to your grace In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry. K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas, my years are young ; And fitter is my study and my books

SCENE I.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 593 Than wanton dalliance with a paramour. Yet, call the ambassadors ; and as you please, So let them have their answers every one : I shall be well content with any choice Tends to God's glory and my country's weal. Enter a Legate and two Ambassadors, with WINCHESTER, now CARDINAL BEAUFORT, in a Cardinalˆ habit. Exe. What ! is my Lord of Winchester install'd, And call'd unto a cardinal's degree? Then I perceive that will be verified Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy, — If once he come to be a cardinal ', He '// make his cap co-equal with the crown. K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits Have been consider'd and debated on. Your purpose is both good and reasonable ; And therefore are we certainly resolv'd To draw conditions of a friendly peace ; Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean Shall be transported presently to France. Glo. And for the proffer of my lord your master, I have inform'd his highness so at large, / s, liking of the lady's virtuous gifts, Her beauty, and the value of her dower, He doth intend she shall be England's queen. K. Hen. In argument and proof of which contract. Bear her this jewel [to the Amb.], pledge of my affection. — And so, my lord protector, see them guarded And safely brought to Dover ; where, inshipp'd, Commit them to the fortune of the sea. [Exeunt K. HEN., GLO., EXE., and Ambassadors. Win. Stay, my lord legate: you shall first receive The sum of money which I promised Should be delivered to his holiness For clothing me in these grave ornaments. Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure. [Exit. Win. Now Winchester will not submit, I trow, Or be inferior to the proudest peer. Humphrey of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive That neither in birth or for authority The bishop will be overborne by thee : I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee, Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exit. SCENE II. — FRANCE. Plains in Anjou. Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALEN£ON, LA PUCELLE, and Forces, marching. Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits: 'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt, And turn again unto the warlike French. Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France, And keep not back your powers in dalliance. Puc. Peace be amongst them if they turn to us; Else ruin combat with their palaces ! Enter a Messenger. Mess. Success unto our valiant general, And happiness to his accomplices ! Char. What tidings send our scouts? I pr'ythee, speak. Mess. The English army, that divided was Into two parts, is now conjoin'd in one, And means to give you battle presently. [is ; Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning But we will presently provide for them. Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there : Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear. Puc. Of all base passions fear is most accurs'd : — [thine ; Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be Let Henry fret and all the world repine. Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate ! [Exeunt. SCENE III. — The same. Before Angiers. Alarums: excursions. Entef LA PUCELLE. Puc. The regent conquers and the Frenchmen fly, — Now help, ye charming spells and periapts ; And ye choice spirits that admonish me, And give me signs of future accidents, — You speedy helpers, that are substitutes Under the lordly monarch of the north, Appear, and aid me in this enterprise ! [Thunder. Enter Fiends. This speedy and quick appearance argues pro ->f Of your accustom'd diligence to me. Now, ye familiar spirits that are cull'd Out of the powerful legions under earth, Help me this once, that France may get the field. [They walk about and speak not, O, hold me not with silence over-long !

[They hang their heads. No hope to have redress? — My body shall Pay recompense if you will grant my suit. [They shake their heads. Cannot my body nor blood sacrifice Entreat you to your wonted furtherance? Then take my soul, — my body, soul, and all, Before that England give the French the foil. [They depart. See ! they forsake me. Now the time is come That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest, And let her head fall into England's lap. My ancient incantations are too weak, And hell too strong for me to buckle v/ith : Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust. [Exit. Alarums. Enter French and English, fighting. LA PUCELLE and YORK fight hand to hand: LA PUCELLE is taken. The French fly. York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast : Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms, And try if they can gain your liberty. — A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace ! See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows, As if, with Circe, she would change my shape ! Puc. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be. [man ; York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper No shape but his can please your dainty eye. Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee ! And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds ! York. Fell, banning hag ; enchantress, hold thy tongue ! [while. Puc. I pr'ythee, give me leave to curse aYork. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake. [Exeunt. Alarums. Enter SUFFOLK, leading in LADY MARGARET. Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner. [Gazes on her. 0 fairest beauty, do not fear nor fly ! For I will touch thee but with reverent hands, And lay them gently on thy tender side. 1 kiss these fingers for eternal peace. [Kissing her hand. Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee. Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a king, The King of Naples — whosoe'er thou art. Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd. Be not offended, nature's miracle, Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings. Yet, if this servile usage once offend, Go, and be free again as Suffolk's friend. [She turns away as going. O, stay ! — I have no power to let her pass ; My hand would free her, but my heart says no. As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, Twinkling another counterfeited beam, So seeni3 this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes. Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak : I '11 call for pen and ink, and write my mind : Fie, De-la-Poole ! disable not thyself; Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner? Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight? Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such, [rough. Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk, — if thy name be so, — What ransom must I pay before I pass? For I perceive I am thy prisoner. [suit Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy Before thou make a trial of her love? [Aside. Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay ? [woo'd ; Suf. She's beautiful, and therefore to be She is a woman, therefore to be won. [Aside. Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom — yea or no? Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife; Then how can Margaret be thy paramour? [Aside. Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear. Suf. There all is marr'd ; there lies a cooling card. [Aside. Mar. He talks at random ; sure, the man is mad. Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had. [Aside. Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me. Suf. I '11 win this Lady Margaret. For whom? Why, for my king: tush, that's a wooden thing ! [Aside. Mar. He talks of wood : it is some carpenter. Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied, And peace established between these realms. But there remains a scruple in that too; For though her father be the King of Naples,

It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield. — [Aside. Madam, I have a secret to reveal. [a knight, Mar. What though I be enthrall'd? he seems And will not any way dishonour me. [Aside. Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say. Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescued by the French ; And then I need not crave his courtesy. [Aside. Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause — Mar. Tush ! women have been captivate ere now. [Aside. Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so? Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo. Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose Your bondage happy, to be made a queen? Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile Than is a slave in base servility ; For princes should be free. Suf. And so shall you, If happy England's royal king be free. [me ? Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto Suf. I '11 undertake to make thee Henry's queen ; To put a golden sceptre in thy hand, And set a precious crown upon thy head, If thou wilt condescend to be my — Mar. What? Sttf. His love. Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife. Suf. No, gentle madam ; I unworthy am To woo so fair a dame to be his wife, And have no portion in the choice myself. How say you, madam, — are you so content? Mar. An if my father please, I am content. Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth ! — [Troops come forward. And, madam, at your father's castle- walls We '11 crave a parley, to confer with him. A Parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER on the Walls, Suf. See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner ! Reig. To whom? Suf. To me. Reig. Suffolk, what remedy? I am a soldier, and unapt to weep Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness. Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord : Consent, — and for thy honour give consent, — Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king; Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto ; And this her easy-held imprisonment Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty. Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks? Suf. Fair Margaret knows That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign. Reig. Upon thy princely warrant I descend, To give thee answer of thy just demand. [Exit REIGN IER/TWW the Walls. Suf. And here I will expect thy coming. Trumpets sound. Enter

REIGNIER below. Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories ; Command in Anjou what your honour pleases. Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child, Fit to be made companion with a king: What answer makes your grace unto my suit? Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth To be the princely bride of such a lord, Upon condition I may quietly Enjoy mine own, the county Maine and Anjou, Free from oppression or the stroke of war, My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please. Suf. That is her ransom, — I deliver her; And those two counties I will undertake Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy. Reig. And I again, in Henry s royal name, As deputy unto that gracious king, Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith. Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks, Because this is in traffic of a king : — And yet, methinks, I could be well content To be mine own attorney in this case. — [Aside. I '11 over, then, to England with this news, And make this marriage to be solemniz'd. So, farewell, Reignier : set this diamond safe In golden palaces, as it becomes. Reig. I do embrace thee as I would embrace The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here. Mar. Farewell, my lord: good wishes, praise, and prayers Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going. Suf. Farewell, sweet madam : but hark you, Margaret, — No princely commendations to my king? Mar. Such commendations as become a maid, A virgin, and his servant, say to him. Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

596 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT v. But, madam, I must trouble you again, — No loving token to his majesty? [heart, Mar. Yes, my good lord, — a pure unspotted Never yet taint with love, I send the king. Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her. Alar. Thatfor thyself: — I will not so presume To send such peevish tokens to a king. [Exeunt REIG. and MAR. Suf. O, wert thou for myself !— But, Suffolk, stay; Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth : There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk. Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise : Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount, And natural graces that extinguish art; Repeat their semblance often on the seas, That when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit. SCENE IV. — Camp of the DUKE OF YORK in Anjou. Enter YORK, WARWICK, and others. York. Bring forth that sorceress, condemn'd to burn. Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a Shepherd. Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright ! Have I sought every country far and near, And now it is my chance to find thee out Must I behold thy timeless cruel death? Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I '11 die with thee ! Puc. Decrepit miser ! base ignoble wretch ! I am descended of a gentler blood ; Thou art no father nor no friend of mine. Shep. Out, out ! — My lords, an please you, 'tis not so ; I did beget her, all the parish knows: Her mother liveth yet, can testify She was the first fruit of my bachelorship. War. Graceless, wilt thou deny thy parentage? [been,— York. This argues what her kind of life hath Wicked and vile ; and so her death concludes. Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle ! God knows thou art a collop of my flesh ; And for thy sake have I shed many a tear : Deny me not, I pr'ythee, gentle Joan. Puc. Peasant, avaunt! — You have suborn'd this man, Of purpose to obscure my noble birth. Shep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest The morn that I was wedded to her mother. — Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl. Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time Of thy nativity ! I would the milk [breast Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake ! Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs a-field, I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee ! Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab? O, burn her, burn her ! hanging is too good. [Exit. York. Take her away ; for she hath liv'd too long,

To fill the world with vicious qualities. Puc. First let me tell you whom you have condemn'd : Not me begotten of a shepherd swain, But issu'd from the progeny of kings ; Virtuous and holy ; chosen from above, By inspiration of celestial grace, To work exceeding miracles on earth. I never had to do with wicked spirits : But you, — that are polluted with your lusts, Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents, Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices, — Because you want the grace that others have, You judge it straight a thing impossible To compass wonders but by help of devils. No, misconceived ! Joan of Arc hath been A virgin from her tender infancy, Chaste and immaculate in very thought ; Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd, Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven. York. Ay, ay : — away with her to execution ! War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid, Spare for no fagots, let there be enow : Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake, That so her torture may be shortened. Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts? Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity, That warranteth by law to be thy privilege. — I am with child, ye bloody homicides : Murder not, then, the fruit within my womb5 Although ye hale me to a violent death. York. Now heaven forfend! the holy maid with child ! [wrought : War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye Is all your strict preciseness come to this ? York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling: I did imagine what would be her refuge, [live ; War. Well, go to ; we will have no bastards Especially since Charles must father it. [his : Puc. You are deceiv'd ; my child is none of It was Alengon that enjoy'd my love.

SCENE IV.] FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. 597 York. Alen£on ! that notorious Machiavel ! It dies, an if it had a thousand lives. Puc, O, give me leave, I have deluded you : 'Twas neither Charles nor yet the duke I nam'd, But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd. War. A married man ! that 's most intolerable. York. Why, here's a girl! — I think she knows not well — There were so many — whom she may accuse. War. It 's sign she hath been liberal and free. York. And yet, forsooth, she isa virgin pure. — Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee : Use no entreaty, for it is in vain. Puc. Then lead me hence; — with whom I leave my curse : May never glorious sun reflex his beams Upon the country where you make abode ; But darkness and the gloomy shade of death Environ you, till mischief and despair Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves ! [Exit, guarded. York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes, Thou foul accursed minister of hell ! Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, attended. Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence With letters of commission from the king. For know, my lords, the states of Christendom, Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils, Have earnestly implor'd a general peace Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French ; And here at hand the Dauphin and his train Approacheth, to confer about some matter. York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect? After the slaughter of so many peers, So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers, That in this quarrel have been overthrown, And sold their bodies for their country's benefit, Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace? Have we not lost most part of all the towns, By treason, falsehood, and by treachery, Our great progenitors had conquered? — O Warwick, Warwick ! I foresee with grief The utter loss of all the realm of France. War. Be patient, York : if we conclude a peace, [nants It shall be with such strict and severe coveAs little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby. Enter CHARLES, attended; ALENCON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, and others. Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed [France, That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in We come to be informed by yourselves What the conditions of that league must be. York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes The hollow passage of my prison'd voice, By sight of these our baleful enemies. Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus : That in regard King Henry gives consent, Of mere compassion and of lenity, To ease your country of distressful war, And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace, — You shall become true liegemen to his crown : And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear To pay him tribute and submit thyself, Thou shall be plac'd as viceroy under him, And still enjoy thy regal dignity. [self? Alen. Must he be, then, as shadow of hirr.Adorn his temples with a coronet, And yet, in substance and authority, Retain but privilege of a private man ? This proffer is absurd and reasonless. [sess'd Char. 'Tis known already that I am posWith more than half the Gallian territories, And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king : Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd, Detract so much from that prerogative As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole? No, lord ambassador; I'll rather keep That which I have than, coveting for more, Be cast from possibility of all. York. Insulting Charles ! hast thou by secret means Us'd intercession to obtain a league, And now the matter grows to compromise Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison? Either accept the title thou usurp'st, Of benefit proceeding from our king, And not of any challenge of desert, Or we will plague thee with incessant wars. Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy To cavil in the course of this contract : If once it be neglected, ten to one We shall not find like opportunity. Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy To save your subjects from such massacre And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen By our proceeding in hostility ; And therefore take this compact of a truce, Although you break it when your pleasure serves. [Aside to CHARLES. War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand? Char. It shall; Only reserv'd, y,

598 FIRST PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT v. Nor be rebellious to the crown of England, — Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England. [CHARLES and the rest give tokens of fealty. So, now dismiss your army when ye please ; Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still, For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt. SCENE V. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter KING HENRY, in conference with SUFFOLK ; GLOSTER and EXETER following. K* Hen. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl, Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me : Her virtues, graced with external gifts, Do breed love's settled passions in my heart : And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide, So am I driven, by breath of her renown, Eitfrer to suffer shipwreck or arrive Where I may have fruition of her love. [tale Suf. Tush, my good lord, — this superficial Is but a preface of her worthy praise : The chief perfections of that lovely dame, — Had I sufficient skill to utter them, — Would make a volume of enticing lines, Able to ravish any dull conceit : And, which is more, she is not so divine, So full-replete with choice of all delights, But, with as humble lowliness of mind, She is content to be at your command ; Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents, To love and honour Henry as her lord. K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume. Therefore, my lord protector, give consent That Margaret may be England's royal queen. Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin. You know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd Unto another lady of esteem : [tract, How shall we, then, dispense with that conAnd not deface your honour with reproach? Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths ; Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists By reason of his adversary's odds : A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds, And therefore may be broke without offence. Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that? Her father is no better than ar earl, Although in glorious titles he excel. Suf. Yes, my lord, her father is a king, The King of Naples and Jerusalem ; And of such great authority in France As his alliance will confirm our pe?ce, And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance. Glo. And so. the Earl of Armagnac may do, Because he is near kinsman unto Charles. Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower ; While Reignier sooner will receive than give. Suf. A

dower, my lords ! disgrace not so your king, That he should be so abject, base, and poor, To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love. Henry is able to enrich his queen, And not to seek a queen to make him rich : So worthless peasants bargain for their wives, As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse. Marriage is a matter of more worth Than to be dealt in by attorneyship ; Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects, Must be companion of his nuptial bed : And therefore, lords, since he affects her most, It most of all these reasons bindeth us In our opinions she should be preferr'd. For what is wedlock forced but a hell, An age of discord and continual strife? Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss, And is a pattern of celestial peace. Whom should we match with Henry, being a king, But Margaret, that is daughter to a king? Her peerless feature, joined with her birth, Approves her fit for none but for a king : Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit, — More than in women commonly is seen, — Will answer our hope in issue of a king ; For Henry, son unto a conqueror, Is likely to beget more conquerors, If with a lady of so high resolve As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love. [me Then yield, my lords ; and here conclude with That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she. K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report, My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that My tender youth was never yet attaint With any passion of inflaming love, I cannot tell ; but this I am assur'd, I feel such sharp dissension in my breast, Such fierce alarums both of hope and fear, As I am sick with working of my thoughts. Take therefore shipping; post, my lord, to France ; Agree to any covenants ; and procure That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd King Henry's faithful and anointed queen :

And so, conduct me where, from company, I may revolve and ruminate my grief. {Exit. Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt GLOSTER and EXETER. Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd ; and thus he goes, As did the youthful Paris once to Greece, With hope to find the like event in love, But prosper better than the Trojan did. Her sight did ravish ; but her grace in Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty, Makes me from wondering fall to weeping joys ; Such is the fulness of my heart's content. — Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my love. AIL [Kneeling.'} Long live Queen Margaret, England's happiness ! Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish. Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace, Here are the articles of contracted peace Between our sovereign and the French King Charles, For eighteen months concluded by consent. Glo. [Reads.] Imprimis ~, It is agreed between the French King Charles and William De-laPoole, Marqtiess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, thai the said Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples , Sicilia, and Jerusalem ; and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. — Item, — That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the king her father, — K. Hen. Uncle, how now ! Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord ; Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart, And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further. K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray read on. Car. [Reads. ~\ Item, — It is further agreed between them that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry. K. Hen. They please us well. — Lord marquess, kneel down : We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk, A.nd girt thee with the sword. — Cousin of York, We here discharge your grace from being regent I' the parts of France, till term of eighteen months Be full expir'd.— Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloster, York, Buckingham, Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick ; We thank you all for this great favour done, In entertainment to my princely queen. Come, let us in ; and with all speed provide To see her coronation be perform'd. [Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and SUFFOLK. Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, To you Duke Humphrey must unload hisgrief, — Your grief, the common grief of all the land. What ! did my brother Henry spend his youth, His valour, coin, and people in the wars? Did he so often lodge in open field, In winter's cold and summer's parching heat, To conquer France, his true inheritance? And did my brother Bedford toil his wits To keep by policy what Henry got? Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick, Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy? Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself, With all the learned council of the realm, Studied so long, sat in the council-house Early and late, debating to and fro [a\vei How France and Frenchmen might be ktpt ir And hath his highness in his infancy Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes? And shall these labours and these honours die? Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance, Your deeds of war, and all our counsel die? O peers of England, shameful is this league I Fatal this marriage ! cancelling your farce, Blotting your names from books of memory, Razing the characters of your renown. Defacing monuments of conquer'd France, Undoing all, as all had never been ! Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse, This peroration with such circumstance? For France, 'tis ours ; and we will keep it still Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it if we can ; But now it is impossible we should : Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast, Hath given the cuchy of Anjou and Maine Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style Agrees not with the leanness of his purse. Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for all, These counties were the keys of Normandy : — But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son? War. For grief that they are past recovery : For were there hope to conquer them again My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears. Anjou and Maine ! myself did win them both ; Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer: And are the cities that I got with wounds Deliver'd up again with peaceful words? Mart Dieu ! [cate York. For Suffolk 's duke, may he be sufibThat dims the honour of this warlike isle ! France should have torn and rent my very heart Before I would have yielded to this league.

6O2 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT i. I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives ; And our King Henry gives away his own, To match with her that brings no vantages. Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before, That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth For costs and charges in transporting her ! She should have stay'd in France, and starv'd in France, Before — [hot : Car. My Lord of Gloster, now you grow too It was the pleasure of my lord the king. Glo. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind; 'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike, But 'tis my presence that doth trouble ye. Rancour will out : proud prelate, in thy face I see thy fury : if I longer stay We shall begin our ancient bickerings. — Lordings, farewell ; and say, when I am gone, I prophesied France will be lost ere long. [Exit. Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage. 'Tis known to you he is mine enemy ; Nay, more, an enemy unto you all, And no great friend, I fear me, to the king. Consider, lords, he is the next of blood, And heir-apparent to the English crown : Had Henry got an empire by his marriage, And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west, There 's reason he should be displeas'd at it. Look to it, lords ; let not his smoothing words Bewitch your hearts ; be wise and circumspect. What though the common people favour him, Calling him — Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloster; [voice, Clapping their hands, and crying with loud fesu maintain your royal excellence! With God preserve the good Duke Humphrey! I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, He will be found a dangerous protector. Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign, He being of age to govern of himself? — Cousin of Somerset, join you with me, And altogether, with the Duke of Suffolk, We '11 quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat. [delay ; Car. This weighty business will not brook I '11 to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit. Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride And greatness of his place be grief to us, Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal : His insolence is more intolerable Than all the princes in the land beside : If Gloster be displac'd, he '11 be protector. Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be protector, Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal. {Exeunt BUCKINGHAM and SOMERSET. Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him. Whiles these do labour for their own preferment, Behoves it us to labour for the realm. I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloster Did bear him like a noble gentleman. Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal, — More like a soldier than a man o' the church, As stout and proud as he were lord of all, — Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.— Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age ! Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy housekeeping, Hath won the greatest favour of the commons, Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey : — And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland, In bringing them to civil discipline ; Thy late exploits done in the heart of France, When thou wert regent for our sovereign, Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people : — Join we together for the public good In what we can, to bridle and suppress The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal, With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition; And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's deeds While they do tend the profit of the land. War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land And common profit of his country ! [cause. York. And so says York, for he hath greatest Sal. Then let 's make haste away and look unto the main. [lost, — War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is That Maine which by main force Warwick did win, [last ! And would have kept so long as breath did Main chance, father, you meant ; but I meant Maine, — Which I will win from France, or else be slain. {Exeunt WARWICK, and SALISBURY. York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French ; Paris is lost ; the state of Normandy Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone : Suffolk concluded on the articles ; The peers agreed ; and Henry was well pleas'd To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter. I cannot blame them all: what is't to them? 'Tis thine they give away, and not their own. Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage,

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY Vi. 603 And purchase friends, and give to courtezans, Still revelling like lords till all be gone ; While as the silly owner of thf goods Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands, And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof, While all is shar'd, and all is borne away, Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own : So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue, While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold. Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood As did the fatal brand Althaea burn'd Unto the prince's heart of Calydon. Anjou and Maine both given unto the French ! Cold news for me ; for I had hope of France, Even as I have of fertile England's soil. A day will come when York shall claim his own ; And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts, And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey, And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown, For that 's the golden mark I seek to hit : Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right, Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist, Nor wear the diadem upon his head, Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown. Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve: Watch thou and wake, when others be asleep, To pry into the secrets of the state ; Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love With his new bride and England's dear-bought queen, And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars : Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose, With whose sweet smell the air shall beperfum'd; And in my standard bear the arms of York, To grapple with the house of Lancaster ; And, force perforce, I '11 make him yield the crown, Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit. SCENE II.— LONDON. A Room in the DUKE OF GLOSTER'S House. Enter GLOSTER and the DUCHESS. Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load? Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows, As frowning at the favours of the world? Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth, Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight? What see'st thou there? Kiiig Henry's diadem, Enchas'd with all the honours of the world ? If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face Until thy head be circled with the same. Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold : — What, is 't too short? I '11 lengthen it with mine ; And, having both together heav'd it up, We '11 both together lift our heads to heaven ; And never more abase our sight so low As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground. Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord, Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts ! And may that thought, when I imagine ill Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry, Be my last breathing in this mortal world ! My troublous dream this night doth make me sad. Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I '11 requite it With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream. Glo. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court, Was broke in twain ; by whom I have forgot, But, as I think, it was by the cardinal ; And on the pieces of the broken wand Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset, And William De-la-Poole, first Duke of Suffolk. This was my dream; what it doth bode God knows. Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove Shall lose his head for his presumption. But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke : Methought I sat in seat of majesty In the cathedral church of Westminster, And in that chair where kings and queens are crown'd ; Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'dtome, And on my head did set the diadem. [right : Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outPresumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor ! Art thou not second woman in the realm, And the protector's wife, belov'd of him ? Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command, Above the reach or compass of thy thought ? And wilt thou still be hammering treachery, To tumble down thy husband and thyself From top of honour to disgrace's feet ? Away from me, and let me hear no more ! Duch. What, what, my lord ! are you so choleric With Eleanor for telling but her dream ? Next time I '11 keep my dreams unto myself, And not be check'd. Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am pleas'd again.

6o4 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT i. Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure You do prepare to ride unto Saint Albans, Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk. Glo. I go. — Come, Nell, — thou wilt ride with us ? [sently. Diich. Yes, my good lord, I '11 follow pre[Exeunt GLOSTER and Messenger. Follow I must ; I cannot go before While Gloster bears this base and humble mind. Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood, I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks, And smooth my way upcn their headless necks : And, being a woman, I will not be slack To play my part in fortune's pageant. — Where are you there, Sir John ? nay, fear not, man, We are alone ; here 's none but thee and I. Enter HUME. Hume. Jesus preserve your royal majesty ! Duck. What say'st thou ? majesty ! I am but grace. [advice, Hume. But, by the grace of God and Hume's Your grace's title shall be multiplied. Duck. What say'st thou, man ? hast thou as yet conferr'd With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch, With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer? And will they undertake to do me good ? Hume. This they have promised, — to show your highness A spirit rais'd from depth of under-ground, That shall make answer to such questions As by your grace shall be propounded him. Ditch. It is enough ; I '11 think upon the questions : When from Saint Albans we do make return We '11 see these things effected to the full. Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man. With thy confederates in this weighty cause. {Exit. Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold ; Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume ! Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum : The business asketh silent secrecy. Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch : Gold cannot come amiss were she a devil. Yet have I gold flies from another coast : — I dare not say from the rich cardinal, And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk ; Yet I do find it so : for, to be plain, They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour, Have hired me to undermine the duchess, And buzz these conjurations in her brain. They say, — A crafty knave does need no broker ; Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker. Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near To call them both a pair of crafty knaves. Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck, And her attainture will be Humphrey's fall : Sort how it will,

I shall have gold for all. «A SCENE III. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter PETER and other Petitioners. 1 Pet. My masters, let 's stand close : my lord protector will coˆie this way by and by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill. 2 Pet. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he 's a good man ! Jesu bless him ! 1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I '11 be the first, sure. Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN MARGARET. 2 Pet. Come back, fool ; this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector. Suf. How now, fellow ! wouldst anything with me? I Pet. I pray, my lord, pardon me ; I took ye for my lord protector. Q. Mar. [Glancing at the superscriptions.] To my Lord Protector ! Are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them : — what is thine ? 1 Pet. Mine is, an 't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me. Suf. Thy wife too ! that is some wrong indeed. — What 's yours ? — What 's here ! [Reads.] Against the Duke of Siiffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford. — How now, sir knave ! 2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township. Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown. Q. Afar. What say'st thou? did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown? Peter. That my master was? no, forsooth: my master said that he was ; and that the king was an usurper. Suf. Who is there ? [Enter Servants.] — Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently : — we '11 hear more of your matter before the king. [Exeunt Servants with PETER. Q. Mar. And as for you, that love to be protected Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him. [Tears the petitions. Away, base cullions ! — Suffolk, let them go. All. Come, let 's be gone. [Exeunt Petitioners. Q. Mar. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise, Is this the fashion in the court of England ? Is this the government of Britain's isle, And this the royalty of Albion's king ? What, shall King Henry be a pupil still, Under the surly Gloster's governance ? Am I a queen in title and in style, And must be made a subject to a duke ? I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours Thou rann'st a tilt in honour of my love, And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France, I thought King Henry had resembled thee In courage, courtship, and proportion : But all his mind is bent to holiness, To number Ave-Maries on his beads : His champions are, the prophets and apostles ; His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ ; His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves Are brazen images of canoniz'd saints. I would the college of the cardinals Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome, And set the triple crown upon his head : — That were a state fit for his holiness. Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause Your highness came to England, so will I In England work your grace's full content. Q. Mar. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort [ham, The imperious churchman, Somerset, BuckingAnd grumbling York ; and not the least of these But can do more in England than the king. Suf. And he of these that can do most of all Cannot do more in England than the Nevils : Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers. Q. Mar. Not all these lords do vex me half so much As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife. She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies, [wife : More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's Strangers in court do take her for the queen : She bears a duke's revenues on her back, And in her heart she scorns our poverty : Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her ? Contemptuous base-born callet as she is, She vaunted 'mongst her minions t' other day The very train of her worst wearing gown Was better worth than all my father's lands, Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter. Suf. Madam, myself have lim'dabushforher, And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds That she will light to listen to the lays, And never mount to trouble you again. So, let her rest : and, madam, list to me ; For I am bold to counsel you in this. Although we fancy not the cardinal, Yet must we join with him and with the lords, Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace. As for the Duke of York, — this late complaint Will make but little for his benefit. So, one by one, we '11 weed them all at last, And you yourself shall steer the happy helm. Enter KING HENRY, YORK, and SOMERSET ; DUKE and DUCHESS OF GLOSTER, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK. K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which ; Or Somerset or York, all 's one to me. York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France, Then let him be denay'd the regentship. Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place, Let York be regent ; I will yield to him. [no, War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea or Dispute not that : York is the worthier. Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak. War. The cardinal's not my better in the field. Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick. War. Warwick may live to be the best of all. Sal. Peace, son ! — and show some reason, Buckingham, Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this. Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so. Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself To give his censure: these are no women's matters. [grace Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your To be protector of his excellence ? Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm ; And, at his pleasure, will resign my place. Sitf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence. Since thou wert king, — as who is king but thou?— The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck ; The Danphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas ;

6o6 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VL [ACT I. And all the peers and nobles of the realm Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty. Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags Are lank and lean with thy extortions. Sont. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire Have cost a mass of public treasury. Buck. Thy cruelty in execution Upon offenders hath exceeded law, And left thee to the mercy of the law. Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices and towns in France, — If they were known, as the suspect is great, — Would make thee quickly hop without thy head. [Exit GLOSTER. The QUEEN drops her fan. Give me my fan: what, minion! can you not? [Gives the DUCHESS a box on the ear. I cry you mercy, madam ; was it you? Duck. Was 't I? yea, I it was, proud Frenchwoman : Could I come near your beauty with my nails, I 'd set my ten commandments in your face. K. Hen. Sweet aunt, be quiet ; 'twas against her will. [in time ; Duch. Against her will ! good king, look to 't She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby : [breeches, Though in this place most master wear no She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreveng'd. [Exit. Suck. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor, And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds : She 's tickled now ; her fume needs no spurs, She '11 gallop fast enough to her destruction. [Exit. Re-enter GLOSTER. Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown With walking once about the quadrangle, I come to talk of commonwealth affairs. As for your spiteful false objections, Prove them, and I lie open to the law: But God in mercy so deal with my soul As I in duty love my king and country ! But to the matter that we have in hand : — I say, my sovereign, York is meetest man To be your regent in the realm of France. Suf. Before we make election, give me leave To show some reason, of no little force, That York is most unmeet of any man. York. I '11 tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet: First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride ; Next, if I be appointed for the place, My Lord of Somerset will keep me here, Without discharge, money, or furniture, Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands: Last time, I danc'd attendance on his will Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost. War. That can I witness ; and a fouler fact Did never traitor in the land commit. Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick ! [peace ? War. Image of pride, why should I hold my Enter Servants of SUFFOLK, bringing in HORNER

and PETER. Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason: Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself! York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor ? K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me, what are these ? Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man That doth accuse his master of high treason : His words were these, — that Richard Duke of York Was rightful heir unto the English crown, And that your majesty was an usurper. K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words? Hor. An 't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: God is my witness, I am falsely accused by the villain. Pet. By these ten bones, my lords [holding up his hands ,] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour. York. Base dunghill villain and mechanical, I '11 have thy head for this thy traitor's speech. — I do beseech your royal majesty, Let him have all the rigour of the law. Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me : I have good witness of this ; therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation. K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law? Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge : Let Somerset be regent o'er the French, Because in York this breeds suspicion ; And let these have a day appointed them For single combat in convenient place, For he hath witness of his servant's malice: This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom. K. Hen. Then be it so.— My Lord .of Somerset, We make your grace regent over the French. Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty. Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

SCENE IV.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 607 Pet. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight ; for God's sake, pity my case ! the spite of man prevaileth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me ! I shall never be able to fight a blow : O Lord, my heart ! [hang'd. Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else lie K. Hen. Away with them to prison ; and the day [month. — Of combat shall be the last of the next Come, Somerset, we '11 see thee sent away. [Flourish. Exeunt. SCENE IV.— The same. The DUKE OF GLOSTER'S Garden. Enter MARGERY JOURDAIN, HUME, SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE. Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises. Baling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided : will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms? Hume. Ay, what else? fear you not her courage. Baling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit : but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below ; and so, I pray you, go in God's name, and leave us. [Exit HUME.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth ;— John Southwell, read yor.; — and let us to our work. Enter DUCHESS above, and presently HUME. Duck. Well said, my masters ; and welcome all. To this gear, — the sooner the better. Baling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times: Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night, The time of night when Troy was set on fire ; The time when screech-owls cry, and ban-dogs howl, And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves, — That time best fits the work we have in hand. Madam, sit you, and fear not : whom we raise We will make fast wiftiin a hallow'd verge. [Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining, and make the circle; BOLINGBROKE or SOUTHWELL reads, "Conjuro te," &c. It thunders and lightens terribly ; then the Spirit riseth. Spir. Adsum. M. Jourd. Asmath, By the eternal God, whose name and power Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask ; For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence. [and done ! Spir. Ask what thou wilt : that I had said Baling. First of the king: what shall of him become ? [Reading out of a paper. Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose ; But him outlive, and die a violent death. [As the Spirit speaks, SOUTHWELL writes the answers. Baling. What fates await the Duke of Suffolk ? Spir. By water shall he die and take his end. Baling.

What shall befall the Duke of Somerset? Spir. Let him shun castles ; Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand. — Have done, for more I hardly can endure. Baling. Descend to darkness and the buming lake ! False fiend, avoid ! [Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends. Enter YORK and BUCKINGHAM hastily, with their Guards and others. York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash. — Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an inch. — What, madam, are you there? the king and commonweal Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains : My lord protector will, I doubt it not, See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts. Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king, Injurious duke, that threatest where 's no cause. Buck. True, madam, none at all : — what call you this? [Showing her the papers. Away with them ! let them be clapp'd up close, And kept asunder. — You, madam, shall with us. — Stafford, take her to thee. — We '11 s?e your trinkets here all forthcoming. — All, away! [Exeunt, above, DUCHESS and HUME, guarded; below, SOUTH., BOLING., &c., guarded. York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd her well : A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon ! Now, pray, my lord, let 's see the devil's writ. What have we here? [Reads. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose ; But him outlive, and die a violent death. Why, this is just, Aio te, &acida, Romanes vincere posse.

6o8 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT ii. Well, to the rest : Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk? By water shall he die and take his end. — What shall betide the Duke of Somerset? Let him shun castles; Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles moiinted stand. Come, come, my lords ; These oracles are hardly attain'd, And hardly understood. [Albans, The king is now in progress toward Saint With him the husband of this lovely lady : Thither go these news, as fast as horse can carry them, — A sorry breakfast for my lord protector. Buck. Your grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York, To be the post, in hope of his reward. York. At your pleasure, my good lord. — Who 's within there, ho ! Enter a Servant. Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick To sup with me to-morrow night. — Away ! [Exeunt. ACTIL SCENE I. — Saint Albans. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOSTER, CARDINAL, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers hollaing. Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook, I saw not better sport these seven years' day : Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high ; And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out. K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made, And what a pitch she flew above the rest ! — To see how God in all his creatures works ! Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high. Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty, My lord protector's hawks do tower so well ; They know their master loves to be aloft, And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch. Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind That mounts no higher than a bird can soar. Car. I thought as much ; he would be above the clouds. [that? Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal, — how think you by Were it not good your grace could fly to heaven? K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy ! Car. Thy heaven is on earth ; thine eyes and thoughts Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart ; Pernicious protector, dangerous peer, [weali That smooth'st it so with king and commonGlo. No malice, sir; no more than well beSo good a quarrel and so bad a peer. Glo. As who, my lord? Suf. WThy, as you, my lord, An 't like your lordly lord-protectorship. Glo. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence. Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster. K. Hen. I pr'ythee, peace, Good queen, and whet not on these furious peers; For blessed are the peacemakers on earth. Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make, Against this proud protector, with my sword ! Glo. Faith, holy uncle, would 'twere come to that ! [Aside to CAR. Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside to GLO. Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter ; In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside to CAR. Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st, This evening on the east side of the grove. [Aside to GLO. K. Hen. How now, my lords ! Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster, Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, We had had more sport. — Come with thy twohand sword. [Aside to GLO. Glo. True, uncle. Car. Are ye advis'd? — the east side of the grove? [Aside to GLO. Glo. Cardinal, I am with you. [Aside to CAR. K. Hen. Why, how now, uncle Gloster ! Glo. SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 609 Enter a Townsman of Saint Albans, crying "A Miracle!" Glo. What meˆns this noise ? Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim? Towns. A miracle ! a miracle ! Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle. [shrine, Towns. Forsooth, a blind man at St. Albans' Within this half hour hath receiv'd his sight ; A. man that ne'er saw in his life before. K. Hen. Now, God be prais:d that to believing souls Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair ! Enter the Mayor of St. Albans and his brethren ; and SiMPCOX, borne between two persons in a chair , his Wife and a multitiide following. Car. Here come the townsmen on procession, To present your highness with the man. K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale, Although by his sight his sin be multiplied. Glo. Stand by, my masters : — bring him near the king ; His highness' pleasure is to talk with h?m. K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance, That we for thee may glorify the Lord. What, hast thou been long blind and now restor'd ? Simp. Born blind, an 't please your grace. Wife. Ay, indeed, was he. Suf. What woman is this ? Wife. His wife, an 't like your worship, Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told. K. Hen. Where wert thou born ? Simp. At Berwick in the north, an 't like your grace. K. Hen. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee : Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass, But still remember what the Lord hath done. Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance, Or of devotion, to this holy shrine ? [call'd Simp. God knows, of pure devotion ; being A hundred times and oftener, in my sleep, By good Saint Alban ; who said, Simpcox, come, — Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee. Wife. Most true, forsooth ; and many time and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so. Car. What, art thou lame ? Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me ! Suf. How cam'st thou so ? Simp. A fall off a tree. Wife. A plum-tree, master. Glo. How long hast thou been blind ? Simp. O, born so, master. Glo. What, and wouldst climb a tree ? Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth. [very dear. Wife. Too true ; and bought his climbing Glo. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well that wouldst venture so. Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some damsons, And made me climb, with danger of my life. Glo. A subtle knave ! but yet it shall not serve. — [them: — Let me see thine eyes : — wink now ; — now open In my opinion yet thou see'st not well. Simp. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban. Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of? Simp. Red, master ; red as blood. Glo. Why, that 's well said. What colour is my gown of? Simp. Black, forsooth ; coal-black as jet K. Hen. Why, then, thou know'st what colour jet is of? Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see. Glo. But cloaks and gowns, before this day, a many. Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life. Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what 's my name? Simp. Alas, master, I know not. Glo. What 3s his name? Simp. I know not. Glo. Nor his? Simp. No, indeed, master. Glo. What's thine own name? [master. Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you, Glo. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lyingest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours ; but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. — My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle ; and would ye not think his cunning to be great that could restore this cripple to his legs again ? Simp. O master, that ye could ! Glo. My masters of Saint Albans, have you not beadles in your town, and things called whips? May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace. Glo. Then send for one presently. May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. {Exit an Attendant U

SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT n. Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought out.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away. [alone : Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand You go about to torture me in vain. Re-enter Attendant, with the Beadle. Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. — Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool. Bead. I will, my lord. — Come on, sirrah ; off with your doublet quickly. Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand. [After the Beadle has hit him oncet he leaps over the stool and runs away; and the people follow and cry "A Miracle!" A". Hen. O God, seest thou this, and bear'st so long? [run. Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain Glo. Follow the knave ; and take this drab away. Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need. Glo. Let them be whipped through every market town, till they come to Berwick, whence they came. [Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife, 6rV. Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day. Suf. True; made the lame to leap and flyaway. Glo. But you have done more miracles than I ; You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly. Enter BUCKINGHAM. K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham? [fold. Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unA sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent, — Under the countenance and confederacy Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife, ' The ringleader and head of all this rout, — Have practis'd dangerously against your state, Dealing with witches and with conjurers: Whom we have apprehended in the fact ; Raising up wicked spirits from under ground, Demanding of King Henry's life and death, And other of your highness' privy council, As more at large your grace shall understand. Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. This news, I think, hath turn'd your we edge; 'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour. [Aside to GLOSTER. Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart: your weapon s Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers; And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to tnee, Or to the meanest groom. [wicked ones, K. Hen. O God, what mischiefs work the Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby ! Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tainture of thy nest; And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best. Glo. Madam, for myself to heaven I do appeal, How I have lov'd my king and commonweal : And for my wife I know not how it stands ; Sorry I am to hear what I have heard : Noble she is ; but if she have forgot Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such As, like to pitch, defile nobility, I banish her my bed and company, And give her, as a prey, to law and shame, That hath dishonour'd Gloster's honest name. K. Hen. Well, for this night we will repose us here : To-morrow toward London back again, To look into this business thoroughly, And call these foul offenders to their answers ; And poise the cause in justice' equal scales, Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt. SCENE II.— LONDON. Tht DUKE OF YORK'S Garden. Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK. York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick, Our simple supper ended, give me leave, In this close walk, to satisfy myself, In craving your opinion of my title, Which is infallible, to England's crown. Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full. War. Sweet York, begin : and if thy claim be good, The Nevils are thy subjects to command. York. Then thus: — Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons ; The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales; The second, William of Hatfield ; and the third, Lionel Duke of Clarence ; next to whom Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster; The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York ; The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloster ; William of Windsor was the seventh and last. Edward the Black Prince died before his father , And left behind him Richard, his only son, Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as king,

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 611 Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster, The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt, Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth, Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king, Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came, And him to Pomfret, — where, as all you know, Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously. War. Father, the duke hath told the truth ; Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown. York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right ; For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead, The issue of the next son should have reign'd. Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir. York. The third son, Duke of Clarence, — from whose line I claim the crown, — had issue Philippe, a daughter, [March : Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of Edmund had issue, Roger Earl of March ; Roger had issue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor. Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke, As I have read, laid claim unto the crown ; And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king, Who kept him in captivity till he died. But, to the rest. York. PI is eldest sister, Anne, My mother, being heir unto the crown, Married Richard Earl of Cambridge ; who was son [son. To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth By her I claim the kingdom : she was heir To Roger Earl of March ; who was the son Of Edmund Mortimer ; who married Philippe, Sole daughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence : So, if the issue of the elder son Succeed before the younger, I am king. War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this ? Henry doth claim thecrown from Johnof Gaunt, The fourth son ; York claims it from the third. Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign : It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee, And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock. — Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together j And in this private plot be we the first That shall salute our rightful sovereign With honour of his birthright to the crown. Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king ! York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king fstain'd Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be With heart blood of the house of Lancaster ; And that 's not suddenly to be perform'd, But with advice and silent secrecy. Do you as I do in these dangerous days : Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence, At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition, At Buckingham, and all the crew of them, Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock, That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey : 'Tis that they seek ; and they, in seeking that, Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy. Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full. [Warwick War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Shall one day make the Duke of York a king. York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, — Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick The greatest man in England but the king. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — LONDON. A Hall of Justice. Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, GLOSTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALISBURY; the DUCHESS OF GLOSTER, MARGERY JOURDAIN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard. K. Hen. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloster's wife : In sight of God and us, your guilt is great : Receive the sentence of the law, for sins Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death. — You four, from hence to prison back again ; [To JOURDAIN, &c. From thence unto the place of execution : The witch In Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes, And you three shall bestrangledon thegallows. — You, madam, for you are more nobly born, Despoiled of your honour in your life, Shall, after three days' open penance done, Live in your country here, in banishment, With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man. Duch. Welcome is banisnment; welcome were my death. [thee: Glo. Eleanor, the law, thouseest, hath judged I cannot justify whom the law condemns. — [Exeunt the DUCHESS and the other Prisoners, guarded. Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief. Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground! — I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go ; Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease. K. Hen. Protector be ; and God shall be my hope, My stay, my guide, and lantern to my leet : And go in peace, Humphrey, — no less uelov'd Than when thou wert protector tc thy king. Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years Should be tc be protected like a child. — God and King Hanry govern England's helm! Give up your staff, sir, and ;he king his realm. Glo. My staff! here, noble Henry, is my staff: As willingly do I the same resign As ere thy father Henry made it mine; And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it As others would ambitiously receive it. Farewell, good king : when I am dead and gone, May honourable peace attend thy throne \ {Exit. Q. Mar. Wˆy, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen ; And Humphrey Duke of Gloster scarce himself, That bears so shrewd a main; two pulls at once, — His lady banish'd and a limb lopp'd off: This staff of honour raught, there let it stand Where it best fits tc be, — in Henry's hand. Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays ; Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days. York. Lords, let him go. — Please it your majesty, This is the day appointed for the combat ; And ready are the appellant and defendant, The armourer and his man, to enter the lists, So please your highness to behold the fight. Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried. K. Hen. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit : Here let them end it ; and God defend the right ! York. I never saw a fellow worse bested, Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant, The servant of this armourer, my lords. Enter ; on one side, HORNER and fits Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk ; and he enters bearing, his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it ; a drum before him : at the other side, PETER, with a drum and a similar staff ; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him. 1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Homer, I drink to you in a cup of sack ; and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough. 2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here 's a cup of charneco. 3 Neigh. And here 's a pot of good double beer, neighbour : drink, and fear not your man. Hor. Let fc come, i' faith, and I '11 pledge you a'l ; and a fig for Peter ! 1 Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee : and be not afraid. 2 Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master : fight for credit of the prentices. Peter. I thank you all : drink, and pray for me, I pra>

you ; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. — Here, Robin, an if I die, 1 give thee my apron : — and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer : — and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. — O Lord bless me, I pray God ! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt sc much fence already. Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. — Sirrah, what's thy name? Peter. Peter, forsooth. Sal. Peter ! what more? Peter. Thump. Sal. Thump J then see thou thump thy master well. Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow 1 York. Despatch : — this knave's tongue begins to double. — Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants ! [Alarum. They fight ', and PETER strikes down HORNER. Hor. Hold, Peter, hold ! I confess, I confess treason. [Dies. York. Take away his weapon. — Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way. Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemy in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right ! [sight ; K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our For by his death we do perceive his guilt : And God in justice hath reveai'd to us The truth and innocence of this poor fellow, Which he had thought to have murder5 d wrongfully.— Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward. SCENE IV.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet. — Sirs, what's o'clock? Serv. Ten, my lord. Glo. Ten is the hour that wˆs appointed me To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess: Uneath may she endure the flinty streets, To tread them with her tender-feeling feet. Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook The abject people gazing on thy face, With envious looks, laughing at thy shame, That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets. But, soft ! I think she comes ; and I '11 prepare My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries. Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOSTER in a white sheet, with papers pinned upon her back, her feet bareˆ and a taper burning in her hand ; SIR JOHN STANLEY, a Sheriff, and Officers. Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff. [by. Glo. No, stir not for your lives ; let her pass Duck. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame? [gaze! Now thou dost penance too. Look how they See how the giddy multitude do point, And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on me ! Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks, And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame And ban mine enemies, — both mine and thine! Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell ; forget this grief. Duch. Ah, Gloster, teach me to forget myself! For, whilst I think I am thy married wife And thou a prince, protector of this land, Methinks I should not thus be led along, Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back, And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans. The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet ; And when I start the envious people laugh, And bid me be advised how I tread. Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke ? Trow'st thou that e'er I '11 look upon the world, Or count them happy that enjoy the sun? ' No; dark shall be my light and night my day; To think upon my pomp shall be my hell. Sometime I '11 say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife, And he a prince, and ruler of the land : Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was, As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess, Was made a wonder and a pointing- stock To every idle rascal follower. But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame; Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death Hang over thee, as sure it shortly will ; For Suffolk, — he that can do all in all With her that hateth thee and hates us all, — And York, and impious Beaufort, that falsa priest, Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings, And, fly thou how thou canst, they '11 tangle thee: But fear not thou, unti1 thy foot be snar'd, Nor never seek prevention of thy foes, [awry ; Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear ! thou aimest all I must offend before I be attainted : And had I twenty times so many foes, And each of them had twenty times their power, All these could not procure me any scathe, So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless. Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach? Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away, But I in danger for the breach of law. Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell : I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience ; These few days' wonder will be quickly worn. Enter a Herald. Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's Parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month. [before ! Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein This is close dealing.— Well, I will be there, [Exit Herald. My Nell, I take my leave : — and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the king's commission, [mission stays; Sher. An 't please your grace, here my comAnd Sir John Stanley is appointed now To take her with hi m to the Isle of Man. [here ? Glo. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady Stan. So am I given in charge, may 't please your grace. Glo. Entreat her not the worse in that I pray You use her well : the world may laugh again ; And I may live to do you kindness, if You do it her: and so, Sir John, farewell. Duch. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell ! Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak. [Exeunt GLOSTER and Servants. Duch. Art thon gone too? all comfort go with thee ! For none abides with me : my joy is death, — Death, at whose name I oft have been afeard, Because I wish'd this world's eternity. — Stanley, I pr'ythee go, and take me hence ; I care not whither, for I beg no favour, Only convey me where thou art commanded. Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man; There to be us'd according to your state.

014 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT III. Duch. That 's bad enough, for I am but reproach,— And shall I, then, be us'd reproachfully? Stan. Like to a duchess and Duke Humphrey's lady ; According to that state you shall be us'd. Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare,— Although thou hast been conduct of my sham.t. Sher. It is my office ; and, madam, pardon me. Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharg'd. — Come, Stanley, shall we go? [this sheet, Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off And go we to attire you for our journey. Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet : No, it will hang upon my richest robes, And show itself attire me how I can. Go, lead the way ; I long to see my prison. [Exeunt. ACT III. SCENE I. — The Abbey at Bury. Flourish. Enter to the Parliament KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, and others. K. Hen. I muse my Lord of Gloster is not come : 'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now. Q. Mar. Can you not see ? or will you not observe The strangeness of his alter'd countenance ? With what a majesty he bears himself; How insolent of late he is become, [self? How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himWe know the time since he was mild and affable ; And if we did but glance a far-off look Immediately he was upon his knee, That all the court admir'd him for submission : But meet him now, and be it in the morn, When every one will give the time of day, He knits his brow, and shows an angry eye, And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee, Disdaining duty that to us belongs. Small curs are not regarded when they grin ; But great men tremble when the lion roars, — And Humphrey is no little man in England. First note that he is near you in descent ; And should you fall he as the next will mount. Me seemeth, then, it is no policy, — Respecting what a rancorous irrnd he bears, And his advantage following your decease, — That he should come about your royal person, Or be admitted to your highness' council. By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts ; And when he please to make commotion, 'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him. Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallowrooted ; [garden, Suffer them now, and they '11 o'ergrow the And choke the herbs for want of husbandry. The reverent care I bear unto my lord Made me collect

these dangers in the duke. If it be fond, call it a woman'r. fear ; Which fear, if better reasons can supplant, I will subscribe, and say I wrong'd the duke. My Lord of Suffolk, — Buckingham, — and York, — Reprove my allegation if you can ; Or else conclude my words effectual. [duke ; Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this And had I first been put to speak my mind, I think I should have told your grace's tale. The duchess, by his subornation, Upon my life, began her devilish practices : Or, if he were not privy to those faults, Yet, by reputing of his high descent, — As, next the king, he was successive heir, And such high vaunts of his nobility, — Did instigate the bedlam brainsick duchess By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall. Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep ; And in his simple show he harbours treason. The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb. No, no, my sovereign ; Gloster is a man Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit. Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law, Devise strange deaths for small offences done ? York. And did he not, in his protectorship, Levy great sums of money through the realm For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it? By means whereof the towns each day revolted. Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown, [Humphrey. Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke K. Hen. My lords, at once: — the care you have ot us, To mow down thorns that would annoy our foot, Is worthy praise: but shall I speak my conscience? Our kinsman Gloster is as innocent From meaning treason to our royal person As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove : The duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given To dream on evil or to work my downfall, Q. Mar. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance? Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd.

SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 615 "For he 's disposed as the hateful raven : Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him, For he 's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf. Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit ? Take heed, my lord ; the welfare of us all Hangs on the cutting short that fraudful man. Enter SOMERSET. Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign ! K. Hen. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France? Som. That all your interest in those territories Is utterly bereft you ; all is lost. K. Hen. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God's will be done ! . [France York. Cold news for me ; for I had hope of As firmly as I hope for fertile England. Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud, And caterpillars eat my leaves away : But I will remedy this gear ere long, Or sell my title for a glorious grave. _Aside. Enter GLOSTER. Glo. All happiness unto my lord the king ! Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long. Suf. Nay, Gloster, know that thou art come too soon, Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art : I do arrest thee of high treason here. [blush Glo. Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see me Nor change my countenance for this arrest : A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. The purest spring is not so free from mud As I am clear from treason to my sovereign : Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty? York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France, And, being protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay ; By means whereof his highness hath lost France. Glo. Is it but thought so? what are they that think it? I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay, Nor ever had one penny bribe from France. So help me God, as I have watch'd the night, — Ay, night by night, — in studying good for England! That doit that e'er I wrested from the king, Or any groat I hoarded to my use, Be brought against me at my trial-day ! No ; many a pound of mine own proper store, Because I would not tax the needy commons, Have I dispursed to the garrisons, And never ask'd for restitution. [much. Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God! York. In your protectorship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of, That England was defam'd by tyranny. Glo. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was protector, Pity was all the fault that was in me; For I should melt at an offender's tears, And lowly words were ransom for their fault. Unless it were a bloody murderer, [gers, Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor passenI never gave them condign punishment : Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd Above the felon or what trespass else. Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly answer'd : But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge, Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself. I do arrest you in his highness' name ; And here commit you to my lord cardinal To keep, until your further time of trial, [hope K. Hen. My Lord of Gloster, 'tis my special That you will clear yourself from all suspect : My conscience tells me you are innocent, [ous ! Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerVirtue is chok'd with foul ambition, And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand ; Foul subornation is predominant, And equity exil'd your highness' land. I know their complot is to have my life ; And if my death might make this island happy, And prove the period of their tyranny, I would expend it with all willingness: But mine is made the prologue to their play ; For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril, Will not conclude their plotted tragedy. Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice, And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate ; Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue The envious load that lies upon his heart ; And dogged York, that reaches at the moon, Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back, By false accuse doth level at my life : — And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest, Causeless have laid disgraces on my head, And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up My liefest liege to be mine enemy: — Ay, all of you have laid your heads together, — Myself had notice of your conventicles, — And all to make away my guiltless life. I shall not want false witness to condemn me, Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt: The ancient proverb will be well effected, — A staft is quickly found to beat a dog. Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable : If those that care to keep your royal person From treason's secret knife and traitors' rage Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,

6i6 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT in. And the offender granted scope of speech, 'Twill make them cool in zeal unto your grace. Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here With ignominious words, though clerkly couch'd, As if she had suborned some to swear False allegations to o'erti row his state? Q. Mar. But I can give the loser leave to chide. [deed ; — Glo. Far truer spoke than meant : I lose, inBeshrew the winners, for they play'd me false ! And well such losers may have leave to speak. Buck. He '11 wrest the sense, and hold us here all day : — Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner, [him sure. Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard Glo. Ah, thus King Henry throws away his crutch Before his legs be firm to bear his body ! Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side, And wolves are gnafling who shall gnaw thee first. Ah, that my fear were false ! ah, that it were ! For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear. [Exeunt Attendants with GLOSTER. K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best Do or undo, as if ourself were here. Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the Parliament ? [with grief, K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes ; My body round engirt with misery, — For what 's more miserable than discontent ? — Ah, uncle Humphrey, in thy face I see The map of honour, truth, aiid loyalty ! And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come That e'er I prov'd thee false or fear'd thy faith. What lowering star now envies thy estate, That these great lords, and Margaret our queen, Do seek subversion of thy harmless life ? Thou never didst them wrong, nor no man wrong : And as the butcher takes away the calf, And binds the wretch, and beats it when itstrays, Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house ; Even so, remorseless, have they borne him hence : And as the dam runs lowing up and down, Looking the way her harmless young one went, And can do nought but wail her darling's loss ; Even so myself bewails good Gloster's case With sad unhelpful tears ; and with dimm'd eyes Look after him, and cannot do him good, — So mighty are his vowed enemies. His fortunes I will weep ; and 'twixt each groan, Say, Who's a traitor? Gloster he is none. [Exit. Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams. Henry my lo'-d is cold in great affairs, Too full of foolish pity : and Gloster's show Beguiles him, as the mournful crocodile With sorrow snares

relenting passenger? ; Or as the snake, roll'd in a flowering bavik, With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child, That for the beauty thinks it excellent. Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,— And yet herein I judge my own wit good, — This Gloster should be quickly rid the world, To rid us from the fear we have of him. Car. That he should die is worthy policy; But yet we want a colour for his death : 'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law. Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy : The king will labour still to save his life ; The commons haply rise to save his life ; And yet we have but trivial argument, More than mistrust, thatshows him worthy death. York. So that, by this, you would not have him die. Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I ! York. ;Tis York that hath more reason for his death.— [Suffolk,— But, my lord cardinal, and you, my Lord of Say as you think, anu speak it from your souls,— Wer 't not all one an empty eagle were set To guard the chicken from a hungry kite, As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector ? [death. Q. Mar. So the poor chick en should be sure of Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and wer't not madness, then, To make the fox surveyor of the fold ? Who, being accus'd a crafty murderer, His guilt should be but idly posted over Because his purpose is not executed. No ; let him die, in that he is a fox, By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock, Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood, — • As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege. And do not stand on quillets how to slay him : Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety, Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how, So he be dead ; for that is good deceit Which mates him first that first intends deceit. Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke. Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done ; For things are often spoke and seldom meant : But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,— Seeing the deed is meritorious, And to preserve my sovereign from his foe, — • Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 617 Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk, Ere you can take due orders for a priest : Say you consent, and censure well the deed, And I '11 provide his executioner, — I tender so the safety of my liege. Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing. Q. Mar. And so say I. [it, York. And I : and now we three have spoke It skills not greatly who impugns our doom. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come amain, To signify that rebels there are up, And put the Englishmen unto the sword : Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime, Before the wound do grow uncurable ; For, being green, there is great hope of help. Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop ! What counsel give you in this weighty cause? York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither : 'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd ; Witness the fortune he hath had in France. Sow. If York, with all his far-fet policy, Had been the regent there instead of me, He never would have stay'd in France so long. York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done : I rather would have lost my life betimes Than bring a burden of dishonour home, By staying there so long till all were lost. Show me one scar character'd on thy skin : Men's flesh preserved so whole do seldom win. Q. Mar. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with : — No more, good York; — sweet Somerset, be still :— Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there, Might happi'y have prov'd far worse than his. York. What, worse than naught? nay, then, a shame take all! Som. And in the number, thee that wishest shame ! Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is. The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms, And temper clay with blood of Englishmen : To Ireland will you lead a band of men, Collected choicely, from each county some, And try your hap against the Irishmen? York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty. Suf. Why, our authority is his consent ; And what we do establish he confirms : Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand. York. I am content: provide me soldiers, lords, Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. Sttf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd. [phrey. But now return we to the false Duke HumCar. No more of him ; for I will deal with him, That henceforth he shall trouble us no more. And so break off; the day is almost spent: Lord

Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event. York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days At Bristol I expect my soldiers ; For there I '11 ship them all for Ireland. Stif. I '11 see it truly done, my Lord of York. [Exeunt all but YORK. York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts, And change misdoubt to resolution : Be that thou hop'st to be ; or what thou art Resign to death, — it is not worth the enjoying: Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born man, And find no harbour in a royal heart. Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought; And not a thought but thinks on dignity. My brain, more busy than the labouring spider, Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done, To send me packing with an host of men : I fear me you but warm the starved snake, Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts. 'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me : I take it kindly ; yet be well assur'd You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands. Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band, I will stir up in England some black storm Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell j And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage Until the golden circuit on my head, Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams, Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw. And for a minister of my intent I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman, John Cade of Ashford, To make commotion, as full well he can, Under the title of John Mortimer. In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade Oppose himself against a troop of kerns, And fought so long till that his thighs with darts Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine ; And in the end being rescu'd, I have seen him Caper upright like a wild Morisco, Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.

6i8 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT III. Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern, Hath he conversed with the enemy, And, undiscovered, come to me again, And given me notice of their villanies. This devil here shall be my substitute ; For that John Mortimer, which now is dead, In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble : By this I shall perceive the commons' mind, How they affect the house and claim of Yoik. Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured, I know no pain they can inflict upon him Will make him say I mov'd him to those arms. Say that he thrive, — as 'tis great like he will, — Why, then from Ireland come I with my strength, And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd ; For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be, And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit. SCENE II. — BURY. A Room in the Palace. Enter certain Murderers, hastily. 1 Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk ; let him know We havedespatch'd the duke, as he commanded. 2 Mur. O that it were to do ! — What have we done? Didst ever hear a man so penitent? I Mur. Here comes my lord. Enter SUFFOLK. Suf. Now, sirs, have you despatch'd this thing? I Mur. Ay, my good lord, he 's dead. Suf. Why, that 's well said. Go, get you to my house ; I will reward you for this venturous deed. The king and all the peers are here at hand : — Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well, According as I gave directions? I Mur. 'Tis, my good lord. Stif. Away ! be gone. [Exeunt Murderers. Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, SOMERSET, Lords, and others. K. Hen. Go, call our uncle to our presence straight ; Say we intend to try his grace to-day, If he be guilty, as 'tis published. Suf. I '11 call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit. K. Hen. Lords, take your places; and, I pray you all, Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster Than from true evidence, of good esteem, He be approv'd in practice culpable. Q. Mar. God forbid any malice should prevail That faultless may condemn a nobleman ! Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion ! K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret ; these words content me much. — Re-enter SUFFOLK. How now! why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou? [Suffolk? Where is our uncle? what's the matter, Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord ; Gloster is dead. Q. Mar. Marry, God forfend ! [to-night Car. God's secret judgment: — I did dream The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word. [The KING swoons, Q. Mar. How fares my lord? — Help, lords ! the king is dead. [nose. Som. Rear up his body ; wring him by the Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help! — O Henry, ope thine eyes ! [patient. Suf. He doth revive again: — madam, be K. Hen. O heavenly God ! Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord ? Suf. Comfort, my sovereign ! gracious Henry, comfort ! [fort me ? K. Hen. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk cornCame he right now to sing a raven's note, Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers ; And thinks he that the chirping of a wren, By crying comfort from a hollow breast, Can chase away the first conceived sound ? Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd word? • Lay not thy hands on me ; forbear, I say ; Their touch affrights me, as a serpent's sting. Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight ! Upon thy eye -balls murderous tyranny Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world. Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding:— Yet do not go away : — come, basilisk, And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight ; For in the shade of death I shall find joy, — In life but double death, now Gloster 's dead. Q. Mar. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus? Although the duke was enemy to him, Yet he, most Christian-like laments his death : And for myself, — foe as he was to me, — Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans, Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life, I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans, Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs. And all to have the noble duke alive. What know I how the world may deem of me ? For it is known we were but hollow friends : It may be judg'd I made the duke away ;

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 619 So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded, And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach. This get I by his death : ah me, unhappy ! To be a queen and crown'd with infamy ! K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster, wretched man I [he is. Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face? I am no loathsome leper, — look on me. What, art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf? Be poisonous too, and kill thy forlorn queen. Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's tomb? Why, then, Dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy : Erect his statua, and worship it, And make my image but an alehouse sign. Was I for this nigh wreck'd upon the sea, And twice by awkward wind from England's bank Drove back again unto my native clime ? What boded this but well-forewarning wind Did seem tc say, — Seek not a scorpion's nest, Nor set no footing on this unkind shore? What did I then but curs'd the gentle gusts, And he that loos'd them forth their brazen caves : [shore, And bid them blow towards England's blessed Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock ? Yet ˆEolus would not be a murderer, But left that hateful office unto thee : The pretty-vaulting sea refus'd to drown me ; Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore, [ness : With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkindThe splitting rocks cower'd in the sinking sands, And would not dash me with their ragged sides ; Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they, Might in thy palace perish Margaret. As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs, When from the shore the tempest beat us back, I stood upon the hatches in the storm; And when the dusky sky began to robe My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view, I took a costly jewel from my neck, — A heart it was, bound in with diamonds, — And threw it towards thy land: — the sea receiv'd it ; And so I wish'd thy body might my heart : And even with this I lost fair England's view, And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart, And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles, For losing ken of Albion's wished coast. How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue, — The agent of thy foul inconstancy, — To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did When he to madding Dido would unfold His father's acts, commenc'd in burning Troy ! Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him ? Ah me, I can no more ! die, Margaret ! For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long. Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY. The Commons press to the door. War. It is reported, mighty sovereign., That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means. The commons, like an angry hive of bees That want their leader, scatter up and down, And care not who they sting in his revenge. Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny Until they hear the order of his death. K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true ; But how he died God knows, not Henry : Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse, And comment then upon his sudden death. War. That I shall do, my liege.— Stay, Salisbury, With the rude multitude till I return. [WAR. goes into an inner room ; SAL. retires to the Commons at the door. K. Hen. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts, — My thoughts that labour to persuade my soul Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life! If my suspect be false, forgive me, God ; For judgment only doth belong to thee. Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain Upon his face an ocean of salt tears ; To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk, And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling : But all in vain are these mean obsequies ; And to survey his dead and earthly image, What were it but to make my sorrow greater ? \The folding doors of OM inner Chamber are thrown open, and GLOSTER is discovered dead in his bed; WARWICK and others standing by it. War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body. K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made; For with his soul fled all my worldly solace ; For seeing him, I see my life in death. War. As surely as my soul intends to live With that dread King that took our state upon him To free us from his Father's wrathful curse, I do believe that violent hands were laid Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

 Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue ! What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow? War. See how the blood is settled in his face ! Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless, Being all descended to the labouring heart ; Who, in the conflict that it holds with death, Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy; Which with the heart thjere cools, and ne'er returneth To blush and beautify the cheek again. But see, his face is black and full of blood ; His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd, Staring full ghastly like a strangled man : His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling; His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd And tugg'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd: Look, on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking ; His well-proportioned beard made rough and rugged, Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd. It cannot be but he was murder'd here ; The least of al I these signs were probable. Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death? Myself and Beaufort had him in protection ; And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers. War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes; And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep : 'Tis like you would not feast him like a friend ; And 'tis well seen he found an enemy. Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death. War. Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh, And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter? Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest, But may imagine how the bird was dead, Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak? Even so suspicious is this tragedy. Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk? — where 's your knife ? Is Beaufort termed a kite? — where are his talons? Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping men; But here 's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease, That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart That slanders me with murder's crimson badge : — Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire, That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death. [Exeunt CAR. , SOM. , and others. War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him? Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit, Nor cease to be an arrogant controller, Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times. War. Madam, be still, — with reverence may I say; For every word you speak in his behalf Is slander to your royal dignity. Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour! If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much, Thy mother took into her blameful bed Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock Was graft with crab-tree slip ; whose fruit thou art. And never of the Nevils' noble race. [thee, War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers And I should rob the deathsman of his fee, Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames, And that my sovereign's presence makes me mild, I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech, And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st, That thou thyself was born in bastardy ; And, after all this fearful homage done, Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell, Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men ! Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood, If from this presence thou dar'st go with me. War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence : Unworthy though thou art, I '11 cope with thee, And dosome service to Duke Humphrey's ghost. [Exeunt SUFFOLK and WARWICK. K. Hen. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted ! Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just ; And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel, Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. [A noise -within. Q. Mar. What noise is this? Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn. K. Hen. Why, how now, lords ! your wrathful weapons drawn Here in our presence ! dare you be so bold? — Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here? Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury, Set all upon me, mighty sovereign. Sal. [To the Commons at the door.'} Sirs, stand apart ; the king shall know your mind. — _He comes forward. Dread lord, the commons send you word by me, Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death, Or banished fair England's territories,

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 621 They will by violence tear him from your palace, And torture him with grievous lingering death. They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey died; They say, in him they fear your highness' death ; And mere instinct of love and loyalty, — Free from a stubborn opposite intent, As being thought to contradict your liking, — Makes them thus forward in his banishment. They say, in care of your most royal person, That if your highness should intend to sleep, And charge that no man should disturb your rest, In pain of your dislike, or pain of death ; Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict, Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue, That slily glided towards your majesty, It were but necessary you were wak'd ; Lest, being suffered in that harmful slumber, The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal : And therefore do they cry, though you forbid, That they will guard you, whe'r you will or no, From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is ; With whose envenomed and fatal sting Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth, They say, is shamefully bereft of life. Commons. [Within, ~\ An answer from the king, my Lord of Salisbury ! Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds, Could send such message to their sovereign: But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd, To show how quaint an orator you are : But all the honour Salisbury hath won Is, that he was the lord ambassador Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king. Commons, [Within.'] An answer from the king, or we will all break in ! K. Hen. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me, I thank them for their tender loving care ; And had I not been cited so by them, Yet did I purpose as they do entreat ; For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means : And therefore, — by His majesty I swear, Whose far unworthy deputy I am, — He shall not breathe infection in this air But three days longer, on the pain of death. [Exit SALISBURY. Q. Mar. O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk ! [Suffolk ! K. Hen. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle No more, I say : if thou dost plead for him, Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath. Had I but said, I would have kept my word ; But when I swear, it is irrevocable. — If after three days' space thou here be'st found On any ground that I am ruler of, The world shall not be ransom for thy life. — Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me ; I ha\Te great matters to impart to thee. [Exeunt K. HEN., WAR., Lords, <5rv. Q. Mar. Mischance and sorrow go along with you ! Heart's discontent and sour affliction Be playfellows to keep you company ! There 's two of you ; the devil make a third ! And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps } Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execrations, And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave. Q.Mar. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch ! Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemies ? Suf. A plague upon them ! wherefore should I curse them ? Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan, I would invent as bitter-searching terms, As curst, as harsh, and horrible to hear, Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth, With full as many signs of deadly hate As lean-fac'd Envy in her loathsome cave : My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words ; Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint \ Mine hair be fix'd on end, as one distract ; Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban : And even now my burden'd heart would break, Should I not arse them. Poison be their drink ! Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste ! Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees ! Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks ! Their softest touch as smart as lizard's stings ! Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss ; And boding screech-owls make the concert full 1 All the foul terrors in dark -seated hell — Q. Mar. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou tcrment'st thyself; [glass? And these dread curses, — like the sun 'gainst Or like an overcharged gun, — recoil, And turn the force of them upon thyself. Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave ? Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from, Well could I curse away a winter's night, Though standing naked en a mountain top, Where biting cold would never let grass grow, And think it but a minute spent in sport. Q. Mar. O, let me entreat thee, cease ! Give me thy hand, That I may dew it with my mournful tears ; Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,

622 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT in. To wash away my woeful monuments. O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand, [Kisses his hand. That thou mightst think upon these by the seal, Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee ! So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief; 'Tis but surmis'd whilst thou art standing by, As one that surfeits thinking on a want. I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd, Adventure to be banished myself: And banished I am, if but from thee. Go; speak not to me; even now be gone. — O, go not yet! — Even thus two friends condemn'd [leaves, Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand Leather a hundred times to part than die. Yet now, farewell ; and farewell life with thee ! Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,— Once by the king and three times thrice by thee. 'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou hence ; A wilderness is populous enough, so Suffolk had thy heavenly company : For where thou art, there is the world itself, With every several pleasure in the world ; And where thou art not, desolation. I can no more : — live thou to joy thy life ; Myself to joy in naught but that thou liv'st. Enter VAUX. Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news, I pr'ythee? Vaux. To signify unto his majesty That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death; For suddenly a grievous sickness took him, That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air, Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth. Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost Were by his side ; sometime he calls the king, And whispers to his pillow, as to him, The secrets of his overcharged soul : And I am sent to tell his majesty That even now he cries aloud for him. [king. Q. Mar. Go tell this heavy message to the [Exit VAUX. Ah me ! what is this world ! what news are these ! But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss, Omitting Suffolk's ex;ie, my soul's treasure? Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee, And with the souihern clouds contend in tears, — Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows? [coming; — Now get thee hence: the king, thou know'st, is If thou be found by me, thou art but dead. Suf. If I depart from thee I cannot live : And in thy sight to die, what were it else But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap? Here could I breathe my soul into the air, As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe Dying with mother's dug between its lips : Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes, To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth ; So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul, Or I should breathe it so into thy body, And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium. To die by thee were but to die in jest ; From thee to die were torture more than death : O, let me stay, befall what may befall ! Q. Mar. Away ! though parting be a fretful corrosive, It is applied to a deathful wound. [thee ; To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe I '11 have an Iris that shall find thee out. Suf. I go. Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee. Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woefull'st cask That ever did contain a thing of worth. Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we; This way fall I to death. Q. Mar. This way for me. [Exeunt severally* SCENE III. — LONDON. CARDINAL BEAUFORT'S Bedchamber. Enter KING HENRY, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and others. The CARDINAL in bed; Attendants with him. K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign. Car. If thou be'st death Til give thee England's treasure, Enough to purchase such another island, So thou wilt let me live and feel no pain. K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life Where death's approach is seen so terrible ! War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee. Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will. Died he not in his bed? where should he die? Can I make men live, whe'r they will or no? O, torture me no more ! I will confess. — Alive again ? then snow me where he is : I '11 give a thousand pound to look upon him.— He hath no eyes, the dusi hath blinded them. — Comb down his hair ; look, look ! it stands upright, Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul ! —

SCENE III.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 623 Give me some drink ; and bid the apothecary Bring the strong poison that I bought of him. K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens, Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch ! O, beat away the busy meddling fiend That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul, And from his bosom purge this black despair ! War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin ! Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably. K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be ! Lord Cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss, Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope. — He dies, and makes no sign : — O God, forgive him ! War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life. K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all. — Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close ; And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt. ACT IV. SCENE I. — KENT. The Sea-shore near Dover. Firing heard at sea. Then enter •, from a boat, a Captain, a Master, a Master's Mate, WALTER WHITMORE, and others; -with them SUFFOLK, disguised, and other Gentlemen, prisoners. Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful dayIs crept into the bosom of the sea ; And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades That drag the tragic melancholy night ; Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air. Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize ; For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs, Here shall they make their ransom on the sand, Orwith their bloodstain th is discolour'd shore. — Master, this prisoner freely give I thee ; — And thou that art his mate, make boot of this ; — The other [pointing to SUFFOLK], Walter Whitmore is thy share. [know. I Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head. [yours. Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns, And bear the name and port of gentlemen? — Cut both the villains' throats; — for die /ou shall:— The lives of those which we have lost in fight Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum. I Gent. I '11 give it, sir ; and therefore spare my life. [straight. 2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard, And therefore, to revenge it, shall thou die; [To SUFFOLK. And so should these, if I might have my will. Cap. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him live Suf. Look on my George, — I am a gentleman: Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shait be paid. Whit. And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore. [affright? How now ! why start'st thou? what, doth death Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death. A cunning man did calculate my birth, And told me that by Water I should die : Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded ; Thy name is Gaultierˆ being rightly sounded. Whit. Gaultier or Walter, which it is I care not: Never yet did base dishonour blur our name But with our sword we wip'd away the blot ; Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge, Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd, And I proclaim'd a coward through the world 1 [Lays hold on SUFFOLK. Suf. Stay, Whitmore ; for thy prisoner is a prince, The Duke of Suffolk, William De-la-Poole. Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags ! Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke: Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I? Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be. [blood, Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's The honourable blood of Lancaster, Must not be shed by such a jaded groom. Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrup ? Bareheaded plodded by my foot-cloth mule, And thought thee happy when I shook my head? How often hast thou waited at my cup, Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board, When I have feasted with Queen Margaret ? Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fall'n ; Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride : How in our voiding-lobby hast thou stood. And duly waited for my coming forth ?

624 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT iv. This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf, And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue. Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain ? [me. Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt, and so art thou. [boat's side Cap. Convey him hence, and on our longStrike off his head. Suf. Thou dar'st not, for thy own. Cap. Yes, Poole. Suf. Poole ! Cap. Poole ! Sir Poole ! lord ! Ay, kennel, puddle, sink ; whose filth and dirt Troubles thesilver spring where England drinks. Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth For swallowing the treasure of the realm : Thy lips, that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground ; [phrey's death, And thou, that smil'dst at good Duke HumAgainst the senseless winds shalt grin in vain, Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again : And wedded be thou to the hags of hell, For daring to affy a mighty lord Unto the daughter of a worthless king, Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem. By devilish policy art thou grown great, And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd With goblets of thy mother's bleeding heart. By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France; The false revolting Normans thorough thee Disdain to call us lord ; and Picardy Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts, And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home. The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, — Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain, — As hating thee, are rising up in arms : [crown And now the house of York, — thrust from the By shameful murder of a guiltless king And lofty proud encroaching tyranny, — Burns with revenging fire ; whose hopeful colours Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine, Under the which is writ Invitis nubibus. The commons here in Kent are up in arms : And, to conclude, reproach and beggary Is crept into the palace of our king, And all by thee. — Away! convey him hence. Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges ! Small things make base men proud ; this villain here, Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate. Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob bee-hives: It is impossible that I should die By such a lowly vassal as thyself. Thy words move rage and not remorse in me : I go of message from the queen to France ; I charge thee, waft me safely cross the Channel. Cap. Walter, — Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death. [I fear. Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artits: — 'tis thee Wkit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before I leave thee. What, are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop? I Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair. [rough, Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour. Far be it we should honour such as these With humble suit : no, rather let my head Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any, Save to the God of heaven and to my king ; And sooner dance upon a bloody pole Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom. True nobility is exempt from fear : — More can I bear than you dare execute. Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more. [can, Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye That this my death may never be forgot ! — Great men oft die by vile bezonians : A Roman sworder and banditto slave Murder'd sweet Tully ; Brutus' bastard hand Stabb'd Julius Csesar ; savage islanders Pompey the Great ; and Suffolk dies by pirates. [Exit SUF., with WHIT, and others. Cap. And as for these, whose ransom we have set, It is our pleasure one of them depart : — Therefore come you with us, and let him go. [Exeunt all but the first Gentleman. Re-enter WHITMORE with SUFFOLK'S body. Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie, Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit. I Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle ! His body will I bear unto the king : If he revenge it not, yet will his friends; So will the queen, that, living, held him dear, [Exit with the body* SCENE \\.-r-Blackheath. Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND. Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath ; they have been up these two days. John. They have the more need to sleep nowj then.

SCENE II.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 625 Well Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it. John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Tell, I say it was never merry world in England since gentlemen came up. Geo, O miserable age ! Virtue is not regarded in handicraftsmen. John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons. Geo. Nay, more, the king's council are no good workmen. John. True ; and yet it is said, — Labour in thy vocation ; which is as much to say as, — Let the magistrates be labouring men ; and therefore should we be magistrates. Geo. Thou hast hit it ; for there 's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand. John. I see them ! I see them ! There 's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham, — Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies to make dog's leather of. John. And Dick the butcher, — Geo. There is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf. John. And Smith the weaver, — Geo. Argo, their thread of life is spun. John. Come, come, let 's fall in with them. Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the Weaver > and others in great number. Cade. We John Cade, so termed of our supposed father, — • Dick. Or, rather, of stealing a cade of herrings. [Aside. Cade. For our enemies shall fall before us, — inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes. — Command silence. Dick. Silence! Cade. My father was a Mortimer, — Dick. He was an honest man and a good bricklayer. [Aside. Cade. My mother a Plantagenet, — Dick. I knew her well ; she was a midwife. [Aside. Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies, — Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces. [Aside. Smith. But now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home. [Aside. Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house. Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable ; and there was he born under a hedge, — for his father had never a house but the cage. [Aside. Cade. Valiant I am. Smith. 'A must needs ; for beggary is valiant [Aside. Cade. I am able to endure much. Dick. No question of that ; for I have seen him whipped three market days together. [Aside. Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire. Smith. He need not fear the sword ; for his coat is of proof. [Aside. Dick. But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep. [Aside. Cade. Be brave, then ; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops ; and I will make it felony to drink small beer : all the realm shall be in common ; and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass : and when I am king, — as king I will be,- — All. God save your majesty I Cade. I thank you, good people :— there shall be no money ; all shall eat and drink on my score ; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers, and worship me their lord. Dick. The first thing we do, let 's kill all the lawyers. Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man ? Some say the bee stings ; but I say 'tis the bee's wax ; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. — How now ! who 's there ? Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham. Smith. The clerk of Chatham : he can write and read and cast accompt. Cade. O monstrous I Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies. Cade. Here 's a villain ! Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in 't. Cade. Nay, then, he is a conjurer, Dick. Nay, he can make obligations and write court -hand. Cade. I am sorry for 't : the man is a proper man, on mine honour : unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. — Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee : what is thy name ? Clerk. Emmanuel. Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters : 'twill go hard with you. Cade. Let me alone. — Dost thotz use to write

Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name. All. He hath confessed : away with him ! he's a villain and a traitor. Cade. Away with him, I say ! hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck. [Exeunt some with the Clerk. Enter MICHAEL. Mich. Where 's our general ? Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow. Mich. Fly, fly, fly ! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces. Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I '11 fell thee down. He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself : he is but a knight, is 'a ? Mich. No. Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels."] Rise up. Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him ! Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and WILLIAM his Brother, with drum and Forces. Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down ; Home to your cottages, forsake this groom : — The king is merciful if you revolt. [blood W. Staf. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to If you go forward : therefore yield or die. Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves,! pass not : It is to you, good people, that I speak, O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign ; For I am rightful heir unto the crown. Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer ; And thou thyself a shearman, — art thou not ? Cade. And Adam was a gardener. W. Staf. And what of that? Cade. Marry, this: — Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, [he not ? Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, — did Staf. Ay, sir. Cade. By her he had two children at one birth. W. Staf. That 's false. ['tis true : Cade. Ay, there 's the question ; but I say The elder of them being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away ; And, ignorant of his tirth and parentage, Became a bricklayer when he came to age : His son am I ; deny it if you can. Dick. Nay, 'tis too true ; therefore he shall be king. Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, an' I the bricks are alive at this day to testify it ; therefore deny it not. [words, Staf. And will you credit this base drudge's That speaks he knows not what? [gone. All. Ay, marry, will we ; therefore get ye W. Staf. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this. Cade. He lies, for I invented it myself [Aside.] — Go to, sirrah, tell the king from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys wentto span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign ; but I '11 be protector over him. Dick. And furthermore, we '11 have the Lord Say's head, for selling the dukedom of Maine. Cade. And good reason ; for thereby is England mained, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch : and more than that, he can speak P'rench ; and therefore he is a traitor. Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance ! Cade. Nay, answer if you can : — "he Frenchmen are our enemies ; go to, then, I ask but this, — can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no? [head. All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his W. Staf. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, Assail them with the army of the king, [town Staf. Herald, away ; and throughout every Proclaim them traitors ihat are up with Cade ; That those which fly before the battle ends May, even in their wives' and children's sight, Be hang'd up for example at their doors : — And you that be the king's friends, follow me. [Exeunt the two STAFFORDS and Forces. Cade. And you that love the commons follow me. — Now show yourselves men ; 'tis for liberty. We will not leave one lord, one gentleman : Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon ; For they are thrifty honest men, and such As would — but that they dare not — take our parts. [wards us. Dick. They are all in order, and march toCade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. \Exezmt-. SCENE III. — Another part of Blackheath. Alarums. The two parties enter and fight, and both the STAFFORDS are slain. Cade. Where 's Dick, the butcher of Ashford ? Dick. Here, sir.

SCENE IV.j SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 627 Cade. They fell before thee like sheepand oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house : therefore thus will I reward thee, — the Lent shall be as long again as it is ; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one, a week. Dick. I desire no more. Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear {putting on pent of Sm H. STAFFORD'S armour]; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us. Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners. Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. — Come, let 's march towards London. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter KING HENRY, reading a supplication; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and LORD SAY with him: at a distance, QUEEN MARGARET mourning aver SUFFOLK'S head. Q. Mar. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind, And makes it fearful and degenerate ; Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep. But who can cease to weep, and look on this? Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast: But where's the body that I should embrace? BUCK. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication? K. Hen. I '11 send some holy bishop to entreat ; For God forbid so many simple souls Should perish by the sword ! And I myself, Rather than bloody war shall cut them short, Will parley with Jack Cade their general : — But stay, I '11 read it over once again. Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains' hath this lovely face Rul'd, like a wandering planet, over me, And could it not enforce them to relent That were unworthy to behold the same? K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head. [his. Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall have K* Ken. How now, madam ! Still lamentingand mourning for Suffolk's death? I fear, my love, if that I had oeen dead, [me. Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for Q. Afar. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee. Enter a Messenger. K. Hen. How now! what news? whycom'st thou in such haste? [lord ; Mess. The rebels are in Southwark ; fly, my Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer, Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house ; And calls your grace usurper cpenly, And vows to crown himself in Westminster. His army is a ragged multitude Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless : Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death Hath given them heart and courage to proceed : All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen, They call false caterpillars, and intend their death. K. Hen. O graceless menl they know not what they do, [worth Buck. My gracious lord, retire to KillingUntil a power be rais'd to put them down. Q. Mar. Ah ! were the Duke of Suffolk now alive, These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd. K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee ; Therefore away with us to Killingworth. Say. So might your grace's person be in danger ; The sight of me is odious in their eyes : And therefore in this city will I stay, And live alone as secret as I may. Enter a second Messenger. 2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London Bridge: The citizens fly and forsake their houses ; The rascal people, thirsting after prey, Join witn the traitor ; and they jointly swear To spoil the city and your royal court. Buck. Then linger not, my lord ; away, take horse. K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us. [deceas'd. Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is K. Hen. Farewell, my lord [to LORD SAY]: trust not the Kentish rebels. Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd. Say. The crust I have is in mine innocence, And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt. SCENE V.— LONDON. The Tower. Enter LORD SCALES and others, on the Walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below. Scales. How now ! is Jack Cade slain? I Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain ; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them : the lord mayor craves aid of

Such aid as I can spare, you shall command ; But I am troubled here with them myself, — The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower. But get you to Smithfield, and gather head, And thither I will send you Matthew Gough ; Fight for your king, your country, and your lives; And so, farewell, for I must hence again. [Exeunt. SCENE VI.— LONDON. Cannon Street. Enter JACK CADE and his Followers. He strikes his staff on London stone. Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissingconduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer. Enter a Soldier, winning. Sold. Jack Cade ! Jack Cade ! Cade. Knock him down there. '{They kill him. Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more ; I think he hath a very fair warning. Dick. My lord, there 's an army gathered together in Smithfield. Cade. Come, then, let 's go fight with them : but first, go and set London Bridge on fire ; and, if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let 's away. {Exeunt. SCENE VII. — LONDON. Smithfield. Alarums. Enter, on one side, CADE and his Company; on the other. Citizens, and the KING'S Forces, headed by MATTHEW GOUGH. They fight ; the Citizens are rcntted, and MATTHEW GOUGH is slain. Cade. So, sirs : — now go some and pull down the Savoy ; others to the inns of court ; down with them all. Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship. Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word. Dick. Only, that the laws of England may come out of your mouth. John. Mass, 'twill be sore law then ; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet. {Aside. Smith. Nay, John, it will be stinking law ; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. {Aside. Cade. I have thought upon it, it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm : my mouth shall be the Parliament of England. John. Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out. {Aside. Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common. Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize ! here 's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France ; he that made us pay one-and-twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY. _ Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. — Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord ! now art thou within point blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Monsieur Basimecu, the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school : and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used ; and, contrary to the king, his crown, and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison ; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them ; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not? Say. What of that? Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honester men than thou go in their hose and doublets. Dick. And work in their shirt too ; as myself, for example, that am a butcher. Say. You men of Kent, — Dick. What say you of Kent? Say. Nothing but this, — 'tis bona terra > mala gens.

SCENE VII.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. Cade. Away with him, away with him ! he speaks Latin. Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will. Kent, in the Commentaries Cresar writ, Is term'd the civill'st place of all this isle : Sweet is the country, because full of riches; The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy ; Which makes me hope you are not void of pity. I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy; Yet, to recover them, would lose my life. Justice with favour have I always done; Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never. When have I aught exacted at your hands, But to maintain the king, the realm, and you? Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, Because my book preferr'd me to the king, And seeing ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven. Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, You cannot but forbear to murder me : This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings For your behoof, — [the field? Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck Those that I never saw, and struck them dead. Geo. O monstrous coward ! what, to come behind folks? [your good. Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again. [causes Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's Hath made me full of sickness and diseases. Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle, then, and the help of hatchet. Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man? Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me. Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as who should say, I '11 be even with you : I '11 see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him. Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most? Have I affected wealth or honour, — speak? Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death? These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding, [thoughts. This breast from harbouring foul deceitful O let me live ! Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words ; but I '11 bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. [Aside.'] Away with him ! he has a familiar under his tongue ; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently ; and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither. All.

It shall be done. [prayers, Say. Ah, countrymen ! if when you make your God should be so obdurate as yourselves, How would it fare with your departed souls? And therefore yet relent, and save my life. Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. {Exeunt some with LORD SAY. The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute ; there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it: men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell. Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills ? Cade. Marry, presently. All. O brave ! Re-enter Rebels, with the heads 0/"LoRD SAY and his Son-in-law. Cade. But is not this braver? — Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now, part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns inFrance. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night : for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets j and at every corner have them kiss. — Away! \Excunt* SCENE \\\l.— Southward Alarum. Enter CADE and all his Rabblement. Cade. Up Fish Street ! down Saint Magnus' corner ! kill and knock down ! throw them into Thames! — [A parley sounded, then a retreat.] What noise is this I hear ? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them km? Enter BUCKINGHAM and LORD CLIFFORD, with Forces. Biick. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee : [king Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the Unto the commons whom thou hast misled ; And here pronounce free pardon to them all That will forsake thee and go home in peace. Cltf. What say ye, countrymen? willyerelent, And yield to mercy whilst 'tis offer'd you ; Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths ? Who loves the king, and will embracehis pardon,

630 SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT IV. Fling up his cap, and say God save his majesty ! Who hateth him, and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake, Shake he his weapon at us and pass by. All. God save the king ! God save the king ! Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave ? — And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom : but you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces : for me, I will make shift for one ; and so, God's curse light upon you all ! . All. We '11 follow Cade, we '11 follow Cade ! Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth, That thus you do exclaim you '11 go with him ? Will he conduct you through the heart of France, And make the meanest of you earls and dukes? Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to ; Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil, Unless by robbing of your friends and us. Were 't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar, The fearful French, whom you late vanquished, Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you? Methinks already in this civil broil I see them lording it in London streets, Crying Viliaco! unto all they meet. Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy. [lost ; To France, to France, and get what you have Spare England, for it is your native coast : Henry hath money, you are strong and manly ; God on our side, doubt not of victory. All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we '11 follow the king and Clifford. Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together to surprise me: my sword make way for me, for here is no staying. [Aside.'] — In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very middest of you ! and heavens and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit. Buck. What ! is he fled? go some and follow him; And he that brings his head unto the king Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward. — i [Exeunt some of them. Follow me, soldiers : we '11 devise a mean To reconcile you all unto the king. [Exeunt. SCENE IX. —Killingworth Castle. Trumpets sounded. Enter KING HENRY. QUEEN MARGARET, and SOMERSET, on ths terrace of the Castle. K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne, And could command no more content than I ? No sooner was I crept out of my cradle But I was made a king, at nine months old : Was never subject long'd to be a king As I do long and wish to be a subject. Enter BUCKINGHAM and LORD CLIFFORD. Buck. Health andglad tidingsto yourmajesty ! K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpris'd? Or is he but retir'd to make him strong? Enter y below, a number of CADE'S Followers, with halters about their necks. Clif. He is fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield ; And humbly thus, with halters on their necks, Expect your highness' doom of life or death. K. Hen. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates, To entertain my vows of thanks and praise ! Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives, And show'd how well you love your prince and country : Continue still in this so good a mind, And Henry, though he be infortunate, Assure yourselves, will never be unkind : And so, with thanks and pardon to you all, I do dismiss you to your several countries. All. God save the king 1 God save the king ! Enter a Messenger. Mess. Please it your grace to be advertised The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland ; And with a puissant and a mighty power Of Gallowglasses and stout kerns Is marching hitherward in proud array : And still proclaimeth, as he comes along, His arms are only to remove from thee The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor. K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd ; Like to a ship that, having 'scap'd a tempest,

SCENE X.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 631 Is straightway calm'd, and boarded with a pirate : But now is Cade driven baclc, hio men dispers'd ; And now is York in arms to second him. — I pray thee, Buckingnam, go thou and meet him; And ask him what 's the reason of these arms. Tell him I '11 send Duke Edmund to the Tower; — And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither, Until his army be dismiss'd from him. Sotn My lord, I '11 yield myself to prison willingly, Or unto death, to do my country good. K. Hen. In any case be not too rough in terms ; [guage. For he is fierce, and cannot brook hard lanBuck. I will, my lord ; and doubt not so to deal As all things snail redound unto your good. K. Hen. Come, wife, let 's in, and learn to govern better; For yet may England curse my wretched reign. [Exeunt. SCENE X. — KENT. IDEN'S Garden. Enter CADE. Cade. Fie on ambition ! fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish ! These five days have I hid me in these woods, and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me ; but now am I so hungry that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word sallet was born to do me good : for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill ; and many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in ; and now the word sallet must serve me to feed on. Enter IDEN, with Servants behind. Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court, And may enjoy such quiet walks as these? This small inheritance my father left me Contenteth me, and 's worth a monarchy. I seek not to wax great by others' waning, Or gather wealth I care not with what envy: Sufficeth that I have maintains my state, And sends the poor well pleased from my gate. Cade. Here 's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. [Aside.} Ah, vilUJn, thou .vilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him 1 but I '11 make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part. Iden. Why, rude companion, whatso'er thou be, [thee? I know thee not; why, then, should I betray Is 't not enough to break into my garden, And like a thief to come to rob my grounds, Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner, But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms ? Cade. Brave thee ! ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well : I have eat no meat these five days ; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more. Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands, That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent, Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man. Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine, See if thou canst outface me with thy looks : Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser ; Thy hand is but a finger to my fist ; Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon ; My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast ; And if mine arm be heaved in the air, Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth. As for words, whose greatness answers words, Let this my sword report what speech forbears. Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard. — Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burley-boned clown in chines of beet ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove, on my knees, thou mayest be turned to hobnails. [They fight, CADE falls.] O, I am slain ! famine and no other hath slain me : let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I 'd defy them all. Wither, garden ; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled. Iden. Is 't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor ? Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed, And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead % Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point ; But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat, To emblaze the honour that thy master got. Cade. Iden, farewell ; and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man ; and exhort all the world to be cowards, — for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour, {Dies.

Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave, And there cut off thy most ungracious head ; Which I will bear in triumph to the king, Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon. [Exeunt i dragging out the body. ACT V. SCENE I. — Fields between Dart ford and Blackheath. The KING'S Camp on one side. On the other, enter YORK attended, with drum and colours: his Forces at some distance. York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right, And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head : Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright; To entertain great England's lawful king. Ah, sancta itiajestasl who would not buy thee dear? Let them obey that know not how to rule ; This hand was made to handle naught but gold. I cannot give due action to my words Except a sword or sceptre balance it : A sceptre shall it have, — have I a soul, — On which I '11 toss the flower-de-luce of France. Enter BUCKINGHAM. Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me? The king hath sent him, sure : I must dissemble. [Aside. Buck* York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well. [greeting. York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure? Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege, To know the reason of these arms in peace ; Or why thou, being a subject as I am, Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave, Or dare to bring thy force so near the court. York. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great: O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint, I am so angry at these abject terms; And now, like Ajax Telamonius, On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury ! I am far better born than is the king; More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts : But I must make fair weather yet awhile, Till Henry be more weak and I more strong. [Aside. Buckingham, I pr'ythee, pardon me, That I have given no answer all this while; My mind was troubled with deep melancholy. The cause why I have brought this army hither Is to remove proud Somerset from the king, Seditious to his grace and to the state, [part : Buck. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers. — Soldiers, I thank you all ; disperse yourselves ; Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field, You shall have pay and everything you wish. — And let my sc /ereign, virtuous Henry, Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons, As pledges of my fealty and love ; I '11 send them all as willing as I live : Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have, Is his to use, so Somerset may die. Buck. York, I commend this kind submission: We twain will go into his highness' tent. Enter KING HENRY, attended. K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us, That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm ? York. In all submission and humility York doth present himself unto your highness. K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring ? [hence, York. To heave the traitor Somerset from And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade, Who since I heard to be discomfited. Enter IDEN, with CADE'S head. Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition May pass into the presence of a king, Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head, The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew. SCENE I.] SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI. 633 Iden. I was, an't like your majesty. K. Hen. How art thou call'd ? and what is thy degree ? Iden. Alexander Iden, that 's my name ; A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king. Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss He were created knight for his good service. K. Hen. Iden, kneel down, [He kneels.} Rise up a knight. We give thee for reward a thousand marks ; And will that thou henceforth attend on us. Iden.. May Iden live to merit such a bounty, And never live but true unto his liege ! K. Hen. See, Buckingham ! Somerset conies with the queen : Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke. Enter QUEEN MA?GARET and SOMERSET. Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head, But boldly stand and front him to his face. York. How now J is Somerset at liberty ? Then, York, unloose thy long - imprison'd thoughts, And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart. Shall I endure the sight of Somerset ? — • [me, False king 1 why hast thou broken faith with Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse ? King did I call thee? no, thou art not king ; Not fit to govern and rule multitudes, Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor. That head of thine doth not become a crown ; Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff, And not to grace an awful princely sceptre. That gold must round engirt these brows of mine, Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear, Is able with the change to kill and cure. Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up, And with the same to act controlling laws. Give place : by heaven, thou shalt rule no more O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler. Som. O monstrous traitor! — I arrest thee, York, Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown : Obey, audacious traitor ; kneel for grace. York. Wouldst have me kneel? first let me ask of these, If they can brook I bow a knee to man. — Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail : [Exit Atten. I know, ere they will have me go to ward, They '11 pawn their swords for my enfranchisement, [amain, Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford ; bid him come To say if that the bastard boys of York Shall be the surety for their traitor father. [Exit an Attendant. York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan, Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge ! The sons of York, thy betters in their birth, Shall be their father's bail ; and bane to those That for my surety will refuse the boys ! See where they come : I '11 warrant they '11 make it good.

Ay, Clifford ; a bedlam and ambitious humour Makes him oppose himself against his king. Clif. He is a traitor ; let him to the Tower, And chop away that factious pate of his. Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey ; His sons, he says, shall give their words forhim. York. Will you not, sons? Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve. Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall. [here I Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so : I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor. — Call hither to the stake my two brave bears, That with the very shaking of their chains They may astonish these fell-lurking curs : Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me. Drums. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY, with Forces. Clif. Are these thy bears ? we '11 bait thy bears to death, And manacle the bear-ward in their chains, If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place. Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur Run back and bite, because he was withheld ; Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw, Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried : And such a piece of service will you do, If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick.

 Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump, As crooked in thy manners as thy shape ! York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon. Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. [to bow ? — K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot Old Salisbury, — shame to thy silver hair, Thou mad misleader of thy brainsick son ! — What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian, And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles ? — O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty? If it be banish'd from the frosty head, Where shall it find a harbour in the earth ? — Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war, And shame thine honourable age with blood ? Why art thou old, and want'st experience ? Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it? For shame ! in duty bend thy knee to me, That bows unto the grave with mickle age. Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself The title of this most renowned duke ; And in my conscience do repute his grace The rightful heir to England's royal seat. K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me? Sal. I have. K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath? Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin ; But greater sin to keep a sinful oath. Who can be bound by any solemn vow To do a murderous deed, to rob a man, To force a spotless virgin's chastity, To reave the orphan of his patrimony, To wring the widow from her custom'd right; And have no other reason for this wrong But that he was bound by a solemn oath? Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister. K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself. [thou hast, York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends I am resolv'd for death or dignity. [true. Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove War. You were best to go to bed and dream again, To keep thee from the tempest of the field. Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm Than any thou canst conjure up to-day; And that I '11 write upon thy burgonet, Might I but know thee by thy household badge. War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's crest, The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff, This day 1*11 wear aloft my burgonet, — As on a mountain-top the cedar shows, That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,-— Even to affright thee with the view thereof. Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear, And tread it under foot with all contempt, Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father, To quell the rebels and their complices. Rich. Fie ! charity, for shame ! speak not in spite, For you shall sup vi\\hjesu Christ to-night. Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that 's more than thou canst tell. Rich. If not in heaven, you '11 surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally. SCENE II. — Saint Albans. Alarums: excursions. Enter WARWICK. War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls ! And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear, Now, — when the angry trumpet sounds alarum, And dead men's cries do fill the empty air, — Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me ! Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland, Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms. Enter YORK. How now, my noble lord ! what, all a-foot? York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed ; But match to match I have encounter'd him, And made a prey for carrion kites and crows Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well. Enter LORD CLIFFORD. War. Of one or both of us the time is come. York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase, For I myself must hunt this deer to death. War. Then, nobly, York ; "'tis for a crown thou fight'st. — As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day, It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd. [Exit. Clif. What see'st thou in me, York? why dost thou pause? [love, York. With thy brave bearing should I be in But that thou art so fast mine enemy. Clif. [They fight, and CLIFFORD falls and dies. York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still. Peace with his soul, heaven, if it be thy will ! [Exit. Enter YOUNG CLIFFORD. Y. Clif. Shame and confusion ! all is on the rout ; Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell, Whom angry heavens do make their minister, Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part Hot coals of vengeance ! — Let no soldier fly : He that is truly dedicate to war Hath no self-love ; nor he that loves himself Hath not essentially, but by circumstance, The name of valour. — O, let the vile world end. {Seeing his father's body. And the premised flames of the last day Knit earth and heaven together ! Now let the general trumpet blow his blast, Particularities and petty sounds To cease !— Wast thou ordain'd, dear father, To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve The silver livery of advised age, And in thy reverence and thy chair-days thus To die in ruffian battle? — Even at this sight My heart is turn'd to stone : and while 'tis mine It shall be stony. York not our old men spares ; No more will I their babes: tears virginal Shall be to me even as the dew to fire; And beauty, that the tyrant oft reclaims, Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax. Henceforth I will not have to do with pity : Meet I an infant of the house of York, Into as many gobbets will I cut it As wild Medea young Absyrtus did : In cruelty will I seek out my fame. — Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house : [Taking up the body. As did ˆEneas old Anchises bear, So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders ; But then ˆEneas bare a living load, Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. [Exit. Enter RICHARD PLANT AGENET and SOMERSET, fighting, and SOMERSET is killed. Rich. So, lie thou there ; — For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign, The Castle in Saint Albans, Somerset Hath made the wizard famous in his death. — Sword, hold thy temper ; heart, be wrathful still: Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill. [Exit. Alarums: excursions. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, and others ; retreating. Q. Mar. Away, my lord ! you are slow ; for shame, away ! K. Hen. Can we outrun the heavens? good Margaret, stay. Q. Mar. What are you made of? you '11 nor fight nor fly: Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence, To give the enemy way ; and to secure us By what we can, which can no more but fly. [Alarum afar off. If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape, — As well we may, if not through your neglect, — We shall to London get : where you are lov'd ; A nd where this breach, now in our fortunes made, May readily be stopp'd. Re-enter YOUNG CLIFFORD. Y. Clif. But that my heart 's on future mis chief set, I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly : But fly you must ; uncurable discomfit Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts. Away, for your relief! and we will live To see their day, and them our fortune give : Away, my lord, away ! \Exeunt. SCENE III. — Fields near Saint Albans. Alarum: retreat. Flourish; then enter YORK, RICHARD PLANTAGENET, WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours. York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,— That winter lion, who in rage forgets Aged contusions and all brush of time, And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, Repairs him with occasion? This happy day Is not itself, nor have we won one foot, If Salisbury be lost. Rich. My noble father, Three times to-day I holp him to his horse, Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off, Persuaded him from any further act : [him ; But still, where danger was, still there I met And like rich hangings in a homely house, So was his will in his old feeble body. But, noble as he is, look where he comes. Enter SALISBURY. Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day; By the mass, so did we all. — I thank you, Richard :

And so do I. — Victorious Prince of York, Before I see thee seated in that throne Which now the house of Lancaster usurps, I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close. This is the palace of the fearful king, And this the regal seat : possess it, York ; For this is thine, and not King Henry's heirs'. York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will ; For hither we have broken in by force. [die. Norf. We '11 all assist you ; he that flies shall York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk : — stay by me, my lords ; — And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night. War. And when the king comes, offer him no violence, Unless he seek to thrust you out per force. [The Soldiers retire. York. The queen this day here holds her parliament, But little thinks we shall be of her council : By words or blows here let us win our right. Rich. Arm'd as we are, let 's stay within this house. [call'd, War. The bloody parliament shall this be Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king, And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice Hath made us by- words to our enemies. York. Then leave me not, my lords ; be resolute ; I mean to take possession of my right. War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best, The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells. I '11 plant Plan tagenet, root him up who dares: — Resolve thee, Richard ; claim the English crown. [WARWICK leads YORK to the throne, who seats himself. Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and others, with red roses in their hats. K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, Even in the chair of state ! belike he means, — Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,— To aspire unto the crown, and reign asking. — Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father ; And thine, Lord Clifford ; and you both have vow'd revenge On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends. North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me 1 Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel. West. What, shall we suffer this ? let's pluck him down : My heart for anger burns ; I cannot brook it. K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland. Clif. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he : He durs'c not sit there had your father liv'd. My gracious lord, here in the parliament Let us assail the family of York. [so. North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin : be it K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city

favours them, And they have trnops of soldiers at their beck ? Exe. But when the duke is slain they '11 quickly fly. K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart, To make a shambles of the parliament house ! Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats Snail be the war that Henry means to use. [They advance to the DUKE. Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne, And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet ; I am thy sovereign. York. I am thine. Exe. For shame, come down : he made thee Duke of York. [was. York. It was my inheritance, as the earldom Exe. Thy father was a traitor to the crown. War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown In following this usurping Henry. Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king? War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard Duke of York. K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne? York. It must and shall be so : content thyself. War. Be Duke of Lancaster ; let him be king. West. He is both king and Duke of Lancaster; And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain, [target War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You That we are those which chas'd you from the field, And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March'd through the city to the palace-gates. North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief ; And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it. West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons, Thy kinsmen, and thy friends, I '11 have more lives Than drops of blood were in my father's veins. Clif. Urge it no more: lest that, instead of words.

SCENE I.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 639 I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger As shall revenge his death before I stir. War. Poor Clifford ! how I scorn his worthless threats ! [crown? York. Will you we show our title to the If not, our swords shall plead it in the field. K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York ; Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March : I am the son of Henry the Fifth, Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop, And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all. K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I : When I was crown'd I was but nine months old. Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose. — Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head. Edw. Sweet father, do so ; set it on your head. Mont. Good brother [to YORK], as thou lov'st and honour st arms, Let 's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus. Rich. Sound drums and trumpets and the king will fly. York. Sons, peace ! K. Hen. Peace thou ! and give King Henry leave to speak. [lords ; Wc.r. Plantagenet shall speak first : hear him, And be you silent and attentive too, For he that interrupts him shall not live. K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne, Wherein my grandsire and my father sat? No : first shall war unpeople this my realm ; Ay, and their colours, — often borne in France, And now in England to our heart's great sorrow, — [lords? Shall be my winding-sheet. — Why faint you, My title's good, and better far than his. War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king. K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown. York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king. K. Hen. I know not what to say ; my title 's weak. [Aside. Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir? York. What then? K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king ; For Richard, in the view of many lords, Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth, Whose heir my father was, and I am his. York. He rose against him, being his sovereign, And made him to resign his crown perforce. War. Suppose, iny lords, he did it unconstrain'd, Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown? Exe. No ; for he could not so resign his crown But that the next heir should succeed and reign. K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter? Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me. York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not ?

Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king. K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him. [Aside. North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st, Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd. War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all. North. Thou art deceiv'd: ;tis not thy southern power, Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, — Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud, — Can set the duke up in despite of me. Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong, Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence : May that ground gape, and swallow me alive, Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father! K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart ! [crown. — York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy What mutter you, or what conspire you, lords? War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York; Or I will fill the house with armed men, And o'er the chair of state, where now he sits, Write up his title with usurping blood. [He stamps ', and the Soldiers show themselves. K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word : — Let me for this my life-time reign as king. York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs. And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st. K. Hen. I am content : Richard Plantagenet, Enjoy the kingdom after my decease. ^ [son ! Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your War. What good is this to England and himself! West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry! Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us! West. I cannot stay to hear these articles. North. Nor I. Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news. [king, West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

640 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT i. North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York, And die in bands, for this unmanly deed ! Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome, Or live in peace, abandon'd and despis'd ! {Exeunt NORTH., CLIP., and WEST. War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not. [not yield. Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will K. Hen. Ah, Exeter ! War. Why should you sigh, my lord ! K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son, Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit. But be it as it may : — I here entail The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever ; Conditionally, that here thou take an oath To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live, To honour me as thy king and sovereign, And neither by treason nor hostility To seek to put me down and reign thyself. York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform. {Coming from the throne. War. Long live King Henry 1 — Plantagenet, embrace him. K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons ! York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd. Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes! {Sennet. The Lords come forward. York. Farewell, my gracious lord ; I '11 to my castle. War. And I '11 keep London with my soldiers. Norf. And I to Norfolk with my followers. Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came. {Exeunt YORK and his Sons, WAR. , NORF. , MONT., Soldiers, and Attendants. K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow to the court. £xe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger : I'll steal away. [Going1. K. Hen. Exeter, so will I. [Going. Enter QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE OF WALES. Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me ; I will follow thee. [stay. K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes ? Ah, wretched man ! would I had died a maid, And never seen thee, never born thee son, Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father ! Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus ? Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I, Or felt that pain which I did for him once, Or nourish'a him as I did with my blood, — Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there, Rather than made that savage duke thine heir, And disinherited thine only son. Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me : If you be king, why should not I succeed ? K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret ; — pardon me, sweet son : — The Earl of Warwick and the duke enforc'd me. Q. Mar. Enforc'd thee ! art thou king, and wilt be forc'd ? [wretch ! I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me ; And given unto the house of York such head As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance. To entail him and his heirs unto the crown, What is it, but to make thy sepulchre, And creep into it far before thy time ? Warwick is chancellor and the lord of Calais ; Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow seas ; The duke is made protector of the realm ; And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds The trembling lamb environed with wolves. Had I been there, which am a silly woman, The soldiers should have toss'd meon their pikes Before I would have granted to that act. But thou preferr'st thy life before thine honour : And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed, Until that act of parliament be repealed, Whereby my son is disinherited. [colours The northern lords that have forsworn thy Will follow mine, if once they see them spread : And spread they shall be, — to thy foul disgrace, And utter ruin of the house of York. Thus do I leave thee. — Come, son, let 's away ; Our army is ready ; come, we '11 after them. K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak. Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already : get thee gone. [with me? K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies. Prince. When I return with victory from the field I '11 see your grace : till then I '11 follow her. Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus. [Exeunt QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE. K. Hen. Poor queen ! how love to me and to her son Hath made her break out into terms of rage ! Reveng'd may she be on that hateful duke, Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire, Will cost my crown, and like an empty eagle

SCENE II.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VL 641 Tire on the flesh of me and of my son ! The loss of those three lords torments my heart: I '11 write unto them, and entreat them fair : — Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger. Exe. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all. \Exeunt. SCENE II. — A Room in Sandal Castle , near Wakefield, in Yorkshire. Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and MONTAGUE. Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave. Edw. No, I can better play the orator. Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible. Enter YORK. York. Why, how now, sons and brother ! at a strife? What is your quarrel? how began it first? Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention. York. About what? RuA. About that which concerns your grace and us, — The crown of England, father, which is yours. York. Mine, boy? not till King Henry be dead. [death. Rich. Your right depends not on his life or Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now : [breathe, By giving the house of Lancaster leave to It will outrun you, father, in the end. [reign. York. I took an oath that he should quietly Edw. But, for a kingdom, any oath may be broken : [year. I would break a thousand oaths to reign one Rich. No ; God forbid your grace should be forsworn. York. I shall be, if I claim by open war. Rich. I '11 prove the contrary, if you '11 hear me speak. York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible. Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took Before a true and lawful magistrate, That hath authority over him that swears: Henry had none, but did usurp the place ; Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose, Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous. Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown; Within whose circuit is Elysium, And all that poets feign of bliss and joy. Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest Until the white rose that I wear be dy'd Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart. York. Richard, enough; I will be king, ot die — Brother, thou shalt to London presently, And whet on Warwick to this enterprise. — Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk, And tell him privily of our intent, — You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham, With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise ; In them I trust ; for they are soldiers, Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit. — While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more, But that I seek occasion how to rise, And yet the king not privy to my drift, Nor any of the house of Lancaster? Enter a Messenger. But, stay: what news? Why com'st thou in such post? [and lords Mess. The qUeen with all the northern earls Intend here to besiege you in your castle : She is hard by with twenty thousand men; And therefore fortify your hold, my lord. York. Ay, with my sword. What ! think'st thou that we fear them? — Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me ; — My brother Montague shall post to London: Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest, Whom we have left protectors of the king, With powerful policy strengthen themselves, And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths. Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not: And thus most humbly I do take my leave. {Exit. Enter SIR JOHN and SIR HUGH MORTIMER. York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles ! You are come to Sandal in a happy hour ; The army of the queen mean to besiege us. Sir John. She shall not need, we '11 meet her in the field. York. What, with five thousand men ? Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need: A woman's general; what should we fear? [A march afar off. Edw. I hear their drums: let's set our men in order, And issue forth, and bid them battle straight. York. Five men to twenty ! — though the odds be great, I doubt not, uncle, of our victory. Many a battle have I won in France, Whenas the enemy hath been ten to one: Why should I not now have the like success.? {Exeunt.

642 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT L SCENE III. — Plains near Sandal Castle. Alarum. Enter RUTLAND and his Tutor. Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands? Ah, tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes ! Enter CLIFFORD and Soldiers. Clif. Chaplain, away ! thy priesthood saves thy life. As for the brat of this accursed duke, Whose father slew my father, — he shall die. Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company. Clif. Soldiers, away with him ! [child, Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent Lest thou be hated both of God and man. [Exit, forced off by Soldiers. Clif. How now ! is he dead already? or is it fear That makes him close his eyes? — I '11 open them. Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch That trembles under his devouring paws ; And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey, And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder. — Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword, . And not with such a cruel threat'ning look ! Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die ! — I am too mean a subject for thy wrath : Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live. Clif. In vain thou speak' st, poor boy; my father's blood [enter. Hath stopp'd the passage where thy wordsshould Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again: He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him. Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine Were not revenge sufficient for me ; No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves, And hung their rotten coffins up in chains, It could not slake mine ire nor ease my heart. The sight of any of the house of York Is as a fury to torment my soul ; And till I root out their accursed line And leave not one alive, I live in hell. Therefore, — [Lifting his hand. Rut. O let me pray before I take my death ! To thee I pray ; sweet Clifford, pity me ! Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords. Rut. I never did thee harm: why wilt thou slay me? Clif. Thy father hath. Rut. But 'twas ere I was born. Thou hast one son, — for his sake pity me ; Lest in revenge thereof, — sith God is just, — H 2 be as miserably slain as I. Ah, let me live in prison all my days ; And when I give occasion of offence Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause. Clif. No cause! Thy father slew my father ; therefore, die. [CLIFFORD stabs him. Rut. Dii faciantˆ laudis summa sit ista tu&i [Dies. Clif. Plantagenet ! I come, Plantagenet ! And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood, Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both. [Exit. SCENE IV. — Another part oftke Plains near Sandal Castle. Alarum. Enter YORK. York. The army of the queen hath got the field: My uncles both are slain in rescuing me ; And all my followers to the eager foe Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind, Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves. My sons, — God knows what hath bechanced them : [selves But this I know,— they have demean'd themLike men born to renown by life or death. Three times did Richard make a lane to me ; And thrice cried, Courage,] at her! fight it out*< And full as oft came Edward to With purple falchion, painted to the hilt In blood of those that had encountered him : And when the hardiest warriors did retire, Richard cried, Charge! and give no foot of ground! And cried, A croivn> or else a glorious tomb ! A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre! With this we charg'd again : but, out, alas ! We bodg'd again ; as I have seen a swan With bootless labour swim against the tide, And spend her strength with over-matching waves. [A short alarum within. Ah, hark ! the fatal followers do pursue ; And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury : And were I strong, I would not shun their fury: The sands are number'd that make up my life; Here must I stay, and here my life must end. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Soldiers. Come, bloody Clifford, — rough Northumberland,— I dare your quenchless fur}' to more rage : I am your butt, and I abide your shot. North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet. Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm, SCENE IV.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 643 With downright payment, show'd unto my father. Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car, And made an evening at the noontide prick. York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth A bird that will revenge upon you all : And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven, Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with. Why come you not ? what ! multitudes, and fear ? Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no further ; So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons ; So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives, Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers. York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again, And in thy thought o'errun my former time ; And, if thou canst, for blushing, view this face, And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice [this ! Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word, But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one. [Draws. Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford ! for a thousand causes I would prolong awhile the traitor's life. — Wrath makes him deaf: — speak thou, Northumberland, [much North. Hold, Clifford ! do not honour him so To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart : What valour were it, when a cur doth grin, For one to thrust his hand between his teeth, When he might spurn him with his foot away? It is war's prize to take all 'vantages; And ten to one is no impeach of valour. [They lay hands on YORK, who struggles. Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin. North. So doth the cony struggle in the net. [YORK is taken prisoner. York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty; So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd. North. What would your grace have done unto him now? [thumberland, Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and NorCome, make him stand upon this molehi.l here, That raught at mountains with outstretched arms, Yet parted but the shadow with his hand. — What, was it you that would be England's king? Was 't you that revell'd in our parliament, And made a preachment of your high descent ? Where are your mess of sons to back you now? Tht wanton Edward and the lusty George t And Where's that valiant crook-back prodigy, Dicky your boy, that with his grumbling voice Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies ? Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland? Look, York : I stain'd this napkin with the blood That valiant Clifford, with his

rapier's point, Made issue from the bosom of the boy ; And if thine eyes can water for his death, I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal. Alas, poor York ! but that I hate thee deadly, I should lament thy miserable state. I pr'ythee, grieve, to make me merry, York. What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails That not a tear can fall for Rutland'? death ? Why art thou patient, man ? thou shouldst be mad ; And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus. Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sinp and dance. Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see, to make me sport ; York cannot speak unless he wear a crown. — A crown for York ! — and, lords, bow low to him ; — Hold you his hands whilst I do set it on. [Putting a paper crown on his head. Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king ! Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair ; And this is he was his adopted heir. — But how is it that great Plantagenet Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath ? As I bethink me, you should not be king Till our King Henry had shook hands with death. And will you pale your head in Henry's glory, And rob his temples of the diadem Now in his life, against your holy oath ? O, 'tis a fault too, too unpardonable ! — Off with the crown ; and, with the crown, his head ; And whilst we breathe take time to do him dead. Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake. Q. Mar. Nay, stay ; let 's hear the orisons he makes. York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France, [tooth ! Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's How ill-seeming is it in thy sex To triumph, like an Amazonian trull, Upon their woes whom fortune captivates ! But that thy face is, visard-like, unchanging, Made impudent with use of evil deeds, I would assay, proud queen, to make thee "blush: To tell thee whence thou cam'st* of whom deriv'd, Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless. 644 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT ii. Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman. Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult ? It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen ; Unless the adage must be verified, — That beggars mounted run their horse to death. 'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud ; But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small : 'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd ; The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at : 'Tis government that makes them seem divine ; The want thereof makes thee abominable : Thou art as opposite to every good As the antipodes are unto us, (Or as the south to the septentrion. 0 tiger's heart wrapp'd in a woman's hide ! How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child, To bid the father wipe his eyes withal, And yet be seen to bear a woman's face? Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible ; Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless. Bidd'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish : [will : Wouldst have me weep? why, now thou hast thy For raging wind blows up incessant showers, And when the rage allays, the rain begins. These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies ; And every drop cries vengeance for his death 'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman, [me so North. Beshrew me, but his passions move That hardly can I check my eyes from tears. York. That face of his the hungry cannibals Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood: But you are more inhuman, more inexorable, — O, ten times more, — than tigers of Hyrcania. See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears : This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet boy, And I with tears do wash the blood away. Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this: [He gives back the handkerchief. And if thou tell'st the heavy story right, Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tˆars ; Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears, And say, Alas, it was a piteous deed! — There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse ; [Giving back the paper crown. And in thy need such comfort come to thee As now I reap at thy too cruel hand ! — Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world : My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads ! North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin, 1 should not for my life but weep with him, To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul. Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland ? Think but upon the wrong he did us all, And that will quickly dry thy melting tears. Clif. Here ss for my oath, here 's for my father's death. [Stabbing him. Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentlehearted king. {Stabbing him. York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God ! My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee. [Dies. Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates ; So York may overlook the town of York. [Flourish. Exeunt. ACT II. SCENE I. — A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordsh ire. Drums. Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with their Forces, marching. Edw. I wonder how our princely father 'scap'd, Or whether he be 'scap'd away or no From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit : Had he been ta'en we should have heard the news ; [news ; Had he been slain we should have heard the Or had he 'scap'd, methinks we should have heard The happy tidings of his good escape. — How fares my brother? why is he so sad? Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become. I saw him in the battle range about ; And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth. Methought he bore him in the thickest troop As doth a lion in a herd of neat ; Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs, — Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry, The rest stand all aloof and bark at him. So far'd our father with his enemies ; So fled his enemies my warlike father: Methinks 'tis prize enough to be his son. — See how the morning ope's her golden gates, And takes her farewell of the glorious sun ! How well resembles it the prime of youth, Trimm'd like a younker prancing to his love ! Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns? Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect Not separated with the racking clouds, But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky. See, see ! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,

SCENE I.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 645 As if they vow'd some league inviolable : Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun. In this the heaven figures some event. Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of. I think it cites us, brother, to the field, — That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet, Each one already blazing by our meeds, Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together, And overshine the earth, as this the world. Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear Upon my target three fair shining suns. Rich. Nay, bear three daughters : — by your leave I speak it, You love the breeder better than the male. Enter a Messenger. But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue? Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker-on Whenas the noble Duke of York was slain, Your princely father and my loving lord ! Edw. O, speak no more ! for I have heard too much. Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all. Mess. Environed he was with many foes ; And stood against them as the hope of Troy Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy. But Hercules himself must yield to odds ; And many strokes, though with a little axe, Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak. By many hands your father was subdu'd ; But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen, — Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite, — Laugh'd in his face ; and when with grief he wept, The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks A napkin steeped in the harmless blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain: And after many scorns, many foul taunts. They took his head, and on the gates of York They set the same ; and there it doth remain, The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd. Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean upon, — Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay ! — O Clifford, boisterous Clifford, thou hast slain The flower of Europe for his chivalry ; And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him, For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee !— Now my soul's palace is become a prison : Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body Might in the ground be closed up in rest 1 For never henceforth shall I joy again, Never, O never shall I see more joy. Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture [heart : Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden ; For self-same wind that I should speak withal Is kindling coals, that fire all my breast, And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench. To weep is to make less the depth of grief : Tears, then, for babes ; blows and revenge for me!— Richard, I bear thy name ; I '11 venge thy death, Or die renowned by attempting it. Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee ; His dukedom and his chair with me is left. Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird, Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun : For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say: Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his. March. Enter WARWICK and MONTAGUE, "with Forces. War. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad ? [recount Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should Our baleful news, and at each word's deliverance Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told, The words would add more anguish than the wounds. 0 valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain ! Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death. War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears ; And now, to add more measure to your woes, 1 come to tell you things since then befall'n. After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought, Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp, Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run, Were brought me of your loss and his depart. I, then in London, keeper of the king, Muster'd my scldiers, gather'd flocks of friends, And very well appointed, as I thought, March'd towards Saint Albans to intercept the queen, Bearing the king in my behalf along ; For by my scouts I was advertised That she was coming with a full intent

646 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT ii. To dash our late decree in parliament Touching King Henry's oath and your succession. Short tale to make, — we at St. Albans met, Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought : But whether 'twas the coldness of the king, Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen, That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen ; Or whether 'twas report of her success ; Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour, Who thunders to his captives, Blood and death, I cannot judge : but, to conclude with truth, Their weapons like to lightning came and went; Our soldiers', — like the night-owl's lazy flight, Or like a lazy thrasher with a flail, — Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends. I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause, With promise of high pay and great rewards : But all in vain ; they had no heart to fight, And we in them no hope to win the day; So that we fled ; the king unto the queen ; Lord George, your brother, Norfolk, and myself, In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you ; For in the marches here we heard you were Making another head to fight again. Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick? [land? And when came George from Burgundy to EngWar. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers ; And for your brother, he was lately sent From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy, With aid of soldiers to this needful war. Rich. 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled : Oft Lave I heard his praises in pursuit, But ne'er till now his scandal of retire. War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear ; [mine For thou shalt know this strong right hand of Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head, And wring the awful sceptre from his fist, Were he as famous and as bold in war As he is fam'd for mildness, peace, and prayer. Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick ; blame me not : 'Tis love I bear thy glories makes me speak. But in this troublous time what's to be done? Shall we go throw away our coats of steel, And wrap our bodies in black mourning-gowns, Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads ? Or shall we on the helmets of our foe? Tell our devotion with revengeful arms ? If for the last, say Ay, and to it, lords. War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out; And therefore comes my brother Montague. Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen, With Clifford and the haught Northumberland, And of their feather

many more proud birds, Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax. He swore consent to your succession, His oath enrolled in the parliament ; And now to London all the crew are gone, To frustrate both his oath and what beside May make against the house of Lancaster. Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong: Now if the help of Norfolk and myself, With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March, Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure, Will but amount to five-and-twenty thousand, Why, Via ! to London will we march amain ; And once again bestride our foaming steeds, And once again cry, Charge upon our foes ! But never once again turn back and fly. Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak : Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day That cries Retire, if Warwick bid him stay. Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean ; And when thou fail'st, — as God forbid the hour ! — Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend ! War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York: The next degree is England's royal throne ; For King of England shall thou be proclaim'd In every borough as we pass along ; And he that throws not up his cap for joy, Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head. King Edward, — valiant Richard, — Montague,— Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown, But sound the trumpets and about our task. Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel, — As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds, — I come to pierce it, — or to give thee mine. Edw. Then strike up drums : — God and Saint George for us ! Enter a Messenger. War. How now ! what news ? Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word by me, The queen is coming with a puissant host ; And craves your company for speedy counsel. War. Why, then it sorts, brave warriors: let 's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 647 SCENE l \.~~Before York. Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARCARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Forces. Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York. Yonder 's the head of that arch-enemy That sought to be encompass'd with your crown : Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord? K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck : — To see this sight, it irks my very soul. — Withhold revenge, dear God ! 'tis not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow. Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity And harmful pity must be laid aside. To whom do lions cast their gentle looks ? Not to the beast that would usurp their den. Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick ? Not his that spoils her young before her face. Who scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting? Not he that sets his foot upon her back. The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on, And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood. Ambitious York did level at thy crown, Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows : He, but a duke, would have his son a king, And raise his issue, like a loving sire ; Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son, Didst yield consent to disinherit him, Which argu'd thee a most unloving father. Unreasonable creatures feed their young ; And though man's face be fearful to their eyes, Yet, in protection of their tender ones, Who hath not seen them, — even with those wings Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,— [nest, Make war with him that climb'd unto their Offering their own lives in their young's defence ? For shame, my liege, make them your precedent ! Were it not pity that this goodly boy Should lose his birthright by his father's fault, And long hereafter say unto his child, What my great-grandfather and grandsire got My careless father fondly gave away ? Ah, what a shame were this ! Look on the boy ; And let his manly face, which promiseth Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart To hold thine cwn, and leave thine own with him. [orator, K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the Inferring arguments of mighty force. But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear That things ill got had ever bad success ? And happy always was it for that son Whose father for his hoarding went to hell ? I '11 leave my son my virtuous deeds behind ; And would my father had left me no more I For all the rest is held at such a rate As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep Than in possession any jot of pleasure. — Ah, cousin York ! would thy best friends did know How it doth grieve me that thy head is here ! Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits : our foes are nigh, And fhis soft courage makes your followers'faint. You promis'd knighthood to our forward son : Unsheathe your sword, anddub him presently. — Edward, kneel down. K. Hen. Edward Plantagent, arise a knight ; And learn this lesson, — draw thy sword in right. Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly leave, I '11 draw it as apparent to the crown, And in that quarrel use it to the death. Clif. Why, that is spoken like a towardprinee. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness : For with a band of thirty thousand men Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York ; And in the towns, as they do march along, Proclaims him king, and many fly to him : Darraign your battle, for they are at hand. Clif. I would your highness would depart the field : [absent. The queen hath best success when you are Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune. K. Hen. Why, that 's my fortune too ; therefore I '11 stay. North. Be it with resolution, then, to fight. Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords, And hearten those that fight in your defence . Unsheathe your sword, good father ; cry, Saint George / March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers. Edw. Now, perjur'd Henry ! wilt thou kneel for grace, And set thy diadem upon my head ; Or bide the mortal fortune of the field ? Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy ! Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king? Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee;

 I was adopted heir by his consent : Since when, his oath is broke ; for, as I hear, You, that are king, though he do wear the crown, Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament, To blot out me and put his own son in. Clif. And reason too : Who should succeed the father but the son? Rich. Are you there, butcher? — O, I cannot speak ! [thee, Clif. Ay, crook-back, here I stand to answer Or any he the proudest of thy sort. Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not? Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied. Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight. [the crown? War. Whatsay'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick ! dare you speak ? When you and I met at Saint Albans last, Your legs did better service than your hands. War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine. [fled. Clif. You said so much before, and yet you War. 'Twas not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence. [you stay. North. No, nor your manhood that durst make Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.— Break off the parley ; for scarce I can refrain The execution of my big-swoln heart Upon that Clifford, that cruel child -killer. Clif. I slew thy father, — call'st thou him a child? ' [coward, Rich. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland ; But ere sunset I '11 make thee curse the deed. K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak. [thy lips. Q. Mar. Defy them, then, or else hold close K. Hen. I pr'ythee give no limits to my tongue : I am a king, and privileg'd to speak. Clif. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still. Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword : By him that made us all, I am resolv'd That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue. Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no? A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown. [head ; War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy For York in justice puts his armour on. Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right, There is no wrong, but everything is right. Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands ; For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue. Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam ; But like a foul misshapen stigmatic, Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided, As venom toads or lizards' dreadful stings. Rich. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt, Whose father bears the title of a king, — As if a channel should be call'd the sea, — Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught, To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart? Edw. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns, To make this shameless callet know herself. — Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou, Although thy husband may be Menelaus ; And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd By that false woman as this king by thee. His father revell'd in the heart of France, And tam'd the king, and made the dauphin stoop; And had he match'd according to his state, He might have kept that glory to this day; But when he took a beggar to his bed, And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal-day, Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France, And heap'd sedition on his crown at home. For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride? Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept ; And we, in pity of the gentle king, Had slipp'd our claim until another age. Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring, And that thy summer bred us no increase, We set the axe to thy usurping root ; [selves, And though the edge hath something hit ourYet, know thou, since we have begun to strike, We'll never leave till we have hewn thee down, Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods. Edw. And in this resolution I defy thee ; Not willing any longer conference, Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak. — Sound trumpets! — let our bloody colours wave ! — And either victory or else a grave. Q. Mar. Stay, Edward. Edw. No, wrangling woman, we '11 no longer stay : These words will cost ten thousand lives this day. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 649 SCENE III.— A Field of Battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire. Alarums: excursions. Enter WARWICK. War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race, I lay me down a little while to breathe ; For strokes receiv'd and many blows repaid Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength, And, spite of spite, needs must I rest awhile. Enter EDWARD, running. Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death! [clouded. For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good? Enter GEORGE. Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair; Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us : What counsel give you, whither shall we fly? Edw. Bootless is flight, — they follow us with wings ; And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit. Enter RICHARD. Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself? Thj brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk, Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance; And in the very pangs of death he cried, Like to a dismal clangor heard from far, Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death! So, underneath the belly of their steeds, That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood, The noble gentleman gave up the ghost. War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood : I '11 kill my horse, because I will not fly. Why stand we like soft-hearted women here, Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage ; And look upon, as if the tragedy Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors? Here on my knee I vow to God above I '11 never pause again, never stand still, Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine Or fortune given me measure of revenge. Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine ; And in this vow do chain my soul to thine ! — And ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee, Thou setter-up and plucker-down of kings, — Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands That to my foes this body must be prey, Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope, And give sweet passage to my sinful soul ! — Now, lords, take leave until we meet again, Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth. 'Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; — and, gentle Warwick, Let me embrace thee in my weary arms : I, that did never weep, now melt with woe That winter should cut off our spring-time so. War. Away, away ! Once more, sweet lords, farewell. Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops, And give them leave to fly that will not stay ; And call them pillars that will stand to us; And if we thrive, promise them such rewards As victors wear at the Olympian games : This may plant courage in their quailing breasts ; For yet is hope of life and victory. — Forslow no longer, make we hence amain. _Exeunt. SCENE IV. — Another part of the Field. Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD. Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone: Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York, And this for Rutland ; both bound to revenge, Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall. Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone: This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York ; And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland; And here's the heart that triumphs intheirdeath, And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother To execute the like upon thyself; And so, have at thee ! [They fight. WAR. enters; CLIF. flies. Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase; For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt. SCENE V. — Another part of the Field. Alarum. Enter KING HENRY. K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war, When dying clouds contend with growing light, What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails, Can neither call it perfect day nor night. Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind; Now sways it that way, like the selfsame sea Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind : Sometime the flood prevails, and then the wind ;

 Now one the better, then another best ; Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast, Yet neither conqueror nor conquered : So is the equal poise of this fell war. Here on this molehill will I sit me down. To whom God will, there be the victory ! For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too, Have chid me from the battle ; swearing both They prosper best of all when I am thence. Would I were dead ! if God's good will were so ; For what is in this world but grief and woe ? O God ! methinks it were a happy life To be no better than a homely swain ; To sit upon a hill, as I do now, To carve out dials quaintly, point by point, Thereby to see the minutes how they run, — How many make the hour full complete ; How many hours bring about the day ; How many days will finish up the year ; How many years a mortal man may live. When this is known, then to divide the times, — So many hours must I tend my flock ; So many hours must I take my rest ; So many hours must I contemplate ; So many hours must I sport myself; So many days my ewes have been with young ; So many weeks ere the poor fools will yean ; So many years ere I shall shear the fleece : So minutes, hours, days, months, and years, Pass'd over to the end they were created, Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely ! Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep, Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy To kings that fear their subjects' treachery? O, yes, it doth ; a thousand-fold it doth. And to conclude, — the shepherd's homely curds, His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle, His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade, All which secure and sweetly he enjoys, Is far beyond a prince's delicates, His viands sparkling in a golden cup, His body couched in a curious bed, When care, mistrust, and treason wait on him. Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father •, bringing in the dead body. Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody. This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight, May be possessed with some store of crowns ; And I, that haply take them from him now, May yet ere night yield both my life and them To some man else, as this dead man doth me. — Who 's this ? — O God ! it is my father's face, Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd. O heavy times, begetting such events ! From London by the king was I press'd forth

: My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man, Came on the part of York, press'd by his master ; And I, who at his hands receiv'd my .life, Have by my hands of life bereaved him. — Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did ! — And pardon, father, for I knew not thee ! — My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks ; And no more words till they have flow'd their fill. K. Hen. O piteous spectacle ! O bloody times ! Whilst lions war, and battle for their dens, Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity. — Weep, wretched man, I '11 aid thee tear for tear ; And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war, Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd with grief. Enter a Father that has killed his Son, -with the body in his arms. Path. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me, Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold ; For I have bought it with an hundred blows. — But let me see : is this our foeman's face ? Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son ! Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee, [arise, Throw up thine eye ! see, see what showers Blown with the windy tempest of my heart, Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart ! — O pity, God, this miserable age ! — What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly, Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural, This deadly quarrel daily doth beget ! — O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon, And hath bereft thee of thy life too late J K. Hen. Woe above woe ! grief more than common grief ! [deeds! — O that my death would stay these ruthful O pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity ! — The red rose and the white are on his face, The fatal colours of our striving houses : The one his purple blood right well resembles ; The other his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth: Wither one rose, and let the other flourish ; If you contend, a thousand lives must wither. Son. How will my mother for a father's death Take on with me, and ne'er be satisfied ! [son Path. How will my wife for slaughter of my Shed seas of tears, and ne'er be satisfied ! K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances Misthink the king, and not be satisfied ! Son. Was ever son so rued a father's death? Path. Was ever father so bemoan'd his son?

SCENE VI.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 65i K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe? Much is your sorrow ; mine ten times so much. Son. I '11 bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill. [Exit with the body. Path. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet ; My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre, — For from my heart thine image ne'er shall go ; My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell ; And so obsequious will thy father be, E'en for the loss of thee, having no more, As Priam was for all his valiant sons. [will, I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that For I have murdered where I should not kill. {Exit with the body. K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care, Here sits a king more woeful than you are. Alarums : excursions. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE OF WALES, and EXETER. Prince. Fly, father, fly ! for all your friends are fled, And Warwick rages like a chafed bull : Away ! for death doth hold us in pursuit. Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord ; towards Berwick post amain : Edwardand Richard, like a brace of greyhounds Having the fearful flying hare in sight, With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath, And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands, Are at our backs ; and therefore hence amain. Exe. Away ! for vengeance comes along with them: Nay, stay not to expostulate, — make speed ; Or else come after : I '11 away before. K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter : Not that I fear to stay, but love to go Whither the queen intends. Forward ; away ! [Exeunt. SCENE VI. — Another part of the Field. A loud Alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded. Clif. Here burns my candle out,— ay, here it dies, Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light. O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow More than my body's parting with my soul ! My love and fear glu'd many friends to thee ; And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melt. Impairing Henry, strengthening misproud York, The common people swarm like summer flies ; And whither fly the gnats but to the sun? And who shines now but Henry's enemies ? 0 Phcebus, hadst thou never given consent That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds, Thy burning car never had scorch'd the earth ! And, Henry, hadst thou sway'das kings should do, Or as thy father and his father did, Giving no ground unto the house of York, They never then had sprung like summer flies ; 1 and ten thousand in this luckless realm Had left no mourning widows for our death ; And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace. For what doth cherish weeds bat gentle air? And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity ? Bootless are plaints, and cureless are my wounds ; No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight : The foe is merciless, and v/ill not pity ; For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity. The air hath got into my deadly wounds, And much effuse of blood doth make me faint. Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest ; I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, — split my breast. [He faints. Alarum and retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers. Edw. Now breathe we, lords : good fortune bids us pause, [looks. — And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen, That led calm Henry, though he were a king, As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust, Command an argosy to stem the waves. But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them? War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape ; For, though before his face I speak the words, Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave : And, whereso'er he is, he 's surely dead. [CLIFFORD groans, and dies. Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave ? [parting. Rich. A deadly groan, like life and death'sdeEdw. See who it is ; and, now the battle 's ended, If friend or foe, let him be gently us'd. Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford ; Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth, But set his murdering knife unto the root From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring, — I mean our princely father, Duke of York. War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,

652 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT in. Your father's head, which Clifford placed there ; Instead whereof let this supply the room : Measure for measure must be answered. Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house, That nothing sung but death to us and ours : Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound. And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak. [Soldiers bring the body forward. War. I think his understanding is bereft. — Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?— Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life, And he nor sees nor hears us what we say. Rich. O, would he did ! and so, perhaps, he doth: 'Tis but his policy to counterfeit, Because he would avoid such bitter taunts Which in the time of death he gave our father. Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words. Rich. Clifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace. Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence. War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults. Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults. [York. Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to Edw. Thou pitiedst Rutland, I will pity thee. Geo. Where 's Captain Margaret, to fence you now? War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear as thou wast wont. [goes hard Rick. What, not an oath? nay, then the world When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath. — I know by that he 's dead ; and, by my soul, If this right hand would buy two hours' life, That I in all despite might rail at him, This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood Stifle the villain whose unstaunched thirst York and young Rutland could not satisfy. War. Ay, but he 's dead : off with the traitor's head, And rear it in the place your father's stands. — And now to London with triumphant march, There to be crowned England's royal king. From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France, And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen : So shalt thou sinew both these lands together ; And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again ; For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt, Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears. First will I see the coronation ; And then to Brittany I '11 cross the sea, To effect this marriage, so it please my lord. Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be; For in thy shoulder do I build my seat, And never will I undertake the thing Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting. — Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloster ; — And

George, of Clarence ; — Warwick, as ourself, Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best. Rick. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloster ; For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous. War. Tut, that 's a foolish observation : Richard, be Duke of Gloster. Now to London, To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt. ACT III. SCENE I. — A Chase in the North of England. Here stand we both, and aim we at the best : And, for the time shall not seem tedious, I '11 tell thee what befell me on a day In this self-place where now we mean to stand. 2 Keep. Here comes a man, let 's stay till he be past. Enter KING HENRY, disguised, with a prayerbook. K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love, To greet mine own land with my wishful sight. No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine ; Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee, Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wast anointed : No bending knee will call thee Caesar now, No humble suitors press to speak for right, No, not a man comes for redress of thee ; s a For how can I help them, and not myself? I Keep. Ay, here 's a deer whose skin '; keeper's fee : This is the quondam king ; let 's seize upon him.

Forbear awhile ; we '11 hear a little K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid ; And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister To wife for Edward : if this news be true, Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost; For Warwick is a subtle orator, And Louis a prince soon won with moving words. By this account, then, Margaret may win him ; For she 's a woman to be pitied much : Her sighs will make a battery in his breast ; Her tears will pierce into a marble heart ; The tiger will be mild while she doth mourn ; And Nero will be tainted with remorse, To hear and see her plaints, her brinish tears. Ay, but she 's come to beg ; Warwick, to give : She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry ; He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward. She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd ; He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd ; That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more ; [wrong, Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the Inferreth arguments of mighty strength, And in conclusion wins the king from her, Wiih promise of his sister, and what else, To strengthenand support King Ed ward's place. O Margaret, thus 'twill be ; and thou, poor soul, Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn ! 2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens? K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to : A man at least, for less I should not be ; And men may talk of kings, and why not I ? 2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king. [enough. K. Hen. Why, so I am— in mind ; and that's 2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown ? [head ; K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones, Nor to be seen : my crown is call'd content, — A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy. 2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content, Your crown content and you must be contented To go along with us ; for, as we think, You are the king King Edward hath depos'd ; And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance, Will apprehend you as his enemy. K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath ? [now. 2 Keep. No, never such an oath ; nor will not K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England ? [remain. 2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now A'. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old; My father and my grandfather were kings ; And you were sworn true subjects unto me : And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths ? i Keep. No ; For we were subjects but while you were king. K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man? Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear ! Look, as I blow this feather from my face, And as the air blows it to me again, Obeying with my wind when I do blow, And yielding to another when it blows, Commanded always by the greater gust ; Such is the lightness of you common men. But do not break your oaths ; for of that sin My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty. Go where you will, the king shall be commanded ; And be you kings ; command, and I '11 obey. I Keep. We are true subjects to the king, King Edward. K. Hen. So would you be £.gain tp Henry, If he were seated as King Edward is. i Keep. We charge you, in God's name and in the king's, To go with us unto the officers. K. Hen. Ay, widow? then I warrant you all your lands, An if what pleases him shall pleasure you. Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow. [Aside. Clar. I fear her not, unless she chance to fall. [Aside to GLOSTER. Glo. God forbid that ! for he '11 take vantages. [Aside to CLARENCE. K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? tell me. Clar. I think he means to beg a child of her. [Aside to GLOSTER. Glo. Nay, whip me, then ; he '11 rather give her two. [Aside to CLARENCE. L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord. Glo. You shall have four if you '11 be ruled by him. [Aside. K. But, mighty lord, this merry inclination Accords not with the sadness of my suit: Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no. K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request; No, if thou dost say no to my demand. L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end. Glo. The widow likes him not, she knits her brows. [Aside to CLARENCE. SCENE II.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 655 K. Edw. Her looks do argue her replete with modesty ; Her words do show her wit incomparable ; All her perfections challenge sovereignty : One way or other, she is for a king ; And she shall be my love, or else my queen.— [Aside. Say that King Edward take thee for his queen ? L. Grey. ;Tis better said than done, my gracious lord : I am a subject fit to jest withal, But far unfit to be a sovereign. K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee I speak no more than what my soul intends ; And that is to enjoy thee for my love. L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto : I know I am too mean to be your queen, And yet too good to be your concubine. K. Edw. \ ou cavil, widow : I did mean my queen. L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace my sons should call you father. K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother. Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children ; And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor, Have other some : why, 'tis a happy thing To be the father unto many sons. Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen. Glo. The ghostly father now hath done his shrift. [Aside to CLARENCE. Clar. When he was made a shriver, 'twas for shift. [Aside to GLOSTER. K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had. [sad. Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks very K. Edw. You 'd think it strange if I should marry her. Clar. To whom, my lord? K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself. Glo. That would be ten days' wonder at the least. Clar. That 's a day longer than a wonder lasts. Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes. K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers : I can tell you both Her suit is granted for her husband's lands. Enter a Nobleman. Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken, And brought your prisoner to your palace gate. K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower : — And go we, brothers, to the man that took him, To question of his apprehension. — Widow, go you along : — lords, use her honourable. [Exeunt KING EDWARD, LADY GREY, CLARENCE, and Nobleman. Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.— Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all, That fromhis loins no nopeful branch may spring, To cross me from the golden time I look for ! And yet, between my soul's desire and me, — The lustful Edward's title buried, — Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward, And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies, To take their rooms, ere I can place myself: A cold premeditation for my purpose ! Why, then, I do but dream on sovereignty ; Like one that rtands upon a promontory, And spies a far-off shore where he would tread, Wishing his foot were equal with his eye ; And chides the sea that sunders him from thence Saying he '11 lade it dry to have his way : So do I wish the crown, being so far off; And so I chide the means that keep me from it j And so I say I '11 cut the causes off, Flattering me with impossibilities. — [much, My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweens too Unless my hand and strength could equal them. Well, say there is no kingdom, then, for Richard ; What other pleasure can the world afford ? I '11 make my heaven in a lady's lap, And deck my body in gay ornaments, And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks, O miserable thought ! and more unlikely Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns ! Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb : And, for I should not deal in her soft laws, She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe, To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub; To make an envious mountain on my back, Where sits deformity to mock my body ; To shape my legs of an unequal size ; To disproportion me in every part, Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp That carries no impression like the dam. And am I, then, a man to be belov'd ? 0 monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought ! Then, since this earth affords no joy to me But to command, to check, to o'er bear such As are of better person than myself, 1 '11 make my heaven to dream upon the crown, And whiles I live to account this world but hell, Until my misshap'd trunk that bears this head Be round empaled with a glorious crown. And yet I know not how to get the crown, For many lives stand between me and home :

656 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT m. And I,— like one lost in a thorny wood, That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns, Seeking a way, and straying from the way ; Not knowing how to find the open air, But toiling desperately to find it out, — Torment myself to catch the English crown: And from that torment I will free myself, Or hew my way out with a bloody axe. Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile ; And cry content to that which grieves my heart ; And wet my cheeks with artificial tears, And frame my face to all occasions. I '11 drown more sailors than the mermaid shall ; I '11 slay more gazers than the basilisk ; I '11 play the orator as well as Nestor ; Deceive more slily than Ulysses could ; And, like a Sinon, take another Troy : I can add colours to the cameleon ; Change shapes with Proteus for advantages ; And set the murderous Machiavel to school. Can I do this, and cannot get a crown ? Tut, were it further off, I'll pluck it down! {Exit. SCENE III.— FRANCE. A Room in the Palace. Flourish. Enter Louis, the French King, and LADY BONA, attended; the KING takes his state. Then enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD herSont and the EARL OF OXFORD. K. Lou. Fair Queen of England, worthy Margaret, [Rising. Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Louis doth sit. [Margaret Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France : now Must strike her sail, and learn awhile to serve Where kings command. I was, I must confess, Great Albion's queen in former golden days : But now mischance hath trod my title down, And with dishonour laid me on the ground ; Where I must take like seat unto my fortune, And to my humble seat conform myself. K. Lou. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair ? Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears, [in cares. And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd K. Lou. Whatever it be, be thou still like thyself, And sit thee by our side : yield not thy neck [Seats her by him. To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind Still ride in triumph over all mischance. Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief; It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief. Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts, And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak. Now, therefore, be it known to noble Louis That Henry, sole possessor of my love, Is, of a king, become a banish'd man, And forc'd to live in Scotland a forlorn; While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York Usurps the regal title and the seat Of England's true-anointed lawful king. This is the cause that I, poor Margaret, — With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir, — Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid ; And if thou fail us, all our hope is done : Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help ; Our people and our peers are both misled, Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight, And, as thou see'st, ourselves in heavy plight. K. Lou. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm, While we bethink a means to break it off. Q. Mar. The more we stay the stronger grows our foa. [cour thee. K. Lou. The more I stay the more I '11 sucQ. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow : — And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow ! Enter WARWICK, attended. K. Lou. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence? Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend. K. Lou. Welcome, brave Warwick ! What brings thee to France? [Descending from his state. Q. MAR. rises. Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise; For this is he that moves both wind and tide. War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion, My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend, I come, in kindness and unfeigned love, — First, to do greetings to thy royal person ; And then to crave a league of amity; And lastly, to confirm that amity With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister, To England's king in lawful marriage, [done. Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is War. And, gracious madam [to BONA], in our king's behalf, I am commanded, with your leave and favour, Humbly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart ; Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears, Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.

SCENE III.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 657 Q. Mar. King Louis,— -and Lady Bona,— hear me speak, Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love, But from deceit bred by necessity ; For how can tyrants safely govern home Unless abroad they purchase great alliance? To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice, — That Henry liveth still ; but were he dead, Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's son. [marriage Look therefore, Louis, that by 'this league and Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour ; For though usurpers sway the rule awhile, Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs. War. Injurious Margaret ! Prince. And why not queen? War. Because thy father Henry did usurp ; And thou no more art prince than she is queen. Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt, Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain ; And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth, Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest ; And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth, Who by his prowess conquered all France : From these our Henry lineally descends. War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse, You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten? Methinks these peers of France should smile at that. But for the rest, — you tell a pedigree Of threescore and two years ; a silly time To make prescription for a kingdom's worth. Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege, Whom thou obey'dst thirty and six years, And not bewray thy treason with a blush? War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right, Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree? For shame ! leave Henry, and call Edward king. Oxf. Call him my king by whose injurious doom My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death? and more than so, my father, Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years, When nature brought him to the door of death? No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm, This arm upholds the house of Lancaster. War. And I the house of York. K. Lou. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward, and Oxford, Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside While 1 use further conference with Warwick. Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not ! [Retiring with the PRINCE and OXF. K. Lou. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience, Is Edward your true king? for I were loth To link with him that were not lawful chosen. War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour. [eye ? K. Lou. But is he gracious in the people's War. The more that Henry was unfortunate. K. Lou. Then further, — all dissembling set aside, — Tell me for truth the measure of his love Unto our sister Bona. War. Such it seems As may beseem a monarch like himself. Myself have often heard him say, and swear, That this love was an eternal plant, Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground, The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun; Exempt from envy, but not from disdain, Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain. [solve, K. Lou. Now, sister, let us hear your firm reBona. Your grant or your denial shall be mine : — Yet I confess [to WAR.] that often ere this day, When I have heard your king's desert recounted, Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire. K. Lou. Then, Warwick, thus, — Our sister shall be Edward's ; And now forthwith shall articles be drawn Touching the jointure that your king must make, Which with her dowry shall be counter pois'd. — Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness That Bona shall be wife to the English king. Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king. Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick ! it was thy device By this alliance to make void my suit : Before thy coming, Louis was Henry's friend. K. Lou. And still is friend to him and Margaret : But if your title to the crown be weak, — As may appear by Edward's good success, — Then 'tis but reason tliat I be releas'd From giving aid which late I promised. Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand That your estate requires and mine can yield. War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease, Where having nothing, nothing can he lose. And as for you yourself, our quondam queen, You have a father able to maintain you ; And better 'twere you troubled him than France.

658 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT III. Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick, — Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings ! I will not hence till, with my talk and tears, Both full of truth, I make King Louis behold Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love ; For both of you are birds of self-same feather. [A horn sounded within. K. Lou. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee. Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you, Sent from your brother, Marquis Montague : — These from our king unto your majesty : — • And, madam, these for you ; from whom I know not. [To MAR. They all read their letters. Oxf. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress [his. Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at Prince. Nay, mark how Louis stamps, as he were nettled: I hope all 's for the best. K. Lou. Warwick, what are thy news? — and yours, fair queen? [hop'djoys. t Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unWar. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent. [Lady Grey? K. Lou. What, has your king married the And now, to soothe your forgery and his, Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? Is this the alliance that he seeks with France? Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner? Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before : This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. [heaven, War. King Louis, I here protest, in sight of And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's,— No more my king, for he dishonours me, But most himself, if he could see his shame. Did I forget that by the house of York My father came untimely to his death? Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? Did I impale him with the regal crown? Did I put Henry from his native right? And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame? Shame on himself! for my desert is honour: And, to repair my honour lost for him, I here renounce him, and return to Henry. — My noble queen, let former grudges pass, And henceforth I am thy true senator : I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bonay And replant Henry in his former state. Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love ; And I forgive and quite forget old faults, And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend. War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend, That if King Louis vouchsafe to furnish us With some few bands of chosen soldiers, I '11 undertake to laud them on our coast, And force the tyrant from his seat by war. 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him : And as for Clarence, — as my letters tell me, — He 's very likely now to fall from him, For matching more for wanton lust than honour, Or than for strength and safety of our country. Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd But by thy help to this distressed queen? Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live, Unless thou rescue him from foul despair? Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one. [yours. War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with K. Lou. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's. Therefore, at last, I firmly am resolv'd You shall have aid. Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once. [in post, K. Lou. Then, England's messenger, return And tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Louis of France is sending over masquers To revel it with him and his new bride : Thpusee'st what 'spast, — go fear thy king withal. Bona. Tell him, in hope he '11 prove a widower shortly, I '11 wear the willow-garland for his sake. Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning-weeds are laid aside, And I am ready to put armour on. War. Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong ; And therefore I '11 uncrown him ere 't be long. There 's thy reward : be gone. [Exit Mess. K. Lou. But, Warwick, Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men, Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle ; And, as occasion serves, this noble queen And prince shall follow with a fresh supply. Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt, — What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty ? War. This shall assure my constant loyalty, — That if our queen and this young prince agree, I '11 join mine eldest daughter, and my joy, To him forthwith in holy wedlock-bands.

SCENE III.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 659 Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion. — Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, Therefore delay not, — give thy hand to Warwick ; A.nd, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable, That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine. Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it ; And here to pledge my vow, I give my hand. [Me gives his hand to WARWICK. K. Lou. Why stay we now ? These soldiers shall be levied, And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high-admiral, Shalt waft them over with our royal fleet. — I long till Edward fall by war's mischance, For mocking marriage with a dame of France. [Exeunt all but WARWICK. War. I come from Edward as ambassador, But I return his sworn and mortal foe : Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me, But dreadful war shall answer his demand. Had he none else to make a stale but me ? Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow. I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown, And I'll be chief to bring him down again : Not that I pity Henry's misery, But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit. ACT IV. SCENE I. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter GLOSTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, MONTAGUE, and others. Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey ? Hath not our brother made a worthy choice ? Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France ; How could he stay till Warwick made return? Som. My lords, forbear this talk ; here comes the king. Glo. And his well-chosen bride, Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think. Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, attended ; LADY GREY, as Queen ; PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS, and others. K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice, That you stand pensive, as half malcontent ? Clar. As well as Louis of France or the Earl of Warwick ; Which are so weak of courage and in judgment That they '11 take no offence at our abuse. K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause, They are but Louis and Warwick : I am Edward, Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will. [king : Glo. And shall have your will, because our Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well. K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too ? Glo. Not I : No, God forbid that I should wish them sever'd Whom God hath join'd together ; ay, and 'twere pity To sunder them that yoke so well together. A'. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside, Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey Should not become my wife and England's queen : — And you too, Somerset and Montague, Speak freely what you think. [Louis Clar. Then this is mine opinion, — that King Becomes your enemy for mocking him About the marriage of the Lady Bona. Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge, Is now dishonoured by this new marriage. K. Edw. What if both Louis and Warwick be appeas'd By such invention as I can devise ? Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance [wealth Would more have strengthen'd this our common'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage. Hast. Why, knows not Montague that of itself England is safe, if true within itself? Mont. But the safer when 'tis back'd with France. Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting France : Let us be back'd with God, and with the seas Which he hath given for fence impregnable, And with their helps only defend ourselves ; In them and in ourselves our safety lies. Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves To have the heir of die Lord Hungerford. K Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will and grant ; And for this once my will shall stand for law. 670. And yet methinks your grace hath not done well, To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales Unto the brother of your loving bride ; She better would have fitted me or Clarence: But in your bride you bury brotherhood.

660 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT iv. Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son, And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere. K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence ! is it for a wife That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee. Clar. In choosing for yourself you show'd your judgment, Which being shallow, you shall give me leave To play the broker in mine own behalf ; And to that end I shortly mind to leave you. K. Edw. Leave me or tarry, Edward will be king, And not be tied unto his brother's will. Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his majesty To raise my state to title of a queen, Do me but right, and you must all confess That I was not ignoble of descent ; And meaner than myself have had like fortune. But as this title honours me and mine, So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing, Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow. K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns : What danger or what sorrow can befall thee, So long as Edward is thy constant friend And their true sovereign, whom they must obey? Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too, Unless they seek for hatred at my hands ; Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe, And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath. Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more. [Aside. Enter a Messenger. K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news From France? [words Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters ; and few But such as I, without your special pardon, Dare not relate. K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee : therefore, in brief, [them. Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess What answer makes King Louis unto our letters? Mess. Atmy depart, these were his very words: Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Louis of France is sending over masquers To revel it with him and his new bride. K. Edw. Is Lou is so brave? belike he thinks me Henry. But what said Lady Bona to my marriage ? Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain : Tell him, in hope he 'II prove a widower shortly, 1 '// wear the willow-garland for his sake. K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less ; [queen ? She had the wrong. But what said Henry's For I have heard that she was there in place. Mess. Ha ! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words? Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd : They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption. But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret? Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter. Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger. Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast, For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter ; That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage I may not prove inferior to yourself. — You that love me and Warwick, follow me. [Exit, and SOMERSET follows. Glo. Not I: My thoughts aim at a further matter ; I Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown. [Aside. K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick \ Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen ; And haste is needful in this desperate case. — Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf Go levy men, and make prepare for war ; They are already, or quickly will be landed : Myself in person will straight follow you. [Exeunt FEM. and STAF. But ere I go, Hastings and Montague, Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest, Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance : Tell me if you love Warwick more than me? If it be so, then both depart to him ; I rather wish you foes than hollow friends: But if you mind to hold your true obedience, Give me assurance with some friendly vow, That I may never have you in suspect, [true ! Stand we in good array ; for they no doubt Will issue out again and bid us battle : If not, the city being but of small defence, We '11 quickly rouse the traitors in the same. War. O, welcome, Oxford ! for we want thy help. Enter MONTAGUE, with Forces, drum, and colours. Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster ! [He and his Forces enter the city. Glo. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear. K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory : My mind presageth happy gain and conquest. Enter SOMERSET, with Forces, drum, and colours. Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster ! [He and his Forces enter the city. Glo. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset, ˆ Have sold their lives unto the house of York ; And thou shaltˆbe the third, if this sword hold. Enter CLARENCE, with Forces, drum, and colours. War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along, Of force enough to bid his brother battle ; With whom an upright zeal to right prevails More than the nature of a brother's love ! — Come, Clarence, come ; thou wilt, if Warwick call Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means ? [Taking the red rose out of his hat. Look here, I throw my infamy at thee : I will not ruinate my father's house, Who gave his blood to lime the stones together, And set up Lancaster. Why, trowst thou, Warwick, That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural, To bend the fatal instruments of war Against his brother and his lawful king ? Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath : To keep that oath were more impiety Than Jephtha's, when he sacrific'd his daughter. I am so sorry for my trespass made, That, to deserve well at my brother's hands, I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe ; With resolution wheresoe'er I meet thee, — As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad, — To plague thee for thy foul misleading me. And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee, And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks. — Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends ; And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults, For I will henceforth be no more unconstant. K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd, Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate. Glo. Welcome, good Clarence ; this is brotherlike. War. O passing traitor, perjur'd and unjust ! K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight ? Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears ? War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence ! I will away towards Barnet presently, And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st. K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way. Lords, to the field : Saint George and victory. [March. Exeunt. SCENE 11.—ˆ field of Battle near Bttrnct. Alarums and excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing in WARWICK wounded. K. Edw. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear ; For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.— Now, Montague, sit fast ; I seek for thee, That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. [Exit.

668 THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT V. War. Ah, who is nigh ? come to me, friend or foe, And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick ? Why ask I that ? my mangled body shows, My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows, That I must yield my body to the earth, And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe. Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle, Under whose shade the ramping lion slept, Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree, And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind. These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black vail, Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun, To search the secret treasons of the world : The wrinkles in my brows, nowfill'd with blood, Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres ; For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave? And who durst smile when Warwick bant his brow? Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood ! My parks, my walks, my manors that I had, Even now forsake me; and of all my lands Is nothing left me but my body's length ! Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust ! And, live we how we can, yet die we must. Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET. Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick ! wert thou as we are, We might recover all our loss again: The queen from France hath brought a puissant power ; [fly ! Even now we heard the news : ah, couldst thou War. Why, then, I would not fly. — Ah, Montague, If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand, And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile ! Thou lov'st me not ; for, brother, if thou didst, Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood That glues my lips and will not let me speak. Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead. Som. Ah, Warwick ! Montague hath breath'd his last ; And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick, And said, Commend me to my valiant brother. And more he would have said; and more he spoke, Which sounded like a cannon in a vault, That might not be distinguish'd ; but at last, I well might hear, deliver'd with a groan, 6>, farewell \ Wanvickl War. Sweet rest his soul!— fly, lords, and save yourselves ; For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heav'n. [Dies. Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen's great power ! _Exeunt, bearing off " W AR.'S body. SCENE III.— Another part of 'the Field. Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph; with CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and the rest. K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course, And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory. But in the midst of this bright-shining day I spy a black, suspicious, threatening cloud, That will encounter with our glorious sun Ere he attain his easeful western bed : I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen Hath rais'd in Gallia have arriv'd our coast, And, as we hear, march on to fight with us. Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud And blow it to the source from whence it came : Thy very beams will dry those vapours up; For every cloud engenders not a storm, [strong, Glo. The queen is valu'd thirty thousand And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her : If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd, Her faction will be full as strong as ours. K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends [bury; That they do hold their course toward TewksWe, having now the best at Barnet field, Will thither straight, for willingness rids way ; And as we march, our strength will be augmented In every county as we go along. — Strike up the drum ; cry, Courage ! and away. {Exeunt. SCENE IV. — Plains near Tewksbury. March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and Soldiers. Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wail their loss, But cheerly seek how to redress their harms. What though the mast be now blown overboard, The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost. And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood ; Yet lives our pilot still : is 't meet that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad, With tearful eyes add water to the sea, [much ; And give more strength to that which hath too Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits 011 the rock.

SCENE IV.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 669 Which industry and courage might have sav'd ? Ah, what a shame ! ah, what a fault were this ! Say Warwick was our anchor; what of that? And Montague our top-mast; what of him? Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of these? Why, is not Oxford here another anchor ? And Somerset another goodly mast ? [lings? The friends of France our shrouds and tackAnd, though unskilful, why not Ned and I For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge? We will not from the helm to sit and weep ; But keep our course, though the rough wind say no, [wreck. From shelves and rocks that threaten us with As ˆood to chide the waves as speak them fair. And what is Edward but a ruthless sea ? What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit? And Richard but a ragged fatal rock? All thesj the enemies to our poor bark. Say you can swim ; ulas, 'tis but a while ! Tread on the sand ; why, there you quickly sink: Bestride the rock ; the tide will wash you off, Or else you famish, — that 's a threefold death. This speak I, lords, to let you understand, If case some one of you would fly from us, That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers, [rocks. More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and Why, courage, then ! what cannot be avoided, 'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear. Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant spirit Should, if a coward heard her speak these words, Infuse his breast with magnanimity, And make him naked foil a man-at-arms. I speak not this as doubting any here ; For did I but suspect a fearful man, He should have leave to go away betimes ; Lest in our need he might infect another, And make him of like spirit to himself. If any such be here, — as God forbid !— Let him depart before we need his help. Oxf. Women and children of so high a courage, And warriors faint ! why, 'twere perpetual shame. — O brave young prince ! thy famous grandfather Doth live again in thee : long mayst thou live To bear his image and renew his glories! Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope, Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day, If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at. Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset; — sweet Oxford, thanks. Enter, at a distance, KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces. K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood, [strength, Which, by the heavens' assistance and your Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night. I need not add more fuel to your fire ; For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out: Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords. O_. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should sayMy tears gainsay ; for every word I speak, Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes. Therefore, no more but this: — Henry, your sovereign, Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd, His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain, His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent; And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil. You fight in justice : then, in God's name, lords, Be valiant, and give signal to the fight. [Exeunt both armies. SCENE V. — Another part of the Plains. Alarums; excursions: and afterwards a retreat. Then enter KING EDWARD, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, and Forces, with QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET, prisoners. K. Edw. Now, here a period of tumultuous broils. 670 THIRD PART OF KINO HENRY VI. [ACT V. Glo. It is; and lo, where youthful Edward comes. Enter Soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD. K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak. What, can so young a thorn begin to prick? — Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects, And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to? Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York ! Suppose that I am now my father's mouth ; Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou, Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee, Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to. Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd ! Glo. That you might still have worn the petticoat, And ne'er have stol'n the breech from Lancaster. Prince. Let ˆEsop fable in a winter's night; His currish riddles -sort not with this place. Glo. By heaven, brat, I '11 plague you for that word. [to men. Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague Glo. For God's sake, take away this captive scold. Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crookback rather. K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue. Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert. Prince. I know my duty; you are all undutiful: [George, — Lascivious Edward, — and thou, perjur'd And thou, misshapen Dick, — I tell ye all I am your better, traitors as ye are ; — And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine. K. Edw. Take that, the likeness of this railer here. [Stabs him. Glo. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony. [Stabs him. Clar. And there 's for twitting me with perjury. [Stabs him. Q. Mar. O, kill me too ! Glo. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her. K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold ; for we have done too much. Glo. Why should she live, to fill the world with words? K. Edw. What, doth she swoon? use means for her recovery. Glo. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother ; I '11 hence to London on a serious matter : Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news. Clar. What? what? Glo. The Tower ! the Tower ! \Exit. Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned ! speak to thy mother, boy! [ers! — Canst thou not speak? — O traitors! murderThey that stabb'd Caesar shed no blood at all, Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame, If this foul deed were by to equal it : He was a man; — this, in respect, a child, — And men ne'er spend their fury on a child, [it? What 's worse than murderer, that I may name No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak : — And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. — Butchers and villains ! bloody cannibals ! How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd ! You have no children, butchers! if you had, The thought of them would have stiri'd up remorse:. But if you ever chance to have a child, Look in his youth to have him so cut off As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince ! K. Edw. Away with her ; go, bear her hence perforce. Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me here ; [death : Here sheathe thy sword, I '11 pardon thee my What, wilt thou not? — then, Clarence, do it thou. [ease. Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do ; sweet Clarence, do thou do it. Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it? Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself: 'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity. What! wilt thou not? — Where is that devil's butcher, [thou? Hard-favour'd Richard? — Richard, where ait Thou art not here : murder is thy alms-deed ; Petitioners for blood thou ne'er putt'st back. K. Edw. Away, I say ; I charge ye, bear her hence. Q. Mar. So come to you and yours as to this prince ! [Exit, led out forcibly. K. Edw. Where's Richard gone? Clar. To London, all in post ; and, as I guess, To make a bloody supper in the Tower. K. Edw. He 's sudden, if a thing comes in his head. [sort Now march we hence : discharge the common With pay and thanks, and let 's away to London, And see our gentle queen how well she fares, •*-"• By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Extunt.

SCENE VI.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 671 SCENE VI. — LONDON. A Room in the Tower. KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a book in his hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter GLOSTER. Glo. Good-day, my lord. What, at your book so hard? K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:— my lord, I should say rather; 'Tis sin to flatter, good was little better : Good Gloster and good devil were alike, And both preposterous: therefore, not good lord. Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves : we must confer. [Exit Lieutenant. K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf; So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece, And next his throat unto the butcher's knife. — What scene of death hath Roscius now to act? Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind; The thief doth fear each bush an officer. K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush, With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush ; And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird, Have now the fatal object in my eye [kill'd. Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete, That taught his son the office of a fowl ! And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd. K. Hen. I, Daedalus; my poor boy, Icarus ; Thy father, Minos, that denied our course ; The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy, Thy brother Edward ; and thyself, the sea, Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life. Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words ! My breast can better brook thy dagger's point Than can my ears that tragic history. But wherefore dost thou come? is 't for my life? Glo. Think'st thou I am an executioner? K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art : If murdering innocents be executing, Why, then thou art an executioner. Glo. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption. K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou didst presume, Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine. And thus I prophesy, — that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear, And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's, And many an orphan's water-standing eye, — Men for their sons, wives for their husbands, And orphans for their parents' timeless death,— Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born. The owl shriek'd at thy birth, — an evil sign; The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time ; Dogs howTd, and hideous tempest shook down trees ; The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top, And chattering pies in dismal discords sung. Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain, And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope, To wit, — An indigest deformed lump, Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree. Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast bom, To signify thou cam'st to bite the world : And if the rest be true which I have heard, Thou cam'st — Glo. I '11 hear no more : — die, prophet, in thy speech : \Stabs him. For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd. K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this. 0 God forgive my sins and pardon thee ! [Dies. Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster Sink in the ground ? I thought it would have mounted. [death ! See how my sword weeps for the poor king's 0, may such purple tears be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house ! — If any spark of life be yet remaining, Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither,. — [Stabs him again. 1, that have neither pity, love, nor fear. — Indeed, 'tis true that Henry told me of; For I have often heard my mother say 1 came into the world with my legs forward : Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste, And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right : The midwife wonder'd ; and the women cried, (9, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth ! And so I was, which plainly signified That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog. Then, since the heavens have shap'dmy body so, Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it. I have no brother, I am like no brother ; And this word love, which greybeards call divine, Be resident in men like one another, And not in me : I am myself alone. — Clarence, beware ; thou keep'st me from the light: But I will sort a pitchy day for thee ; For I will buzz abroad such prophecies That Edward shall be fearful of his life : And then, to purge his fear, I '11 be thy death. King Henry and the prince his son are gone :

THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. [ACT v. Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest ; Counting myself but bad till I be best. — I '11 throw thy body in another room, And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom. [Exit with the body. SCENE VII. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Flourish. KING EDWARD is discovered sittingon his throne ; QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant PRINCE, CLARENCE, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and others ; near him. K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne, Repurchas'd with the blood of enemies. What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn, ˆ Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride ! Three Dukes of Somerset, — threefold renown'd For hardy and undoubted champions ; Two Cliffords, as the father and the son ; And two Northumberlands, — two braver men Ne'er spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound ; With them the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague, That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion, And made the forest tremble when they roar'd. Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat, And made our footstool of security. — Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy. — Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night ; Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat, That thou mightst repossess the crown in peace : And of our labours thou shall reap the gain. Glo. I '11 blast his harvest if your head were laid; For yet I am not look'd on in the world. This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave ; And heave it shall some weight, or break my back : — Work thou the way, — and that shalt execute. [Aside. K. Edw. Clarence and Gloster, love my lovely queen ; And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both. Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe. K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks. Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st, Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit. — To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master, And cried, all hail ! when as he meant all harm. [Aside. K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights, Having my country's peace and brothers' loves. Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret ? Reignier, her father, to the King of France Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem, And hither have they sent it for her ransom. K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France. And now what rests but that we spend the time With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows, Such as befit the pleasure of the court ? Sounddrumsand trumpets ! farewell, sourannoyi For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy. [Exeunt.

674 KING RICHARD III. [ACT And therefore, — since I cannot prove a lover, To entertain these fair well-spoken days, — I am determined to prove a villain, And hate the idle pleasures of these days. Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous, By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams, To set my brother Clarence and the king In deadly hate the one against the other : And, if King Edward be as true and just As I am subtle, false, and treacherous, This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up, — About a prophecy, which says that G Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. Dive, thoughts, down to my soul : — here Clarence comes. Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY. Brother, good-day: what means this armed guard, That waits upon your grace? Clar. His majesty, Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed This conduct to convey me to the Tower. Glo. Upon what cause? Clar. Because my name is George. Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours ; He should, for that, commit your godfathers : — O, belike his majesty hath some intent That you shall be new-christen'd in the Tower. But what 's the matter, Clarence ? may I know? Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know; for I protest As yet I do not : but, as I can learn, He hearkens aftei prophecies and dreams ; And from the cross-row plucks the letter G, And says a wizard told him that by G His issue disinherited should be ; And, for my name of George begins with G, It follows in his thought that I am he. SCENE I.I KING RICHARD III. 675 If heaven will take the present at our hands. — But who comes here? the new-deliver'd Hastings? Enter HASTINGS. Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord ! [lain ! Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberWell are you welcome to this open air. How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment ? Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must: But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks That were the cause of my imprisonment. Glo. No doubt, no doubt ; and so shall Clarence too; For they that were your enemies are his, And have prevail'd as much on him as you. Hast. More pity that the eagle should be mew'd While kites and buzzards prey at liberty. Glo. What news abroad? Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at home, — The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy, And his physicians fear him mightily. Glo. Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad indeed. O, he hath kept an evil diet long, And overmuch consum'd his royal person : 'Tis very grievous to be thought upon. What, is he in his bed? Hast. He is. Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you. [Exit HASTINGS. He cannot live, I hope ; and must not die Till George be pack'd with posthorse up to heaven. I '11 in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence, With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments ; And, if I fail not in my deep intent, Clarence hath not another day to ?ive : Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy, And leave the world for me to bustle in ! For then I '11 marry Warwick's youngest daughter: [father? What though I kill'd her husband and her The readiest way to make the wench amends Is to become her husband and her father: The which will I ; not all so much for love As for another secret close intent, By marrying her, which I must reach unto. But yet I run before my horse to market : Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns : When they are gone, then must I count my gains. {Exit. SCENE II. — LONDON. Another Street. Enter the Corpse 0/~KiNG HENRY THE SIXTH, borne in an open coffin. Gentlemen bearing halberds to guard it; and LADY ANNE as mourner. Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load, — If honour may be shrouded in a hearse, — Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster. — Poor key-cold figure of a holy king ! Pixie ashes of the house 01 Lancaster ! Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood ! Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost, To hear the lamentations of poor Anne, Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds ! Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life, I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes: — O, cursed be the hand that made these holes ! Cursed the heart that had the heart to do it ! Cursed the blood that let this blood from hence ! More direful hap betide that hated wretch That makes us wretched by the death of thee, Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads, Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives ! If ever he have child, abortive be it, Prodigious, and untimely brought to light, Whose ugly and unnatural aspect May fright the hopeful mother at the view ; And that be heir to his unhappiness ! If ever he have wife, let her be made More miserable by the death of him Than I am made by my young lord and thee ! — Come, now towards Chertsejrwith your holy load, Taken from Paul's to be interred there ; And still, as you are weary of the weight, Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corse. [The Bearers take up the Corpse and advance. Enter GLOSTER. Glo. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down. [fiend, Anne. What black magician conjures up this To stop devoted charitable deeds? Glo. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul, I '11 make a corse of him that disobeys ! i Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass. [command: Glo. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, Or, by Saint Paul, I '11 strike thee to my foot, And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness. [The Bearers set down the coffin.

 Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid? Alas, I blame you not ; for you are mortal, And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil. — Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell ! Thou hadst but power over his mortal body, His soul thou canst not have ; therefore, be gone. Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst. Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not ; For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell, Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims. If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds, Behold this pattern of thy butcheries. — O, gentlemen, see, see ! dead Henry's wounds Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh ! Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity ; For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells ; Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, Provokes this deluge most unnatural. — O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death ! O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death ! [derer dead ; Either, heaven, with lightning strike the murOr, earth, gape open wide, and eat him quick, As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood, Which his hell-govern' d arm hath butchered ! But I know none, and therefore am no beast. [truth ! Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the Glo. More wonderful when angels are so angry. — Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, Of these supposed evils to give me leave, By circumstance, but to acquit myself. Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man, For these known evils but to give me leave, By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself. Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make No excuse current, but to hang thyself. Glo. By such despair I should accuse myself. Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excus'd ; For doing worthy vengeance on thyself, That didst unworthy slaughter upon others. Glo. Say that I slew them not? Anne. Then say they were not slain : But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee. Glo. I did not kill your husband. Anne. Why, then, he is alive. Glo. Nay, he is dead ; and slain by Edward's hand. Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest : Queen Margaret saw Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood ; The which thou once didst bend against her breast, But that thy brothers beat aside the point. Glo. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue, That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders. Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind, That never dreamt on aught but butcheries: Didst thou not kill this king? Glo. I grant ye. Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? then, God grant me too Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed ! O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous. Glo. The fitter for the King of Heaven, that hath him. [come. Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never Glo. Let him thank me, that holp to send him thither; For he was fitter for that place than earth. Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell. Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it. Anne. Some dungeon. Glo. Your bed-chamber. Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest! Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you. Anne. I hope so. Glo. I know so. — But, gentle Lady Anne, — To leave this keen encounter of our wits, And fall somewhat into a slower method, — Is not the causer of the timeless deaths Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward, As blameful as the executioner? [effect Anne. Thou wast the cause and most accurs'd Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect 5 Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep To undertake the death of all the world, So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom. Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide, These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks. [wreck ; Glo. These eyes could not endure that beautyV You should not blemish it if I stood by : As all the world is cheered by the sun, So I by that ; it is my day, my life.

n/3 KING RICHARD III. 677 Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life ! [both. Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature ; thou art Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee. Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural, To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable, To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband. 670. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband, Did it to help thee to a better husband. Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth. [could. Glo. He lives that loves thee better than he Anne. Name him. Glo. Plantagenet. Anne. Why, that was he. Glo. The self-same name, but one of better nature. Anne. Where is he? Glo. Here. {She spits at him.'} Why dost thou spit at me? [sake ! Annt. Would it were mortal poison, for thy Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place. Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad. Out of my sight ! thou dost infect mine eyes. Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine. Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead ! [once ; Glo. I would they were, that I might die at For now they kill me with a living death. Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears, [drops : Sham'd their aspects with store of childish These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear, No, when my father York and Edward wept, To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him ; Nor when thy warlike father, like a child, Told the sad story of my father's death, And twenty times made pause, to sob and weep, That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks, Like trees bedash'd with rain ; in that sad time My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear ; And what these sorrows could not thence exhale, Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping. I never su'd to friend nor enemy ; [word ; My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee, My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak. [She looks scornfully at him. Teach not thy lip such scorn ; for it was made For kissing, lady, not for such contempt. If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive, Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword ; Which if thou please to hide in this true breast, And let the soul forth that adoreth thee, I lay it naked to the deadly stroke, And humbly beg the death upon my knee. Nay, do not pause ; for I did kill King Henry, — [He lays his breast open ; she offers at it with his sword. But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me. Nay, now despatch ; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward, — {She again offers at his breast. But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on. {She lets fall the sword. Take up the sword again, or take up me. Anne. Arise, dissembler : though I wish thy death, I will not be thy executioner. Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it. Anne. I have already. Glo. That was in thy rage : Speak it again, and, even with the word, This hand, which for thy love did kill thy love, Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love ; To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary. Anne. I would I knew thy heart. Glo. 'Tis figured in my tongue. Anne. I fear me both are false. Glo. Then never man was true. Anne. Well, well, put up your sword, Glo. Say, then, my peace is made. Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter Glo. But shall I live in hope ? Anne. All men, I hope, live so. Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring. Anne. To take is not to give. {She puts on the ring. Glo. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger, Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart ; Wear both of them, for both of them are thine. And if thy poor devoted servant may But beg one favour at thy gracious hand, Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever. Anne. What is it ? [designs Glo. That it may please you leave these sad To him that hath more cause to be a mourner, And presently repair to Crosby Place ; Where, — after I have solemnly interr'd, At Chertsey monastery, this noble king, And wet his grave with my repentant tears, — I will with all expedient duty see you : For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you, Grant me this boon. [me too Anne. With all my heart ; and much it joys To see you are become so penitent. — Tressel and Berkley, go along with me. Glo. Bid me farewell. Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve :

678 KING RICHARD III. [ACT i. But since you teach me how to flatter you, Imagine I have said farewell already. [Exeunt LADY ANNE, TRESS., Glo. Sirs, take up the corse. Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord ? Glo. No, to White Friars ; there attend my coming. [Exeunt the rest, with the Corpse. Was ever woman in this humour woo'd ? Was ever woman in. this humour won ? I Ml have her ; but I will not keep her long. What ! I, that kill'd her husband and his father, To take her in her heart's extremest hate ; With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes, The bleeding witness of her hatred by ; Having God, her conscience, and these bars against me, And I no friends to back my suit withal, But the plain devil and dissembling looks, And yet to win her, — all the world to nothing ! Ha! Hath she forgot already that brave prince, Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since, Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury? A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman, — Fram'd in the prodigality of nature, Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal, — The spacious world cannot again afford : And will she yet abase her eyes on me. That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince, And made her widow to a woeful bed ? On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety? On me, that halt and am misshapen thus ? My dukedom to a beggarly denier, I do mistake my person all this while : Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot, Myself to be a marvellous proper man. I '11 be at charges for a looking-glass ; And entertain a score or two of tailors, To study fashions to adorn my body : Since I am crept in favour with myself, I will maintain it with some little cost. But first I '11 turn yon fellow in his grave ; And then return lamenting to my love. — • Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass, That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit. SCENE III. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY. Riv. Have patience, madam: there's no doubt his majesty Will soon recover his accustom'd health. Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse : [fort, Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comAnd cheer his grace with quick and merry words. Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me? Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord. Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms. [goodly son, Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a To be your comforter when he is gone. Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young ; and his minority Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloster, A man that loves not me, nor none of you. Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protector? Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet : But so it must be, if the king miscarry. Enter BUCKINGHAM and STANLEY. Grey. Here come the Lords of Buckingham and Stanley. [grace ! Buck. Good time of day unto your royal Stan. God make your majesty joyful as you have been ! Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Stanley, To your good prayer will scarcely say amen. Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she 's your wife, And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd I hate not you for her proud arrogance. Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe The envious slanders of her false accusers ; Or, if she be accus'd on true report, Bear with her weakness, which I think proceeds From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice. [of Stanley? Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord Stan. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I Are come from visiting his majesty. [lords? Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, Buck. Madam, good hope ; his grace speaks cheerfully. Q. Eliz. God grant him health ! Did you confer with him? [ment Buck. Ay, madam : he desires to make atoneBetween the Duke of Gloster and your brothers, And between them and my lord chamberlain ; And sent to warn them to his royal presence. Q. Eliz. Would all were well !— but that will never be : I fear our happiness is at the height. Enter GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and DORSET. Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it: — Who are they that complain unto the king That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?

SCENE III.] KING RICHARD III. 679 By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours. Because I cannot flatter and speak fair, Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog, Duck with French nods and apish courtesy, I must be held a rancorous enemy. Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm, But thus his simple truth must be abus'd By silken, sly insinuating Jacks? [your grace? Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace. When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong? — Or thee? — or thee? — or any of your faction? A plague upon you all ! His royal grace, — Whom God preserve better than you would wish ! — Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing while, But you must trouble him with lewd complaints, [matter. Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the The king, on his own royal disposition, And not provok'd by any suitor else — Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred, That in your outward action shows itself Against my children, brothers, and myself — Makes him to send ; that thereby he may gather The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it. Glo. I cannot tell : the world is grown so bad, That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch : Since every Jack became a gentleman, There 's many a gentle person made a Jack. Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster; You envy my advancement, and my friends' ; God grant we never may have need of you ! Glo. Meantime, God grants that we have need of you : Our brother is imprison'd by your means, Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility Held in contempt ; while great promotions Are daily given to ennoble those That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble. [height Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this careful From that contented hap which I enjoyM, I never did incense his majesty Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him. My lord, you do me shameful injury, Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects. Glo. You may deny that you were not the mean Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment. Riv. She may, my lord; for, — [not so? Glo. She may, Lord Rivers? — why, who knows She may do more, sir, than denying that: She may help you to many fair preferments ; And then deny her aiding hand therein, And lay those honours on your high desert. What may she not? She may, — ay, marry, may she, — Riv. What, marry, may she? [king, Glo. What, marry, may she ! marry with a A bachelor, a handsome stripling too : I wis your grandam had a worser match. Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloster, I have too long borne Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs: By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd. I had rather be a country servant-maid Than a great queen, with this condition, — To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind. Small joy have I in being England's queen. Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech Him ! Thy honour, state, and seat is due to me. Glo. What ! threat you me with telling of the king? Tell him, and spare not : lock, what I have said I will avouch in presence of the king: I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower. 'Tis time to speak, — my pains are quite forgot. Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well: Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower, And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury. Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king, I was a pack-horse in his great affairs ; A weeder-out of his proud adversaries, A liberal rewarder of his friends : To royalize his blood I spilt mine own. Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his or thine. [band Grey Glo. In all which time you and your husWere factious for the house of Lancaster ; — And, Rivers, so were you : was not your husband In Margaret's battle at Saint Albans slain? Let me put in your minds, if you forget, What you have been ere this, and what you are ; Withal, what I have been, and what I am. Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art. [Warwick ; Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father, Ay, and forswore himself, — which Jesu pardon ! — Q. Mar. Which God revenge ! [crown ; Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.

68o KING RICHARD III. [ACT i. I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's, Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine: I am too childish -foolish for this world. Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world, Thou cacodemon ! there thy kingdom is. Riv. My Lord of Gloster, in those busy days Which here you urge to prove us enemies, We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign king : So should we you, if you should be our king. Glo. If I should be! — I had rather be a pedler: Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof! Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose You should enjoy, were you this country's king,— As little joy you may suppose in me, That I enjoy, being the queen thereof. [of; Q. Mar. As little joy enjoys the queen thereFor I am she, and altogether joyless. I can no longer hold me patient. — • [Advancing. Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out In sharing that which you have pi) I'd from me ! Which of you trembles not that looks on me ? If not that, I being queen, you bow like subjects, [rebels ? — Yet that, by you deposM, you quake like Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away ! Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight? [marr'd, Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast That will I make before I let thee go. Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death? Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment Than death can yield me here by my abode. A husband and a son thoa ow'st to me, — And thou a kingdom, — all of you allegiance : This sorrow that I have, by right is yours ; And all the pleasures you usurp are mine. Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee, When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper, [eyes; And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his And then, to dry them, gav'st the duke a clout Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland ; — His curses, then from bitterness of soul Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee ; And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed. Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent. Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe, And the most merciless that e'er was heard of. Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it. Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it. [I came, Q. Mar. What, were you snarling all before Ready to catch each other by the throat, And turn you all your hatred now on me ? Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death, Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment, Could all but answer for that peevish brat ? Can curses pierce the cloudsand enter heaven ? — Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses ! — Though not by war, by surfeit die your king, As ours by murder, to make him a king ! Edward thy son, that now is Prince of Wales, For Edward my son, that was Prince of Wales, Die in his youth by like untimely violence ! Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen, Outli ve thy glory, like my wretched self ! Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss ; And see another, as I see thee now, Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall 'd in mine ! Long die thy happy days before thy death ; And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief, Die neither mother, wife, nor England's queen ! — Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by, — And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, — when my son [him, Was stabb'd with bloody daggers : God, I pray That none of you may live your natural age, But by some unlook'd accident cut off ! Glo, Have done thy charm, thou hateful wither'd hag. Q. Mar. And leave out thee ? stay, dog, for thou shall hear me. If heaven have any grievous plague in store, Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee, O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe, And then hurl down their indignation On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace ! The worm of conscience still be-gnaw thy soul ! Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st, And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends ! No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine, Unless it be while some tormenting dream Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils ! Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog ! Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity The slave of nature and the son of hell ! Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb ! Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins ! Thou rag of honour ! thou detested— Glo. Margaret. Q. Mar. Richard ! Glo. Ha !

SCENE III.] KING RICHARD III. 68r Q. Mar. I call thee not. Glo. I cry thee mercy, then ; for I did think That thou hadst call'd me all those bitter names. Q. Mar. Why, so I did ; but look'd for no O, let me make the period to my curse ! Glo. 'Tis done by me, and ends in — Margaret. Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune ! Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spider, Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about ? Fool, fool ! thou whett'st a knife to kill thyself. The day will come that thou shalt wish for me To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back;d toad. Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse, Lest to thy harm thou move our patience. Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you ! you have all mov'd mine. Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty. [me duty, Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects : O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty ! Dor. Dispute not with her, — she is lunatic. Q. Mar. Peace, master marquis, you are malapert : Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current : O, that your young nobility could judge What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable ! They that stand high have many blasts to shake them ; And if they fall they dash themselves to pieces. Glo. Good counsel, marry :— learn it, learn it, marquis. Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me. Glo. Ay, and much more : but I was born so high Our aery buildeth in the cedar's top, And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun. Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade ; — alas ! alas!— Witness my son, now in the shade of death ; Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath Hath in eternal darkness folded up. Your aery buildeth in our aery's nest : — O God, that see'st it, do not suffer it ; As it was won with blood, lost be it so ! Btick. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity. [me : Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to Uncharitably with me have you dealt, And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd. My charity is outrage, life my shame,ˆ — And in my shame still live my sorrow's rage ! Buck. Have done, have done. [hand, Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I '11 kiss thy In sign of league and amity with thee : Now fair befall thee and thy noble house ! Thy garments are not spotted with our blood, Nor thou within the compass of my curse. Buck. Nor no one here ; for curses never pass The lips of those that breathe them in the air. Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky, And there awake God's gentle sleeping peace. 0 Buckingham, take heed of yonder dog ! Look, when he fawns he bites ; and when he bites, His venom tooth will rankle to the death : Have not to do with him, beware of him ; Sin, death, and hell have set their marks on him, And all their ministers attend on him. Glo. WTiat doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham ? [lord. Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel? And soothe the devil that I warn thee from ? O, but remember this another day, When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow, And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess ! — Live each of you the subjects to his hate, And he to yours, and all of you to God's ! {Exit. Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses. [liberty. Riv. And so doth mine : I muse why she 's at Glo. I cannot blame her: by God's hcly mother, She hath had too much wrong ; and I repent My part thereof that I have done to her. Q. Eliz. I neverdid her any, to my knowledge. Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong. 1 was too hot to do somebody good, That is too cold in thinking of it now. Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid ; He is frank'd up to fatting for his pains ; God pardon them that are the ca>'se thereof ! Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion, To pray for them that have done scathe to us. Glo. So do I ever, being well advis'd ; For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself. [Aside. Enter CATESBY. Gates. Madam, his majesty doth callfor you, — And for your grace, — and you. my noble lords.

 Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come.— Lords, will you go with me? Riv. We wait upon your grace. [Exeunt all bttt GLOSTER. Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl. The secret mischiefs that I set abroach I lay unto the grievous charge of others. Clarence, — whom I, indeed, have cast in darkness,— I do beweep to many simple gulls ; Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham ; And tell them 'tis the queen and her allies That stir the king against the duke my brother. Now, they believe it ; and withal whet me To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey : But then I sigh ; and, with a piece of Scripture, Tell them that God bids us do good for evil : And thus I clothe my naked villany With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ ; And seem a saint when most I play the devil. — But, soft ! here come my executioners. Enter two Murderers. How now, my hardy, stout-resolved mates ! Are you now going to despatch this thing ? I Murd. We are, my lord, and come to have the warrant, That we may be admitted where he is. Glo. Well thought upon; — I have it here about me : [Gives the warrant. When you have done, repair to Crosby Place. But, sirs, be sudden in the execution, Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead ; For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him. I Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate ; Talkers are no good doers : be assur'd We go to use our hands, and not our tongues. Glo. Your eyes drop millstones when fools' eyes fall tears : I like you, lads ; — about your business straight ; Go, go, despatch. I Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — LONDON. A Room in the Tower. Enter CLARENCE and BRAKENBURY. Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily today? Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night, So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights, That, as I am a Christian faithful man, I would not spend another such a night Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days, — So full of dismal terror was the time ! Brak. What was your dream, my lord ? I pray you, tell me. [Tower, Clar. Methought that I had broken from the And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy ; And, in my company, my brother Gloster ; Who from my cabin tempted me to walk Upon the hatches : thence we look'd toward England, And cited up a thousand heavy times, During the wars of York and Lancaster, That had befall'n us. As we pac'd along Upon the giddy footing of the hatches, Methought that Gloster stumbled ; and, in falling, [board Struck me, that thought to stay him, overInto the tumbling billows of the main. 0 Lord ! methought what pain it was to drown ! What dreadful noise of water in mine ears ! What sights of ugly death within mine eyes ! Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks ; A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon ; Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl, Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels, All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea : [holes Some lay in dead men's skulls ; and in those Where eyes did once inhabit there were crept, — As 'twere in scorn of eyes, — reflecting gems, That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep, And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by. Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death To gaze upon the secrets of the deep ? [strive Clar. Methought I had ; and often did I To yield the ghost : but still the envious flood Stopp'd in my soul, and would not let it forth To find the empty, vast, and wandering air ; But smother'd it within my panting bulk, Which almost burst to belch it in the sea. Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony ? Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life; O, then began the tempest to my soul ! 1 pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood With that grim ferryman which poets write of, Unto the kingdom of perpetual night. The first that there did greet my stranger soul Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick ; Who cried aloud, What scourge for perjury Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence? And so he vanish'd : then came wandering by A shadow like an Angel, with bright hair Dabbled in blood ; and he shriek'd out aloud, Clarence is come, — -false, fleeting, perjuˆd Clarence,— That stabtfd me in the field by Teivksbury ; — Seize on him, Furies, take him to your torments !

SCENE IV.] KING RICHARD III. With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears Such hideous cries that, with the very noise, I trembling wak'd, and for a season after Could not believe but that I was in hell, — Such terrible impression made my dream. Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you ; I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it. Clar. O Brakenbury, I have done those things That now give evidence against my soul, For Edward's sake ; and see how he requites me ! — [thee, 0 God 1 If my deep prayers cannot appease But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds, Yet execute thy wrath in me alone, — O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children ! — Keeper, I pr'ythee, sit by me awhile ; My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep. Brak. I will, my lord; God give your grace good rest ! — [CLARENCE reposes himself on a chair. Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing hours, Makes the night morning, and the noontide night. Princes have but their titles for their glories, An outward honour for an inward toil ; And, for unfelt imaginations, They often feel a world of restless cares : So that, between their titles and low name, There 's nothing differs but the outward fame. Enter the two Murderers. I Murd. Ho ! who 's here ? Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow ? and how cam'st thou hither ? 1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs. Brak. What, so brief? 2 Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious. — Let him see our commission i talk no more. [A fager is delivered 10 BRAK. , who reads it. Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands : — 1 will not reason what is meant hereby, Because I will be guiltless of the meaning. There lies the duke asleep, — and there the keys ; I '11 to the king, and signify to him That thus I have resign'd to you my charge. 1 Murd. You may, sir ; 'tis a point of wisdom : fare you well. [Exit BRAKENBURY. 2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps ? I Murd. No ; he '11 say 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes. 2 Murd. When he wakes ! why, fool, he shall never wake until the great judgment-day. 1 Murd. Why, then he '11 say we stabbrd him sleeping. 2 Murd. The urging of that word judgment hath bred a kind of remorse in me. 1 Murd. What, art thou afraid ? 2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it ; but to be damned for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me. 1 Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute. 2 Murd. So I am, to let him live. 1 Murd. I '11 back to the Duke of Gloster, and tell him so. 2 Murd. Nay, I pr'ythee, stay a little : I hope my holy humour will change ; it was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty. 1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now ? 2 Murd. Faith, some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me. 1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed 's done. [reward. 2 Murd. Zounds, he dies: I had forgot the 1 Murd. Where 's thy conscience now ? 2 Murd. In the Duke of Gloster's purse. 1 Murd. So, when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out. 2 Murd. 'Tis no matter ; let it go ; there 's few or none will entertain it. 1 Murd. What if it come to thee again ? 2 Murd. I '11 not meddle with it, — it makes a man a coward ; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him ; a man cannot swear, but it checks him ; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him : 'tis a blushing shame-faced spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom ; it fills one full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold that by chance I found ; it beggars any man that keeps it : it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing ; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it. 1 Murd. Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke. 2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not : he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh. 1 Murd. I am strong-framed, he cannot prevail with me. 2 Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work ? 1 Murd. Take him on the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room. 2 Murd. O excellent device ! and make a sop of him. I Murd. Soft 1 he wakes.

684 KING RICHARD III. [ACT i. 2 Murd. Strike ! I Murd. No, we '11 reason with him. Clar. Where art thou, keeper ? give me a cup of wine. I Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon. Clar. In God's name, what art thou ? I Murd. A man, as you are. Clar. But not, as I am, royal. I Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal. Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble. I Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own. [speak ! Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou Your eyes do menace me: why look you pale? Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come? Both Murd. To, to, to— Clar. To murder me ? Both Murd. Ay, ay. [so, Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein, my friends, have I offended you ? 1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king. Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again. 2 Murd. Never, my lord ; therefore prepare to die. [men Clar. Are you drawn forth among a world of To slay the innocent ? What is my offence? What is the evidence that doth accuse me ? Where lawful quest have given their verdict up Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounc'd The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death ? Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is most unlawful. I charge you, as you hope to have redemption By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins, That you depart, and lay no hands on me : The deed you undertake is damnable. 1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command. 2 Murd. And he that hath commanded is our king. [kings Clar. Erroneous vassals ! the great King of Hath in the table of his law commanded That thou shalt do no murder : will you then Spurn at his edict, and fulfil a man's ? Take heed ; for he holds vengeance in his hand, To hurl upon their heads that break his law. 2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee For false forswearing, and for murder too : Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight In quarrel of the house of Lancaster. I Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God, Didst break that vow ; and with thy treacherous blade Unripp'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son. 2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend. I Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us, When thou hast broke it in such dear degree ? Clar. Alas ! for whose sake did I that ill deed? For Edward, for my brother, for his sake : He sends you not to murder me for this ; For in that sin he is as deep as I. If God will be avenged for the deed, O, know you yet, he doth it publicly : Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm ; He needs no indirect nor lawless course To cut off those that have offended him. I Murd. Who made thee, then, a bloody minister When gallant-springing brave Plantagenet, That princely novice, was struck dead by thee? Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage. [thy faults, 1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee. Clar* If you do love my brother, hate not ma ; I am his brother, and I love him well. If you are hir'd for meed, go back again, And I will send you to my brother Gloster, Who shall reward you better for my life Than Edward will for tidings of my death. 2 Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloster hates you. [dear : Clar. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me Go you to him from me. Both Murd. Ay, so we will. Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm, And charg'd us from his soul to love each other, He little thought of this divided friendship : Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep. I Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep. Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind, i Murd. Right as snow in harvest. — Come, you deceive yourself : 'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here. Clar. It cannot be ; for he bewept my fortune, And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sobs, That he would labour my delivery. 1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you From this earth's thraldom to the joys of heaven. 2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

SCENE IV.] KING RICHARD IIL 685 Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls, To counsel me to make my peace with God, And are you yet to your own souls so blind That you will war with God by murdering me? — O, sirs, consider, they that set you on To do this deed will hate you for the deed. 2 Murd, What shall we do ? Clar. Relent, and save your souls. 1 Murd. Relent I 'tis cowardly and womanish, [ish. Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilWhich of you, if you were a prince's son, Being pent from liberty, as I am now, — If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,— Would not entreat for life ? — My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks ; O, if thine eye be not a flatterer, Come thou on my side, and entreat for me, As you would beg, were you in my distress : A begging prince what beggar pities not ? 2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord. 1 Murd. Take that, and that: if all this will not do, [Stabs him. I 'II drown you in the malmsey-butt within. [Exit -with the body. 2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd 1 How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands Of this most grievous guilty murder done ! Re-enter First Murderer. 1 Murd. How now, what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not? By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been. [brother ! 2 Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say ; For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit. I Murd. So do not I : go, coward as thou art.— Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole, Till that the duke give order for his burial : And when I have my meed, I will away; For this will out, and then I must not stay. [Exit. ACT II. SCENE I. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter KING EDWARD, led in sick: QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, GREY, and others. K. Edw. Why, so; — now have I done a good day's work : — You peers, continue this united league : I every day expect an embassage From my Redeemer, to redeem me hence ; And now in peace my soul shall part to heaven. Since I have made my friends at peace on earth. Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand ; Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love. Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate ; And with my hand I seal my true heart's love. Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like ! K. Edw. Take heed you dally not before your king ; Lest he that is the supreme King of kings

Confound your hidden falsehood, and award Either of you to be :he other's end. Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love ! Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart 1 K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt from this, — Nor you, son Dorset, — Buckingham, nor you ; — You have been factious one against the other. Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand; And what you do, do it unfeignedly. Q. Eliz. There, Hastings ; I will never more remember Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine ! K. Ldw. Dorset, embrace him ; — Hastings, love lord marquis. Dor. This interchange of love I here protest, Upon my part shall be inviolable. Hast. And so swear I. [Embraces DORSET. K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league With thy embracements to my wife's allies, And make me happy in your unity. [hate Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his Upon your grace [to the QUEEN], but with all duteous love Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me With hate in those where I expect most love! When I have most need to employ a friend, And most assured that he is a friend, Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile, Be he unto me ! — this do I beg of heaven When I am cold in love to you or yours. {Embracing RIVERS, drV. K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham, Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart There wanteth now our brother Gloster here, To make the blessed period of this peace. Buck. 686 KING RICHARD III. [ACT n. Enter GLOSTER. Glo. Good-morrow to my sovereign king and queen ; And, princely peers, a happy time of day ! K. Ediv. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day. Gloster, we have done deeds of charity ; Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate, Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers. Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord. — Among this princely heap, if any here, By false intelligence or wrong surmise, Hold me a foe ; If I unwittingly, or in my rage, Have aught committed that is hardly borne By any in this presence, I desire To reconcile me to his friendly peace : 'Tis death to me to be at enmity ; I hate it, and desire all good men's love. — First, madam, I entreat true peace of you, Which I will purchase with my duteous service; — Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham, If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us ; — Of you, and you, Lord Pavers, and of Dorset, That all without desert have frown'd on me ; Of you, Lord Woodville, and, Lord Scales, of you ; — [all. Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; — indeed, of I do not know that Englishman alive With whom my soul is any jot at odds More than the infant that is born to-night: I thank my God for my humility. [after : — Q. Eliz. A holiday shall this be kept hereI would to God all strifes were well compounded.— My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness To take our brother Clarence to your grace. Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this, To be so flouted in this royal presence? Who knows not that the gentle duke is dead? [They all start. You do him injury to scorn his corse. K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead ! who knows he is ? [this ! Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest? [presence Dor. Ay, my good lord ; and no man in the But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks. K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? the order was revers'd. [died, Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order And that a winged Mercury did bear ; Some tardy cripple bore the countermand That came too lag to see him buried. God grant that some, less noble and less loyal, Nearer in bloody thoughts, but not in blood, Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did, And yet go current from suspicion ! Enter STANLEY. Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done \ [sorrow. K. Edw. I pr'ythee, peace: my soul is full of Stan. I will not rise unless your highness hear me. [quest'st. K. Edw.

Then say at once what is it thou reStan. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life; Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk. K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death, And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave ? My brother kill'd no man, — his fault was thought, And yet his punishment was bitter death. Who su'd to me for him ? who, in my wrath, Kneel'd at my feet, and bid me be advis'd ? Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love? Who told me how the poor soul did forsake The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me? Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury, When Oxford had me down, he rescu'd me, And said, Dear brother, live, and be a king's Who told me, when we both lay in the field Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me Even in his garments, and did give himself, All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night? All this from my remembrance brutish wrath Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you Had so much grace to put it in my mind. But when your carters or your waiting-vassals Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd The precious image of our dear Redeemer, You straight are on your knees for pardonˆ pardon ; And I, unjustly too, must grant it you : — But for my brother not a man would speak, — Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all Have been beholden to him in his life ; Yet none of you would once beg for his life. — O God, I fear thy justice will take hold On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this ! Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. Ah, poor Clarence ! [Exeunt KING, QUEEN, HAST., Riv., DOR.,

SCENE II.] KING RICHARD III. Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence' death? O, they did urge it sail unto the king ! God will revenge it. — Come, lords, will you go To comfort Edward with our company? Buck. We wait upon your grace. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — Another Room in the Palace. Enter the DUCHESS OF YORK, with a Son and Daughter of CLARENCE. Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead? Duck. No, boy. [your breast, Datigh. Why do you weep so oft, and beat And cry, O Clarence, my unhappy son! Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your head, And call us orphans, wretches, castaways, If that our noble father be alive? [both; Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me I do lament the sickness of the king, As loth to lose him, not your father's death ; It were lost sorrow to wail one that 's lost. Son. Then you conclude, my grandam, he is dead. The king mine uncle is to blame for this : God will revenge it; whom I will importune With earnest prayers all to that effect. Daiigh. And so will I. Duch. Peace, children, peace ! the king doth love you well : Incapable and shallow innocents, [death. You cannot guess who caus'd your father's Son. Grandam, we can ; for my good uncle Gloster Told me, the king, provok'd to it by the queen, Devis'd impeachments to imprison him : And when my uncle told me so, he wept, And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek ; Bade me rely on him as on my father, And he would love me dearly as his child. Dttch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shape, And with a virtuous visard hide deep vice ! He is my son ; ay, and therein my shame ; Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit. Son. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam? Duch. Ay, boy. [this? Son. I cannot think it. — Hark! what noise is Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, distractedly ; RIVERS and DORSET following her. Q. Eliz. Ah, who shall hinder me to wail and weep, To chide my fortune, and torment myself? I '11 join with black despair against my soul, And to myself become an enemy. [patience? Duch. What means this scene of rude imQ. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence : — Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead. — Why grow the branches when the root is gone? Why wither not the leaves that want their sap? — If you will live, lament; if die, be brief, That our swift- winged souls may catch the king's ; Or, like obedient subjects, follow him To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

[row Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorAs I had title in thy noble husband ! I have bewept a worthy husband's death, And liv'd by looking on his images : But now two mirrors of his princely semblance Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death, And I for comfort have but one false glass, That grieves me when I see my shame in him. Thou art a widow • yet thou art a mother, And hast the comfort of thy children left : But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms, [hands, — And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I, — Thine being but a moiety of my moan, — To overgo thy woes and drown thy cries? Son. Ah, aunt, you wept not for our father's death ! How can we aid you with our kindred tears? Daugh. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd, Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept ! Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation ; I am not barren to bring forth complaints: All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes, That I, being govern'd by the watery moon, May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world ! Ah for my husband, for my dear Lord Edward ! ChiL Ah for our father, for our dear Lord Clarence ! [Clarence ! Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and he 's gone. [he 's gone. Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone. Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss ! Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss ! Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss ! Alas, I am the mother of these griefs ! Their woes are parcell'd, mine are general. She for an Edward weeps, and so do I ; I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she: These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I ;

KING RICHARD III. [ACT n. I for an Edward weep, so do not they : — Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd, Pour all your tears ! I am your sorrow's nurse, And I will pamper it with lamentation. Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is much displeas'd That you take with unthankfulness his doing : In common worldly things 'tis call'd ungrateful, With dull unwillingness to repay a debt Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent ; Much more to be thus opposite with heaven, For it requires the royal debt it lent you. Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother, [for him ; Of the young prince your son: send straight Let him be crown'd ; in him your comfort lives : Drown desperate sorrow in dead Ed ward's grave, And plant your joys in living Edward's throne. Enter GLOSTER, BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, RATCLIFF, and others. Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause To wail the dimming of our shining star ; But none can cure their harms by wailing them. — Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy; I did not sˆe your grace : — humbly on my knee I crave your blessing. [thy breast, Duck. God bless thee ; and put meekness in Love, charity, obedience, and true duty I Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man! — That is the butt end of a mother's blessing ; I marvel that her grace did leave it out [Aside. Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrowing peers, That bear this heavy mutual load of moan, Now cheer each other in each other's love : Though we have spent our harvest of this king, We are to reap the harvest of his son. The broken rancour of your high-swoln hearts, But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together, Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept : Me seemeth good that, with some little train, Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fet Hither to London, to be crown'd our king. Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham? Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude, The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out; Which would be so much the more dangerous By how much the estate is green and yet ungovern'd : Where every horse bears his commanding rein, And may direct his course as please himself, As well the fear of harm as harm apparent, In my opinion, ought to be prevented. [us; Glo. I hope the king made peace with all of And the compact is firm and true in me. Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all: Yet, since it is but green, it should be put To no apparent likelihood of breach, Which haply by much company might be urg'd: Therefore I say wiui noble Buckingham, That it is meet so few should fetch the prince. Hast. And so say I. •Glo. Then be it so ; and go we to determine Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow. Madam, — and you, my mother, — will you go To give your censures in this business? {Exeunt all but BUCK, and GLO. Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the prince, For God's sake, let not us two stay at home ; For by the way I '11 sort occasion, As index to the story we late talk'd of, To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince. Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory, My oracle, my prophet ! — my dear cousin, I, as a child, will go by thy direction. Toward Ludlow then, for we '11 not stay behind. {Exeunt. SCENE III. — LONDON. A Street. Enter two Citizens, meeting. 1 Cit. Good-morrow, neighbour: whithei away so fast ? 2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself: Hear you the news abroad ? 1 Cit. Yes, — that the king is dead. 2 Cit. Ill news, by 'r lady ; seldom comes the better : I fear, I fear 'twill prove a giddy world. Entef a third Citizen. 3 Cit. Neighbours, God speed ! 1 Cit. SCENE IV.] KING RICHARD III. 689 I Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old. 3 Cit. Stood the state so? No, no, good friends, God wot ; For then this land was famously enrich'd With politic grave counsel ; then the king Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace. I Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother. 3 Cit. Better it were they all cameby his father, Or by his father there were none at all ; For emulation now, who shall be nearest, Will touch us all too near if God prevent not. O, full of danger is the Duke of Gloster ! And the queen's son;; and brothers haught and proud : And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule, This sickly land might solace as before. 1 Cil. Come, come, we fear theworst ; all will be well. 3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks ; When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand ; When the sun sets, who doth not look for night ? Untimely storms make men expect a dearth. \11 may be well ; but, if God sort it so, Tis more than we deserve or I expect. 2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear : 7ou cannot reason almost with a man That looks not heavily and full of dread. 3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so : By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust Ensuing danger ; as, by proof, we see The water swell before a boisterous storm. But leave it all to God. — Whither away? 2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices. 3 Cit. And so was I : I '11 bear you company. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — LONDON. A Room in the Palace. Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK. Arch. Last night, I hear, they at Northampton lay ; And at Stony-Stratford will they be to-night : To-morrow or next day they will be here. Dttch. I long with all my heart to see the prince : I hope he is much grown since last I saw him. Q. Eliz. But I hear no ; they say my son of York Has almost overta'en him in his growth. York. Ay, mother ; but I would not have it so. Duch. Why, my young cousin ? it is good to grow. [supper, York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at My uncle Rivers talk'cl how I did grow More than my brother: Ay> quoth my uncle Gloster, [apace: Small kerbs have grace, great weeds do grow And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste. [not hold Duck. Good faith, good faith, the saying did In him that did object the same to thee : He was the wretched'st thing when he was young. So long a growing, and so leisurely, That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious. Arch. And so no doubt he is, my gracious madam. Duck. I hope he is ; but yet let mothers doubt York. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd, I could have given my uncle's grace a flout, To touch his growth nearer than he touch 'd mine. Duck. How, my young York? I pr'ythee, let me hear it. York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old : 'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth. Grandam, this *ould have been a biting jest. Duck. I pr'ythee, pretty York, who told thee this? York. Grandam, his nurse. [wast born. Duck. His nurse ! why she was dead ere thou York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me. [shrewd. Q. Eliz. A parlous boy : — go to, you are too Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child. Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears. Arch. Here comes a messenger. Enter a Messenger. What news? [report. Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to Q. Eliz. Ho\\ doth the prince ? Mess. Well, madam, and in health. Ditch. What is thy news ? Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret, With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners. Duck. Who hath committed them ? Mess. The mighty dukes Gloster and Buckingham. Q. Eliz. For what offence? Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd; Why or for what the nobles were committed Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber. Glo. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign : The weary way hath made you melancholy. Prince. No, uncle ; but our crosses on the way Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy : I want more uncles here to welcome me. Glo. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years Kath not yet div'd into the world's deceit : No more can you distinguish of a man Than of his outward show; which, God he knows, Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart. Those uncles which you want were dangerous ; Your grace attended to their sugar'd words, But look'd not on the poison of their hearts : God keep you from them, and from such false friends ! Prince. God keep me from false friends ! but they were none. [greet you. Glo. My lord, the mayor of London comes to Enter the Lord Mayor and his Train. May. God bless your grace with health and happy days ! Prince. I thank you, good my lord; — and thank you all. {Exeunt Mayor, &*c. I thought my mother and my brother York Would long ere this have met us on the way : Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not To tell us whether they will come or no ! Buck. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord. Enter HASTINGS. Prince. Welcome, my lord : what, will our mother come? Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I, The queen your mother and your brother York Have taken sanctuary : the tender prince Would rain have come with me to meet yourgrace, But by his mother was perforce withheld. Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peevish course Is this of hers ? — Lord cardinal, will your grace Persuade the queen to send the Duke of York Unto his princely brother presently? If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him, And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce. Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory Can from his mother win the Duke of York, Anon expect him here ; but if she be obdurate To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid We should infringe the holy privilege Of blessed sanctuary ! not for all this land Would I be guilty of so great a sin. [lord, Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my Too ceremonious and traditional : Weigh it but with the grossness of this age, You break not sanctuary in seizing him. The benefit thereof is always granted To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place, And those who have the wit to claim the place : This prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserv'd it; And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it : Then, taking him from hence that is not there, You break no privilege nor charter there. Oft have I heard of sanctuary-men ; But sanctuary-children ne'er till now. Card. My lord, you shall o'errule my mind for once. — Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?

SCENE KING RICHARD III. 691 Hast, I go, my lord. Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. [Exettnt CAR. and HAST. Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come, Where shall we sojourn till our coronation ? Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self. If I may counsel you, some day or two Your highness shall repose you at the Tower : Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit For your best health and recreation, [place. — Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord ? Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place ; Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified. Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported Successively from age to age, he built it ? Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord. Prince. But say, my lord, it werenot register'd, Methinks the truth should live from age to age, As 'twere retail'd to all posterity, Even to the general all-ending day. Glo. So wise so young, they say, do never live long. [Aside. Prince. What say you, uncle? [long. — Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity, I moralize two meanings in one word. [Aside. Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man ; With what his valour did enrich his wit, His wit set down to make his valour live : Death makes no conquest of this conqueror ; For now he lives in fame, though not in life. — I '11 tell you what, my cousin Buckingham, — Buck. What, my gracious lord ? Prince. An if I live until I be a man. I '11 win our ancient right in France again, Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king. Glo. Short summers lightly have a forward spring.^ [Aside. Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Duke of York: Enter YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL. Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother? [you now. York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call Prince. Ay brother, — to our grief, as it is yours : Too late he died that might have kept that title, Which by his death hath lost much majesty. Glo. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York? [lord, York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my You said that idle weeds are fast in growth : The prince my brother hath outgrown me far. Glo. He hath, my lord. York. And therefore is he idle? Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so. York. Then is he more beholding to you than I. Glo. He may command me as my sovereign; But you have power in me as in a kinsman. York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger. Glo. My dagger, little cousin?

with all my heart. Prince. A beggar, brother? [give; York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will And being but a toy, which is no grief to give. Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin. [it. York. A greater gift ! O, that 's the sword to Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough. York. O then, I see, you will part but with light gifts ; In weightier things you Ml say a beggar nay. Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear. York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier. Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord? [call me. York. I would, that I might thank you as you Glo. How? York. Little. [in talk : — Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him. York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me: — Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me ; Because that I am little, like an ape, He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders. [reasons ! Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle, He prettily and aptly taunts himself: So cunning and so young is wonderful, [along? Glo. My gracious lord, wil 't please to pass Myself and my good cousin Buckingham Will to your mother, to entreat of her To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you. York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord? [so. Prince. My lord protector needs will have it York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower. Glo. Why, what should you fear? [ghost: York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry My grandam told me he was murder'd there. Prince. I fear no uncles dead. Glo. Nor none that live, I hope. [fear. Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not But come, my lord ; and with a heavy heart, Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower. [Sennet. Exeunt PRINCE, YORK, HAST., CAR., and Attendants.

692 KING RICHARD III. [ACT in. Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York Was not incensed by his subtle mother To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously? Glo. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a parlous boy; Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable: He is all the mother's, from the top to toe. Buck. Well, let them rest.— Come hither, Catesby. [tend Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we inAs closely to conceal what we impart : Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way ; — What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter To make William Lord Hastings of our mind, For the instalment of this noble duke In the seat royal of this famous isle? [prince Gate. He for his father's sake so loves the That he will not be won to aught against him. Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will not he? Gate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth. Buck. Well, then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby, [ings And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord HastHow he doth stand affected to our purpose; And summon him to-morrow to the Tower, To sit about the coronation. If thou dost find him tractable to us, Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons : If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling, Be thou so too ; and so break off the talk, And give us notice of his inclination : For we to-morrow hold divided councils, Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd. Glo. Commend me to Lord William: tell him, Catesby, His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle; And bid my lord, for joy of this good news, Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more. Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly. [I can. Gate. My good lords both, with all the heed Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep? Gate. You shall, my lord. Glo. At Crosby Place, there shall you find us both. [Exit CATESBY. Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do if we perceive Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots? Glo. Chop off his head, man ; — somewhat we will do: — And look, when I am king, claim thou of me The earldom of Hereford, and all the movables Whereof the king my brother was possess'd. Buck. I '11 claim that promise at your grace's hand. [kindness. Glo. And look to have it yielded with all Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards We may digest our complots in some form. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — Before LORD HASTINGS' House. _, _.. Enter a Messenger. Mess. My lord, my lord ! — [Knocking. Hast. [Within.} Who knocks? Mess. One from the Lord Stanley. Hast. [Within.'} What is't o'clock? Mess. Upon the stroke of four. Enter HASTINGS. Hast. Cannot my Lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights? Mess. So it appears by that I have to say. First, he commends him to your noble self. Hast. What then ? [night Mess. Then certifies your lordship that this He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm : Besides, he says there are two councils held ; And that may be determin'd at the one Which may make you and him to rue at the other. [pleasure, — Therefore he sends to know your lordship's If you will presently take horse with him, And with all speed post with him toward the north, To shun the danger that his soul divines. Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord; Bid him not fear the separated councils : His honour and myself are at the one, And at the other is my good friend Catesby ; Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us Whereof I shall not have intelligence. Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance : And for his dreams, I wonder he 's so simple To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers: To fly the boar before the boar pursues, Were to incense the boar to follow us, And make pursuit where he did mean no chase. Go, bid thy master rise and come to me ; And we will both together to the Tower, Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly. Mess. I '11 go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit. Enter CATESBY. Gate. Many good-morrows to my noble lord ! Hast. Good-morrow, Catesby ; you are early stirring : [state ? What news, what news, in this our tottering

SCENE II.] KING RICHARD III. 693 Gate. It is a reeling world indeed, my lord ; And I believe will never stand upright Till Richard wear the garland of the realm. Hast. How ! wear the garland ! dost thou mean the crown? Cafe. Ay, my good lord. [my shoulders Hast. I '11 have this crown of mine cut from Before I '11 see the crown so foul misplac'd. But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it? Cafe. Ay, on my life ; and hopes to find you forward Upon his party for the gain thereof: And thereupon he sends you this good news, — That this same very day your enemies, The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret. Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news, Because they have been still my adversaries : But that I '11 give my voice on Richard's side, To bar my master's heirs in true descent, God knows I will not do it to the death. Cafe. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind ! Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve month hence, — That they who brought me in my master's hate, I live to look upon their tragedy. Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older, I '11 send some packing that yet think not on 't. Gate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious lord, When men are unprepar'd, and look not for it. Hast. O monstrous, monstrous ! and so falls it out Witn Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill do With some men else that think themselves as safe As thou and I ; who, as thou know'st, are dear To princely Richard and to Buckingham. Gate. The princes both make high account of you,— For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside. Hast. I know they do; and I have well deservM it. Enter STANLEY. Come on, come on ; where is your boar-spear, man? Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided? Stan. My lord, good-morrow; and goodmorrow, Catesby: — You may jest on, but, by the holy rood, I do not like these several councils, I. Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as you do yours ; And never in my days, I do protest, Was it more precious to me than 'tis now : Think you, but that I know our state secure, I would be so triumphant as I am? Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, [sure, — Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust ; But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercast ! This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt ; Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward ! What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent. Hast. Come, come, have with you. —

Wot you what, my lord? To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded. Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads [hats. — Than some that have accus'd them wear their But come, my lord, let 's away. Enter a Pursuivant. Hast. Go on before ; I '11 talk with this good fellow. [Exeunt STAN, and GATE. How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee? [ask. Purs. The better that your lordship please to Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now [meet : Than when thou mett'st me last where now we Then was I going prisoner to the Tower, By the suggestion of the queen's allies ; But now, I tell thee, — keep it to thyself — This day those enemies are put to death, And I in better state than e'er I was. Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content ! [me. Hast. Gramercy, fellow : there, drink that for [Throwing him his purse. Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit. Enter a Priest. Pr. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour. Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart. I am in your debt for your last exercise ; Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you, Enter BUCKINGHAM. Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain ! Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest ; Your honour hath no shriving-work in hand. Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man, The men you talk of came irxto my mind.— What, go you toward the Tower?

694 KING RICHARD III. [ACT in. Buck. I do, my lord ; but long I cannot stay there : I shall return before your lordship thence. Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there. Buck. And supper too, although thou know'st it not. [Aside. Come, will you go? Hast. I '11 wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — POMFRET. Before the Castle. Enter RATCLIFF, with a Guard, conducting RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to execution. Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this,— To-day shalt thou behold a subject die For truth, for duty, and for loyalty. [of you ! Grey. God bless the prince from all the pack A knot you are of damned blood-suckers. Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter. Rat. Despatch ; the limit of your lives is out. Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison, Fatal and ominous to noble peers ! Within the guilty closure of thy walls Richard the Second here was hack'd to death : And, for more slander to thy dismal seat, We give thee Up our guiltless blood to drink. Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fallen upon our heads, When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I, For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son. Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham, Then curs'd she Hastings: — O, remember, God, To hear her prayer for them, as now for us ! And for my sister and her princely sons, Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood, Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt ! Rat. Make haste ; the hour of death is expiate. Riv. Come, Grey, — come, Vaughan, — let us here embrace : Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — LONDON. A Room in the Tower. BUCKINGHAM, STANLEY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, and others ; sitting at a table: Officers of the Council attending. Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met Is to determine of the coronation. In God's name, speak, — when is the royal day? Buck. Are all things ready for that royal time? Stan. They are ; and wants but nomination. Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day. Buck. Who knows the lord protector's min herein ? Who is most inward with the noble duke ? Ely. You;' grace, we think, should soonest know his mind. Buck. We know each other's faces : for our hearts, He knows no more of mine than I of yours ; Nor I of his, my lord, than you of mine. — Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love. Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well ; But for his purpose in the coronation I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd His gracious pleasure any way therein : But you, my noble lords, may name the time ; And in the duke's behalf I '11 give my voice, Which, I presume, he '11 take in gentle part. Ely. In happy time, here comes the duke himself. Enter GLOSTER. Glo. My noble lords and cousins all, goodmorrow. I have been long a sleeper ; but I trust My absence doth neglect no great design Which by my presence might have been concluded. Buck. Had you not come upon your cue, my lord, [part, — William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your I mean, your voice, — for crowning of the king. Glo. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder ; [well.— His lordship knows me well, and loves me My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn I saw good strawberries in your garden there : I do beseech you send for some of them. Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit. Glo. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. [Takes him aside. Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business, And finds the testy gentleman so hot That he will lose his head ere give consent His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne. Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile ; I'll go with you. _Exeunt GLO. and BUCK. Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph. To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden ;

SCENE IV.] KING RICHARD III. 695 For I myself am not so well provided As else I would be, were the day prolong'd. Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY. Ely. Where is my lord the Duke of Gloster? I have sent for these strawberries. Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning ; There 's some conceit or other likes him well When that he bids good-morrow with such spirit. I think there 's ne'er a man in Christendom Can lesser hide his love or hate than he ; For by his face straight shall you know his heart. Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face By any livelihood he showed to-day ? Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended ; For, were he, he had shown it in his looks. Re-enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM. Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve That do conspire my death with devilish plots Of damned witchcraft, and that have prevail'd Upon my body with their hellish charms ? Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord, Makes me most forward in this princely presence To doom the offenders : whosoe'er they be, I say, my lord, they have deserved death. Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil : Look how I am bewitch'd ; behold, mine arm Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up : And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch, Consorted with that harlot-strumpet Shore, That by their witchcraft thus have marked me. Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord, — [pet, Glo. If! thou protector of this damned strumTalk'st thou to me of ifs ? — Thou art a traitor : — Off with his head ! — now, by Saint Paul I swear, I will not dine until I see the same. — Lovel and Ratcliff :— look that it be done : — The rest, that love me, rise and follow me. [Exeunt all except H AST. , Lo v. , and R ATCLI FF. Hast. Woe, woe, for England ! not a whit for me ; For I, too fond, might have prevented this. Stanley did dream the boar did raze his helm ; And I did scorn it, and disdain to fly. Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble, And started, when he look'd upon the Tower, As loth to bear me to the slaughter-house. O, now I need the priest that spake to me : I now repent I told the pursuivant, As too triumphing, how mine enemies To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd, And I myself secure in grace and favour. 0 Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head. Rat. Come, come, despatch ; the duke would be at dinner : Make a short shrift ; he longs to see your head. Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men, Which we more hunt for than the grace of God ! Who builds his hope in air of your good looks, Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast, Ready, with every nod, to tumble down Into the fatal bowels of the deep. Lav. Come, come, despatch ; 'tis bootless to exclaim. [land ! Hast. O bloody Richard ! — miserable Eng1 prophesy the fearfull'st time to thee That ever wretched age hath look'd upon. — Come, lead me to the block ; bear him my head : They smile at me who shortly shall be dead. [Exeunt. SCENE V.— LONDON. The Tower Walls. Enter GLOSTER and BUCKINGHAM in rusty armour, marvellous ill-favoured. Glo. Come, cousin, canst thou quake and change thy colour, Murder thy breath in middle of a word, And then again begin, and stop again, As if thou wert distraught and mad with terror? Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian ; Speak and look back, and pry on every side, Tremble and start at wagging of a straw, Intending deep suspicion : ghastly looks Are at my service, like enforced smiles ; And both are ready in their offices, At any time, to grace my stratagems. But what, is Catesby gone ? [along. Glo. He is ; and, see, he brings the mayor Enter the Lord Mayor and CATESBY. Buck. Lord mayor, — Glo. Look to the drawbridge there ! Buck. Hark ! a drum. Glo. Catesby, o'erlook the walls. Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent, — Glo. Look back, defend thee, — here are enemies. Biuk. God and our innocency defend and guard us ! [Lovel. Glo. SCENE VII.] KING RICHARD III. 697 Eleven hours I have spent to write it over, For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me ; The precedent was full as long a-doing : And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd, Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty. Here 's a good world the while ! Who is so gross That cannot see this palpable device ! Yet who so bold but says he sees it not ! Bad is the world ; and all will come to naught When such ill dealing must be seen in thought. [Exit. SCENE VII. — LONDON. Court of Baynarcts Castle. Enter GLOSTFR and BUCKINGHAM, meeting. Glo. How now, how now! what say the citizens? Btick. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord, The citizens are mum, say not a word. Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children? [Lucy, Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady And his contract by deputy in France; The insatiate greediness of his desires, And his enforcement of the city wives ; His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy, — As being got, your father then in France, And his resemblance, being not like the duke : Withal I did infer your lineaments, — Being the right idea of your father, Both in your form and nobleness of mind ; Laid open all your victories in Scotland, Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace, Your bounty, virtue, fair humility; Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse : And when my oratory drew toward end I bid them that did love their country's good Cry, God save Richard, England's royal king! Glo. And did they so? [word; Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a But, like dumb statuas or breathing stones, Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale. Which when I saw, I reprehended them ; And ask'd the mayor what meant this wilful silence : His answer was, — the people were not us'd To be spoke to but by the recorder. Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again, — Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferred; But nothing spoke in warrant from himself. When he had done, some followers of mine own, At lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps, And some ten voices cried, God save King Richard! And thus I took the vantage of those few, — Thanks, gentle citizens and friends, quoth I ; This general applause and cheerful shout Argues your -wisdom andymir love to Richard: And even here brake off and came away. Glo. What tongueless blocks were they! would they not speak? [come? Will not the mayor, then, and his brethren, Buck. The mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear; Be not you spoke with but by mighty suit : And look you get a prayer-book in your hand, And stand between two churchmen, good i»y lord; For on that ground I '11 make a holy descant : And be not easily won to our requests ; [it. Play the maid's part,— still answer nay, and take Glo. I go ; and if you plead as well for them As I can say nay to thee for myself, No doubt we bring it to a happy issue. Buck. Go, go, up to the leads ; the lord mayoi knocks. [Exit GLOSTER. Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens. Welcome, my lord : I dance attendance here ; I think the duke will not be spoke withal. Entert from the Castle, CATESBY. Now, Catesby, — what says your lord to my request? [lord, Cote. He doth entreat your grace, my noble To visit him to-morrow or next day : He is within, with two right reverend fathers, Divinely bent to meditation : And in no worldly suit would he be mov*d, To draw him from his holy exercise. [duke ; Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen, In deep designs, in matter of great moment, No less importing than our general good, Are come to have some conference with his grace. Cote. I '11 signify so much unto him straight. [Exit. Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward ! He is not lolling on a lewd day-bed, But on his knees at meditation ; Not dallying with a brace of courtezans, But meditating with two deep divines ; Not sleeping, to engross bis idle body, But praying, to enrich his watchful soul : Happy were England would this virtuous prince Take on himself the sovereignty thereof: But, sure, I fear, we shall not win him to it. May. Marry, God defend his grace should say us nay ! [again. Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes

698 KING RICHARD III. [ACT in. Re-enter CATESBY. Now, Catesby, what says his grace? Cafe. He wonders to what end you have assembled Such troops of citizens to come to him : His grace not being warn'd thereof before, He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him. Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him : By heaven, we come to him in perfect love ; And so once more return and tell his grace. [Exit CATESBY. When holy and devout religious men Are at their beads, 'tis much to draw them thence, — So sweet is zealous contemplation. Enter GLOSTER, in a Gallery above, between two Bishops. CATESBY returns. May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen ! [prince, Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian To stay him from the fall of vanity : And, see, a book of prayer in his hand, — True ornament to know a holy man. — Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince, Lend favourable ear to our requests ; And pardon us the interruption Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal. Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology : I rather do beseech you pardon me, Who, earnest in the service of my God, Deferr'd the visitation of my friends. [sure? But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleaBuck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above, And all good men of this ungovern'd isle. Glo. I do suspect I have done some offence That seems disgracious in the city's eye ; And that you come to reprehend my ignorance. Buck. You have, my lord : would it might please your grace, On our entreaties, to amend your fault ! Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land ? [resign Buck. Know, then, it is your fault that you The supreme seat, the throne majestical, The scepter'd office of your ancestors, ˆrri • Your state of fortune and your due of birth, The lineal glory of your royal house, To the corruption of a blemish'd stock : Whilst, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts, — Which here we waken to our country's good,ˆThis noble isle doth want her proper limbs ; Her face defac'd with scars of infamy, Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants, And almost shoulderM in the swallowing gulf Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion. Which to recure, we heartily solicit Your gracious self to take oil you the charge And kingly government of this your land ; — Not as protector, steward, substitute, Or lowly factor for another's gain ; But as successively, from blood to blood, Your right of birth, your empery, your own. For this, consorted with the citizens Your very worshipful and loving friends, And, by their vehement instigation, In this just suit come I to move your grace. Glo. I cannot tell if to depart in silence Or bitterly to speak in your reproof Best fitteth my degree or your condition : If not to answer, you might haply think Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty, Which fondly you would here impose on me 5 If to reprove you for this suit of yours, So season'd with your faithful love to me, Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends. Therefore, — to speak, and to avoid the first, And then, in speaking, not to incur the last, — Definitively thus I answer you. Your love deserves my thanks ; but my desert Unmeritable shuns your high request. First, if all obstacles were cut away, And that my path were even to the crown, As the ripe revenue and due of birth, Yet so much is my poverty of spirit, So mighty and so many my defects, [ness, — That I would rather hide me from my greatBeing a bark to brook no mighty sea, — Than in my greatness covet to be hid, And in the vapour of my glory smother'd. But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me,— And much I need to help you, were there need ; — The royai tree hath left us royal fruit, Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time, Will well become the seat of majesty, And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign. On him I lay that you would lay on me, — The right and fortune of his happy stars ; Which God defend that I should wring from him ! [grace ; Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your But the respects thereof are nice and trivial, All circumstances well considered. You say that Edward is your brother's son s So say we too, but not by Edward's wife ; For first was he contract to Lady Lucy, — Your moiher lives a witness to his vow,— And afterward by substitute betroth'd

'SCENE vn.J KING RICHARD III. 699 To Bona, sister to the King of France. These both put off, a poor petitioner, A care-craz'd mother to a many sons, A beauty- waning and distressed widow, Even in the afternoon of her best days. Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye, Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree To base declension and loath'd bigamy : By her, in his unlawful bed, he got This Edward, whom our manners call the prince. More bitterly could I expostulate, Save that, for reverence to some alive, I give a sparing limit to my tongue. Then, good my lord, take to your royal self This proffer'd benefit of dignity ; If not to bless us and the land withal, Vet to draw forth your noble ancestry From the corruption of abusing time Unto a lineal true-derived course. [you. May. Do, good my lord ; your citizens entreat Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love. [suit ! Gate. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful Glo. Alas, why would you heap those cares on me? I am unfit for state and majesty : — I do beseech you, take it not amiss ; I cannot nor I will not yield to you. Buck. If you refuse it, — as, in love and zeal, Loth to depose the child, your brothers son — As well we know your tenderness of heart, And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse, Which we have noted in you to your kindred, And equally, indeed, to all estates, — Yet know, whe'i you accept our suit or no, Your brother's son shall never reign our king; But we will plant some other in the throne, To the disgrace and downfall of your house : And in this resolution here we leave you. — Come, citizens, we will entreat no more. [Exeunt BUCK., the Mayor and Citizens retiring. Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit : If you deny them, all the land will rue it. Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares? Call them again. [GATE, goes to the Mayor, &* tagenet Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster? Now, fof my life, she's wandering to the Tower, On pure heart's love, to greet the tendei princes. — Daughter, well met. Anne. God give your graces both A happy and a joyful time of day ! [away? Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither Anne. No further than the Tower ; and, as I guess, Upon the like devotion as yourselves, To gratulate the gentle princes there. Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks: we'll enter all together : — And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes, Enter BRAKENBURY. Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the prince, and my young son of York? Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience.

KING RICHARD III. [ACT iv. I may not suffer you to visit them j The king has strictly charg'd the contrary. Q. Eliz. The king ! who 's ihat ? Brak. I mean the lord protector. Q. Eliz. The lord protect him from that kingly title ! Hath he set bounds between their love and me ? I am their mother ; who shall bar me from them ? Duck. I am their father's mother ; I will see them. [mother : Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their Then bring me to their sights ; I '11 bear thy blame, And take thy office from thee, on my peril. Brak. No, madam, no, — I may not leave it so: I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me. {Exit. Enter STANLEY. Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence, And I '11 salute your grace of York as mother And reverend looker-on of two fair queens. — Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster, \To the DUCHESS OF GLOSTER. There to be crowned Richard's royal queen. Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder, [beat, That my pent heart may have some scope to Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news ! Anne. Despiteful tidings! Ounpleasingnews! Dor. Be of good cheer : mother, how fares your grace? [gone ! Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee Death and destruction dog thee at the heels ; Thy mother's name is ominous to children. If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas, And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell : Go, hie thee, hie thee from this slaughter-house, Lest thou increase the number of the dead ; And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse, Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen. Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam. — Take all the swift advantage of the hours ; You shall have letters from me to my son In your behalf, to meet you on the way : Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay. Duck. O ill-dispersing wind of misery ! — • O my accursed womb, the bed of death ! A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world, Whose unavoided eye is murderous. [sent. Stan. Come, madam, come ; I in all haste was Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go. — O, would to God that the inclusive verge Of golden metal that must round my brow Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain ! Anointed let me be with deadly venom, And die ere men can say God save the Queen I Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory ; To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. Anne. No, why ? — When he that is my husband now Came to me, as I follow'd

Henry's corse ; When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands Which issu'd from my other angel husband, And that dead saint which then I weeping follow'd ; O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face, This was my wish, — Be thou, quoth I, occurs 'd For making me, so young, so old a widow! And when thou wedifst, let sorrow haunt thy bed; And be thy wife, — if any be so mad, — More miserable by the life of thee \death ! Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again, Within so small a time, my woman's heart Grossly grew captive to his honey words, And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse, — • Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest ; For never yet one hour in his bed Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep, But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick ; And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me. Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu ! I pity thy complaining. Anne. No more than with rny soul I mourn for yours. [glory . Q. Eliz. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it ! Duck. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee !— \To DORSET. Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!— [To ANNE. Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee ! [To QUEEN ELIZABETH. I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me ! Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen, And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen. Q. Eliz. Stay yet, look back with me unto the Tower. — Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes, Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls ! Rough cradle for such little pretty ones ! Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow For tender princes, use my babies well ! So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell. \Exeunt

SCENE II.] KING RICHARD III. 701 SCENE II. —LONDON. A Room of State in the Palace. Flourish of trumpets. RICHARD, as King, upon his throne ; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY, a Page, and others. K. Rich. Stand all apart. — Cousin of Buckingham,— Buck. My gracious sovereign ? K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice And thy assistance, is King Richard seated : — But shall we wear these glories for a day ? Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them ? Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last ! K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch, To try if thou be current gold indeed : — Young Edward lives ; — think now what I would speak. Buck. Say on, my loving lord. K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king. [liege. Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned K. Rich. Ha ! am I king? 'tis so : but Edward lives. Buck. True, noble prince. K. Rich. O bitter consequence, That Edward still should live, — true, noble prince ! — Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull :— Shall I be plain ? — I wish the bastards dead ; And I would have it suddenly perform'd. What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be brief. Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure. K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes : Say, have I thy consent that they shall die ? Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord, Before I positively speak in this : I will resolve your grace immediately. [Exit. Cate. The king is angry : see, he gnaws his lip. [Aside. K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools [Descends from his throne. And un respective boys ; none are for me That look into mˆ with considerate eyes : High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect. Boy !— Page.f My lord? K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold Would tempt into a close exploit of death ? Page. I know a discontented gentleman, Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit : Gold were as good as twenty orators, And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything. K. Rich. What is his name ? Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel. K. Rich. I partly know the man: go, call him hither, boy. [Exit Page. The deep-revolving witty Buckingham No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels : H?th he so long held out with me untir'd, And stops he now for breath? — well, be it so. Enter STANLEY. How now, Lord Stanley! what's the news? Stan. Know, my loving lord, The Marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled To Richmond, in the parts where he abides. K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick ; I will take order for her keeping close : Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman Whom I will marry straight to Clarence* daughter ; — The bo > is foolish, and I fear not him. — Look, how thou dream'st! — I say again, give out That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die : About it ; for it stands me much upon, To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me. [Exit CATESBY. I must be married to my brother's daughter, Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass : — Murder her brothers, and then marry her ! Uncertain way of gain ! But I am in So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin : Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye. Re-enter Page, with TYRREL. Is thy name Tyrrel? [subject. Ty. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient K. Rich. Art thou, indeed? Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord. K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine? [enemies. Tyr. Please you. But I had rather kill two K. Rich. Why, then, thou hast it : two deep enemies, Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep's disturbers, Are they that I would have thee deal upon : — Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower. Tyr. Let me have open means to come tc them, And soon I '11 rid you from the fear of them. K. Rich. Thou sing's! sweet music. Hark < come hither, Tyrrel:

I will despatch it straight. {Exit. Re-enter BUCKINGHAM. Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind The late demand that you did sound me in. K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond. Buck. I hear the news, my lord. K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: — well, look to it. [promise, Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd; The earldom of Hereford, and the movables, Which you have promised I shall possess. K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife : if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it. Btick. What says your highness to my just request? [Sixth K. Rich. I do remember me, — Henry the Did prophesy that Richmond should be king, When Richmond was a little peevish boy. A king ! — perhaps, — Buck. My lord, — K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him? Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom,— [Exeter, K. Rich. Richmond ! — When last I was at The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle, And call'd it Rouge-mont: at which name I started, Because a bard of Ireland told me once I should not live long after I saw Richmond. Buck. My lord,— K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock? [mind Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in Of what you promis'd me. K. Rich. Well, but what 's o'clock? Buck. Upon the stroke of ten. K. Rich. Well, let it strike. Buck. Why let it strike? K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke Betwixt thy begging and my meditation. I am not in the giving vein to-day. [or no. Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will JK. Rich. Thou troublest me ; I am not in the vein. {Exeunt K. RICH, and Train. Butk. And is it thus? repays he my deep service With such contempt? made I him king for this? O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone To Brecknock while my fearful head is on ! {Exit. SCENE III. — LONDON. Another Room in th& Palace. Enter TYRREL. Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done, — The most arch deed of piteous mssacre That ever yet this land was guilty of. Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn To do this piece of ruthless butchery, Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs, Melting with tenderness and mild compassion, Wept like two children in their death's sad story. O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes, — Thus, thus, quoth Forrest, girdling one another Within their alabaster innocent arms: Their lips were four red roses on a stalk, Which in their summer beauty his s*d each other. A book of prayers on their pillow lay ; Which once, quoth Forrest, almost chang'd my mind; Biit, 0, the devil, — there the villain stopp'd ; When Dighton thus told on,— we smothered The most replenished sweet work of nature That from the prime creation Jer she frairfd.— Hence both are gone ; with conscience and remorse They could not speak ; and so I left them both, To bear this tidings to the bloody king: — And here he comes : — Enter KING RICHARD. All health, my sovereign lord ! K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy news? [charge Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in Beget your happiness, be happy then, For it is done. K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead? Tyr. I did, my lord. K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel? Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried them; But where, to say the truth, I do not know. K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon, at after supper, When thou shalt tell the process of their death. Meantime, but think how I may do thee good, And be inheritor of thy desire. Farewell till then. Tyr. I humbly take my leave. {Exit. K'. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close :

SCENE IV.] KING RICHARD III. 703 His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage ; The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom, And Anne my wife hath bid the world goodnight. Now, for I know the Bretagne Richmond aims At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter, And by that knot looks proudly on the crown, To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer. Enter RATCLIFF. Rat. My lord,— K. Rich. Good news or bad, that thou com'st in so bluntly? [Richmond; Rat. Bad news, my lord : Morton is fled to And Buckingham, back'dwith the hardy Welshmen, Is in the field, and still his power increaseth. K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength. Come, — I have learn'd that fearful commenting Is leaden servitor to dull delay; Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary: Then fiery expedition be my wing, Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king ! Go, muster men : my counsel is my shield ; We must be brief when traitors brave the field. [Exetmt. SCENE IV. — LONDON. Before the Palace. Enter QUEEN MARGARET. Q. Mar. So, now pi'osperity begins to mellow, And drop into the rotten mouth of death. Here in these confines slily have I lurk'd, To watch the waning of mine enemies. A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France ; hoping the consequence Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical. — Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret : who comes here? [Retires. Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS OF YORK. Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes ! ah, my tender babes ! My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets ! If yet your gentle souls fly in the air, And be not fix'd in doom perpetual, Hover about me with your airy wings, And hear your mother's lamentation ! [right Q. Mar. Hover about her ; say, that right for Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night. Duck. So many miseries have craz;d my voice That my woe-wearied tongue is still and mute.— Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead? Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet, Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs, And throw them in the entrails of the wolf? When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done? [sweet son. Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortalliving ghost, [usurp'd, Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth, [Sitting down. Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood ! Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave As thou canst yield a melancholy seat ! [here. Then would I hide my bones, not rest them Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but we? [Sitting down by her. Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent, Give mine the benefit of seniory, [Coming forward. And let my griefs frown on the upper hand. If sorrow can admit society, [Sitting down with them. Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine : — I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him ; I had a Henry, till a Richard kill'd him: Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him. Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him; I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to kill him. Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him. From forth *;he kennel of thy womb hath crept A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death : That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes, To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood ; That foul defacer of God's handiwork ; That excellent grand tyrant of the earth, That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls, — Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves. — O upright, just, and true-disposing God, How do I thank thee that this carnal cur Preys on the issue of his mother's body, And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan ! Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes! God witness with me, I have wept for thine. Q. Mar. Bear with me ; I am hungry for revenge, And now I doy me with beholding it.

704 KING RICHARD III. [ACT iv. Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward ; Thy other Edward dead to quit my Edward ; Young York he is but boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss : Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my Edward; And the beholders of this frantic play, The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey, Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves. Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer ; Only reserv'd their factor to buy souls, And send them thither: — but at hand, at hand, Ensues his piteous and unpitied end : Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray, To have him suddenly convey'd from hence. — Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray, That I may live to say, The dog is dead ! Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come That I should wish for thee to help me curse That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad ! [my fortune ; Q. Mar. I call'd thee then, vain flourish of I call'd thee then, poor shadow, painted queen ; The presentation of but what I was, The flattering index of a direful pageant ; One heav'd a-high, to be hurl'd down below ; A mother only mock'd with two fair babes ; A dream of what thou wast ; a garish flag, To be the aim of every dangerous shot ; A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble; A queen in jest, only to fill the scene. Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers? Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou joy? Who sues, and kneels, and says, God save the queen ? Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee? Where be the thronging troops that follow'd thee? Decline all this, and see what now thou art: For happy wife, a most digressed widow ; For joyful mother, one that wails the name ; For one being su'd to, one that humbly sues ; For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care ; For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me; For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one ; For one commanding all, obey'd of none. Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about, And left thee but a very prey to time ; Having no more but thought of what thou wast, To torture thee the more, being what thou art. Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke; From which even here I slip my wearied head, And leave the burden of it all on thee. Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mischance : — [France. These English woes shall make me smile in Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay awhile, And teach me how to curse mine enemies ! Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day ; Compare dead happiness with living woe ; Think that thy babes were fairer than they were, And he that slew them fouler than he is : Bettering thy loss makes the bad-causer worse ; Revolving this will, teach thee how to curse. Q. Eliz. My words are dull ; O, quicken them with thine ! Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. _Exit. Duch. Why should calamity be full of words? Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client woes, Airy succeeders of intestate joys, Poor breathing orators of miseries ! [part Let them have scope : though what they do imHelp nothing else, yet do they ease the heart. Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go with me, And in the breath of bitter words let 's smother My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd. [Drum within. I hear his drum : — be copious in exclaims. Enter KING RICHARD and his Train, marching. K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition? [thee, Duch. O, she that might have intercepted By strangling thee in her accursed womb, From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done! Q. Eliz. Hidst thou that forehead with a golden crown, [right, Where should be branded, if that right were The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown, And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers? Tell me thou villain-slave, where are my children? Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence? And little Ned Plantagenet, his son? [Grey? Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Duch. Where is kind Hastings ? K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum, drums ! Let not the heavens hear these iell-tale women Rail on the Lord's anointed : strike, I say ! [Flourish. Alarums. Either be patient, and entreat me fair, Or with the clamorous report of war Thus will I drown your exclamations.

Madam, I have a touch of your condition, That cannot brook the accent of reproof. Duch. O, let me speak ! K. Rich. Do, then ; but I '11 not hear. Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words. K. Rich. And brief, good mother ; for I am in haste. Duch. Art thou so hasty ? I have stay'd for thee, God knows, in torment and in agony. K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort you ? [well Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell. A grievous burden was thy birth to me ; Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy ; Thy school -days frightful, desperate, wild, and furious ; [turous ; Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and venThy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody, [hatred : More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in What comfortable hour canst thou name That ever grac'd me in thy company ? K. Rich. Faith, none but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your grace To treakfast once forth of my company. If I be so disgracious in your eye, Let me march on and not offend you, madam. — Strike up the drum. Duch. I pr'ythee, hear me speak. K. Rich. You speak too bitterly. Duch. Hear me a word ; For I shall never speak to thee again. K. Rich. So. [dinance Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just orEre from this war thou turn a conqueror ; Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish, And never look upon thy face again. Therefore take with thee my most heavy curse ; Which in the day of battle tire thee more Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st ! My prayers on the adverse party fight ; And there the little souls of Edward's children Whisper the spirits of thine enemies, And promise them success and victory. Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end ; Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. {Exit. Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse Abides in me ; I say amen to her. \Going. K. Rich. Stay, madam, I must talk a word with you. Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood For thee to slaughter: for my daughters, Richard, — They shall be praying nuns, not queens; And therefore level not to hit their lives. K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth, Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious. Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live, And I '11 corrupt her manners, stain her beauty; Slander myself as false to Edward's bed ; Throw over her the veil of infamy : So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter, I will confess she was not Edward's daughter. K. Rich. Wrong not her birth; she is of royal blood. Q. Eliz. To save her life I '11 say she is not so. K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth. Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers. [opposite. K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary. K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny. Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny : My babes were destined to a fairer death If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life. K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins. [cozen'd Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed ; and by their uncle Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life. Whose hand soever lanc'd their tender hearts, Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction : No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart, To revel in the entrails of my lambs. But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame, My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes ; And I, in such a desperate bay of death, Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft, Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom. K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise And dangerous success of bloody wars, As I intend more good to you and yours Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd ! Q. Eliz. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her? Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee, Having bought love with such a bloody spoil. K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended : Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes, Which after-hours give leisure to repent. If I did take the kingdom from your sons, To make amends I '11 give it to your daughter. If I hav kill'd the issue of your womb, To quicken your increase I will beget Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter : A grandam's name is little less in love Than is the doating title of a mother ; They are as children but one step below, Even of your mettle, of your very blood ; Of all one pain, — save for a night of groans Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow. Your children were vexation to your youth ; But mine shall be a comfort to your age. The loss you have is but a son being king, And by that loss your daughter is made queen. I cannot make you what amends I would, Therefore accept such kindness as I can. Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul Leads discontented steps in foreign soil, This fair alliance quickly shall call home To high promotions and great dignity : . [wife, The king, that calls your beauteous daughter Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother ; Again shall you be mother to a king, And all the ruins of distressful times Repair'd with double riches of content. What ! we have many goodly days to see : The liquid drops of tears that you have shed Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl, Advantaging their loan with interest Of ten-times-double gain of happiness. Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go ; Make bold her bashful years with your experience ; Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale : Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame Of golden sovereignty ; acquaint the princess With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys : And when this arm of mine hath chastised The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I come, And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed ; To whom I will retail my conquest won, And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar. Inter their bodies as becomes their births : Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled That in submission will return to us : And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament, We will unite the white rose and the red : — Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction, That long hath frown'd upon their enmity ! What traitor hears me, and says not Amen ? England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself; The brother blindly shed the brother's blood, The father rashly slaughter'd his own son, The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire: All this divided York and Lancaster, Divided in their dire division, — O, now let Richmond and Elizabeth,,.;sKAjO The true succeeders of each royal house, By God's fair ordinance conjoin together ! And let their heirs, — God, if thy will be so, — Enrich the time to come with smooth'd-fac'd peace, With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days I Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, That would reduce these bloody days again, And make poor England weep in streams of blood! Let them not live to taste this land's increase That would with treason wound this fair land's peace ! Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again : That she may long live here, God say Amen ! I come no more to make you laugh : things now That bear a weighty and a serious brow, Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe, Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow, We now present. Those that can pity, here May, if they think it well, let fall a tear ; The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe, May here find truth too. Those that come to see Only a show or two, and so agree The play may pass, if they be still and willing, I '11 undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they That come to hear a merry bawdy play, A noise of targets, or to see a fellow In a long motley coat guarded with yellow, Will be deceiv'd • for, gentle hearers, know, To rank our chosen truth with such a show As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring, To make that only true we now intend, Will leave us never an understanding friend. SCENE I.] KING HENRY VIII. 717 Nor. I thank your grace, Healthful ; and ever since a fresh admirer Of what I saw there. Buck. An untimely ague Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber, when Those suns of glory, those two lights of men, Met in the vale of Andren. Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde : I was then present, saw them salute on horseback ; [clung Beheld them, when they lighted, how they In their embracement, as they grew together ; Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd Such a compounded one? Buck. All the whole time I was my chamber's prisoner. Nor. Then you lost The view of earthly glory : men might say, Till this time pomp was single, but now married To one above itself. Each following day Became the next day's master, till the last Made former wonders it's : to-day the French, All clinquant, all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English ; and to-morrow they Made Britain India : every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were As cherubims, all gilt : the madams too, Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear The pride upon them, that their very labour Was to them as a painting: now this masque Was cried incomparable; and the ensuing night Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings, Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst, As presence did present them ; him in eye, Still him in praise : and, being present both, 'Twas said they saw but one ; and no discerner Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns, — [leng'd For so they phrase 'em, — by their heralds chalThe noble spirits to arms, they did perform Beyond thought's compass: that former fabulous story, Being now seen possible enough, got credit, That Bevis was believ'd. Buck. O, you go far. Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect In honour honesty, the tract of everything Would by a good discourser lose some life, Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal ; To the disposing of it naught rebell'd, Order gave each thing view ; the office did Distinctly his full function. Bttck. Who did guide — I mean, who set the body and the limbs Of this great sport together, as you guess? Nor. One, certes, that promises no element In such a business. Buck. I pray you, who, my lord? Nor. All this was ordered by the good discretion Of the right reverend Cardinal of York, [freed Buck. The devil speed him ! no man's pie is From his ambitious finger. What had he To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder That such a keech can with his very bulk Take up the rays o' the beneficial sun, And keep it from the earth. Nor. Surely, sir, There's in him stuff that puts him to these ends; [grace For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose Chalks successors their way ; nor call'd upon For high feats done to the crown ; neither allied To eminent assistants ; but, spider-like, Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note The force of his own merit makes his way ; A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys A place next to the king. Aber. \ cannot tell What heaven hath given him, — let some graver eye Pierce into that ; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him : whence has he that? If not from hell, the devil is a niggard ; Or has given all before, and he begins A new hell in himself. Buck. Why the devil, Upon this French going-out, took he upon him, Without the privity o' the king, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file Of all the gentry ; for the most part such To whom as great a charge as little honour He meant to lay upon : and his own letter, The honourable board of council out, Must fetch him in the papers. Aber. I do know Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have By this so sicken'd their estates that never They shall abound as formerly. Bttck.':'" O, many ['em Have broke their backs with laying manors on For this great journey. What did this vanity But minister communication of A most poor issue ? Nor. Grievingly I think, The peace between the French and us not values The cost that did conclude it. Buck. Every man, After the hideous storm that follow'd, was A thing inspir'd ; and, not consulting, broke

KING HENRY VIII. [ACT i. Into a general prophecy,— That this tempest, Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded The sudden breach on 't. Nor. Which is budded out ; For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux. Aber. Is it therefore The ambassador is silenc'd ? Nor. Marry, is't. Aber. A proper title of a peace; and purchas'd At a superfluous rate ! Buck. Why, all this business Our reverend cardinal carried. Nor. Like it your grace , The state takes notice of the private difference Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you, — And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honour and plenteous safety, — that you read The cardinal's malice and his potency Together ; to consider further, that What his high hatred would effect wants not A minister in his power. You know his nature, That he 's revengeful ; and I know his sword Hath a sharp edge : it 'slong, and, 't may be said, It reaches far ; and where 'twill not extend, Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. — Lo, where comes that rock That I advise you shunning. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, the piirse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with papers. The CARDINAL in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain. Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor? ha? Where 's his examination ? rw x/;I ol in I Seer. Ask God for temperance ; that 's the appliance only Which your disease requires. Buck. ,5m; \ read in 's looks Matter against me ; and his eye revil'd Me, as his abject object: at this instant [king; He bores me with some trick : he 's gone to the I '11 follow, and outstare him. Nor. Stay, my lord, And let your reason with your choler question What 'tis you go about : to climb steep hills Requires slow pace at first : anger is like A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way, Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England Can advise me like you : be to yourself As you would to your friend. Buck. I '11 to the king ; And from a mouth of honour quite cry down This Ipswich fellow's insolence ; or proclaim There 's difference in no persons. Nor. Be advis'd ; Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot That it do singe yourself: we may outrun, By violent swiftness, that which we run at, And lose by over-running. Know you not, The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er, In seeming to augment it wastes it ? Be advis'd : I say again, there is no English soul More stronger to direct you than yourself, If with the sap of reason you would quench Or but allay the fire of passion. Buck. Sir, I am thankful to you ; and I '11 go along By your prescription : but this top-proud fellow,— Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions, — by intelligence, And proofs as clear as founts in July, when We see each grain of gravel, I do know To be corrupt and treasonous. Nor. Say not treasonous. Buck. To the king I '11 say 't ; and make my vouch as strong As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox, Or wolf, or both, — for he is equal ravenous As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief As able to perform 't ; his mind and place Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally, — Only to show his pomp as well in Francerjni:> < As here at home, suggests the king our master To this last costly treaty, the interview, That swallow'dso much treasure, and like a glass Did break i' the rinsing. Nor. Faith, and so it did. Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal The articles o' the combination drew As himself pleas'd ; and they were ratified As he cried, Thus let be : to as much end As give a crutch to the dead: but our countcardinal Has done this, and 'tis well ; for worthy Wolsey,

SCENE I.] KING HENRY VIII. 719 Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,— Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy To the old dam treason, — Charles the emperor, Under pretence to see the queen his aunt, — For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came To whisper Wolsey, — here makes visitation : His fears were that the interview betwixt England and France might, through their amity, Breed him some prejudice ; for from this league Peep;d harms that menac'd him : he privily Deals with our cardinal ; and, as I trow, — Which I do well ; for I am sure the emperor Paid ere he promis'd ; wherebyhis suit was granted Ere it was ask'd ; — but when the way was made, And pav'd withgold, the emperor thusdesir'd, — That he would please to alter the king's course, And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know, — As soon he shall by me, — that thus the cardinal Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, And for his own advantage. Nor. I am sorry To hear this of him ; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't. Buck. No, not a syllable : I do pronounce him in that very shape He shall appear in proof. Enter BRANDON, a Sergeant-at-Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard. Bran. Your office, sergeant ; execute it. Serg. Sir, My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I Arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign king. Buck. Lo, you, my lord, The net has fall'n upon me ! I shall perish Under device and practice. Bran. I am sorry To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on The business present : 'tis his highness' pleasure You shall to the Tower. Buck. It will help me nothing To plead mine innocence ; for that dye is on me Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of heaven Be done in this and all things ! — I obey. — O my Lord Aberga'ny, fare you well ! Bran. Nay, he must bear you company. — The king {To ABERGAVENNY. Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know How he determines further. Aber. As the duke said, The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure By me obeyM ! Bran. Here is a warrant from The king to attach Lord Montacute; and the bodies Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car, One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor, — Buck. So, so; These are the limbs o' the plot : — no more, I hope. Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux. Buck. O, Nicholas Hopkins? Bran. He, Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal [ready : Hath show'd him gold ; my life is spann'd alI am the shadow of poor Buckingham, Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on, By darkening my clear sun. — My lord, farewell. [Exeunt. nij

 K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed. Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few, And those of true condition, that your subjects Are in great grievance : there have been commissions Sent down among 'em which have flaw'd the heart Of all their loyalties : — wherein, although, My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches Most bitterly on you, as putter-on Of these exactions, yet the king our master, — Whose honour Heaven shield from soil ! — even he escapes not Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks The sides of loyalty, and almost appears In loud rebellion. Nor. Not almost appears, — It doth appear ; for, upon these taxations, The clothiers all, not able to maintain The many to them 'longing, have put off The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who, Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger And lack of other means, in desperate manner Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar, And danger serves among them. K. Hen. Taxation ! Wherein ? and what taxation ? — My lord cardinal , You that are blam'd for it alike with us, Know you of this taxation? Wol. Please you, sir, I know but of a single part, in aught Pertains to the state ; and front but in that file Where others tell steps with me. Q. Kath. No, my lord, You know no more than others; but you frame Things that are known alike; which are not wholesome [must To those which would not know them, and yet Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing ; and to bear 'em The back is sacrifice to the load. They say They are devis'd by you ; or else you suffer Too hard an exclamation. K. Hen. Still exaction ! The nature of it? in what kind, let's know, Is this exaction? Q. Kath. I am much too venturous In tempting of your patience ; but am bolden'd Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief Comes through commissions, which compel from each The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay ; and the pretence for this Is nam'd your wars in France : this makes bold mouths; Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze Allegiance in them; their curses now f{j or Live where their prayers did : and it 's come to pass This tractable obedience is a slave To each incensed will. I would your highness Would give it quick consideration, for There is no primer business. K. Hen. By my life, This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me, I have no further gone in this than by A single voice ; and that not pass'd me but By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither know My faculties nor person, yet will be The chronicles of my doing, — let me say 'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake That virtue must go through. We must not stint Our necessary actions, in the fear To cope malicious censurers ; which ever, As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best, By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is Not ours, or not allow'd ; what worst, as oft Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up For our best act. If we shall stand still, In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at, We should take root here where we sit, or sit State-statues only. K. Hen. Things done well And with a care exempt themselves from fear ; Things done without example, in their issue Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent Of this commission ? I believe, not any. We must not rend our subjects from our laws, And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each ? A trembling contribution ! Why, we take From every tree lop, bark, and part o' the timber; And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd, The air will drink the sap. To every county Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied The force of this commission : pray, look to 't ; I put it to your care. Wol. A word with you. [To the Secretary. Let there be letters writ to every shire, Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons Hardly conceive of me ; let it be nois'd That through our intercession this revokement And pardon comes : I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary,

SCENE II.] KING HENRY VIII. 721 Enter Surveyor. Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham Is run in your displeasure. K. Hen. It grieves many : The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker ; To nature none more bound ; his training such That he may furnish and instruct great teachers, And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see, When these so noble benefits shall prove Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt, They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly Than ever they were fair. This man so complete, [we, Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find His hour of speech a minute ; he, my lady, Hath into monstrous habits put the graces That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear — This was his gentleman in trust, — of him Things to strike honour sad. — Bid him recount The fore-recited practices ; whereof We cannot feel too little, hear too much. Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you, Most like a careful subject, have collected Out of the Duke of Buckingham. K. Hen. Speak freely. Surv . First, it was usual with him, every day It would infect his speech, — that if the king Should without issue die, he '11 carry it so To make the sceptre his : these very words I have heard him utter to his son-in-law, Lord Aberga'ny ; to whom by oath he menac'd Revenge upon the cardinal. Wol. Please your highness, note This dangerous conception in this point. Not friended by his wish, to your high person His will is most malignant ; and it stretches Beyond you to your friends. Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal, Deliver all with charity. K. Hen. Speak on : How grounded he his title to the crown Upon our fail ? to this point hast thou heard him At any time speak aught ? Surv. He was brought to this By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins. K. Hen. What was that Hopkins ? Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar, His confessor ; who fed him every minute With words of sovereignty. K. Hen. How know'st thou this ? Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France, .utjyA The Duke being at the Rose, within the parish Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand What was the speech among the Londoners Concerning the French journey : I replied, Men fear'd the French would prove perfidious, To the king's danger. Presently the duke Said, 'twas the fear, indeed ; andthathe doubted 'Twould prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk ; That oft, says he, Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour To hear from him a matter of some moment I Whom after under the confession's seal He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke My chaplain to no creature living but To me should utter, with demure confidence This pausingly ensued, — Neither the king nor'* heirs, Tell you the duke, shall prosper : bid him strive To gain the love o' the commonalty : the duke Shall govern England. Q. Kath. If I know you well, You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office On the complaint o' the tenants: take good heed . ;:{ You charge not in your spleen a noble person, And spoil your nobler soul : I say, take heed ; Yes, heartily beseech you. K. Hen. Let him on : — Go forward. Surv. On my soul, I '11 speak but truth. I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions The monk might be deceiv'd ; and that 'twas dangerous for him To ruminate on this so far, until It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd, It was much like to do : he answer'd, Tush, It can do me no damage ; adding further, That, had the king in his last sickness fail'd, The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads Should have gone off. K. Hen. Ha ! what, so rank ? Ah-ha ! There 's mischief in this man : — Canst thou say further? Surv. I can, my liege. K. Hen. Proceed. Surv. Being at Greenwich, After your highness had reprov'd the duke About Sir William Blomer, — K. Hen. I remember Of such a time : — being my sworn servant, The duke retain'd him his. — But onj what hence ?

If, quoth he, I for this had been committed, As, to the Tower, I thought, — / would have play'd The part my father meant to act upon The usurper Richard ; who, being at Salisbttry , Made suit to come in's presence; which, if granted, As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him. K. Hen. A giant traitor ! Wol. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom, And this man out of prison ? Q. Kath. God mend all ! K. Hen. There 's something more would out of thee ; what say'st ? Surv. After the duke his father, with the knife, He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger, Another spread on 's breast, mounting his eyes, He did discharge a horrible oath ; whose tenor Was, were he evil us'd, he would out-go His father by as much as a performance Does an irresolute purpose. K. Hen. There 's his period, To sheath his knife in us. He is attach'd ; Call him to present trial : if he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his ; if none, Let him not seek't of us : by day and night, He is a daring traitor to the height. [Exeunt. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too: But he would bite none; just as I do now, — He would kiss you twenty with a breath. [Kisses her. Cham. Well said, my lord.— So, now you 're fairly seated. — Gentlemen, The penance lies on you if these fair ladies Pass away frowning. Sands. For my little cure, Let me alone. Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, attended; and takes his state. Wol. Ye 're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady Or gentleman that is not freely merry Is not my friend : this, to confirm my welcome ; And to you all, good health. [Drinks. Sands. Your grace is noble : — Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks, And save me so much talking. Wol. My Lord Sands, I am beholden to you : cheer your neighbours.— Ladies, you are not merry : — gentlemen, Whose fault is this? Sands. The red wine first must rise In their fair cheeks, my lord ; then we shall have 'em Talk us to silence. Anne. You are a merry gamester, My Lord Sands. -»ˆ Sands. Yes, if I make my play. Here 's to your ladyship: and pledge it, madam, For 'tis to such a thing, — Anne. You cannot show me. Sands. I told your grace they would talk anon. [Drum and trumpets: Chamber* discharged within.

SCENE I.] KING HENRY VIII. 725 1 Gent. I '11 save you That labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony Of bringing back the prisoner. 2 Gent. Were you there? 1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I. 2 Gent. Pray, speak what has happen'd. 1 Gent. You may guess quickly what. 2 Gent. Is he found guilty? 1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon 't. 2 Gent. I am sorry for 't. 1 Gent. So are a number more. 2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it? [duke 1 Gent. I '11 tell you in a little. The great Came to the bar ; where to his accusations He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd Many sharp reasons to defeat the law. The king's attorney, on the contrary, Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions Of divers witnesses ; which the duke desir'd To have brought, vivA voce, to his face : At which appear'd against him his surveyor ; Sir Gilbert Peck, his chancellor; and John Car, Confessor to him ; with that devil-monk, Hopkins, that made this mischief. 2 Gent. That was he That fed him with his prophecies? 1 Gent. The same. All these accus'd him strongly ; which he fain Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not : And so his peers, upon this evidence, Have found him guilty of high treason. Much He spoke, and learnedly, for life ; but all Was either pitied in him or forgotten. [self? 2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear him1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar to hear [stirr'd His knell rung out, his judgment, — he was With such an agony, he sweat extremely, And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty; But he fell to himself again, and sweetly In all the rest show'd a most noble patience. 2 Gent. I do not think he fears death. 1 Gent. Sure, he does not, He never was so womanish ; the cause He may a little grieve at. 2 Gent. Certainly The cardinal is the end of this. 1 Gent. 'Tis likely, By all conjectures : first, Kildare's attainder, Then deputy of Ireland ; who remov'd, Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too, Lest he should help his father. 2 Gent. That trick of state Was a deep envious one. 1 Gent. At his return No doubt he will requite it. This is noted, And generally, — whoever the king favours The cardinal instantly will find employment, And far enough from court too. 2 Gent. All the commons Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience, Wish him ten fathom deep : this duke as much They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham, The mirror of all courtesy, — 1 Gent. Stay there, sir,

And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of. Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment; Tip-staves before him ; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side: with him SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX, SIR WILLIAM SANDS, and common people. 2 Gent. Let 's stand close, and behold him. Buck. All good people, You that thus far have come to pity me, Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgment, And by that name must die : yet, heaven bear witness, And if I have a conscience, let it sink me, Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful ! The law I bear no malice for my death ; 'T has done, upon the premises, but justice : But those that sought it I could wish more Christians : Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em : Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief, Nor build their evils on the graves of great mens For then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em For further life in this world I ne'er hope, Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me, And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham, His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave Is only bitter to him, only dying, Go with me, like good angels, to my end ; And as the long divorce of steel falls on me Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice, And lift my soul to heaven. — Lead on, o' God's name. Lov. I do beseech your grace, for charity, If ever any malice in your heart Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly. Bitck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you As I would be forgiven : I forgive all ; There cannot be those numberless offences 'Gainst me that I cannot take peace with: no black envy

Now his son, Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all That ma'ie me happy, at one stroke has taken For ever from the world. I had my trial, And must needs say a noble one ; which makes me A little happier than my wretched father : Yet thus far we are one in fortunes, — both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'dmost; A most unnatural and faithless service ! Then you are weakly made: pluck off a little ; I would not be a young count in your way For more than blushing comes to : if your back Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 'tis too weak Ever to get a boy. Anne. How you do talk ! I swear again I would not be a queen For all the world. Old L. I will, when you are humble; nay, before, Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induc'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy ; and make my challenge You shall not be my judge : for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me, — Which God's dew quench ! Therefore I say again, I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul Refuse you for my judge ; whom, yet once more, I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth. Wol. Madam, you do me I have no spleen against you, nor injustice For you or any : how far I have proceeded, Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, [me Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge That I have blown this coal : I do deny it : The king is present : if it be known to him That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound, And worthily, my falsehood ! yea, as much As you have done my truth. If he know That I am free of your report, he knows I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him It lies to cure me : and the cure is, to [fore Remove these thoughts from you : the which beHis highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking. And to say so no more. Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You 're meek and humble-mouth'd ; You sign your place and calling, in full seeming, With meekness and humility ; but your heart Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride. You have, by fortune and his highness' favours, Goneslightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted Where powers are your retainers; and your words, Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you, You tender more your person's honour than Your high profession spiritual : that again I do refuse you for my judge ; and here, Before you all, appeal unto the pope, To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness, And to be judg'd by him. [She curtsies to the KING, and offers to depart. Cam. The queen Ls obstinate, Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by it : 'tis not well. She 's going away. K. Hen.  And like her true nobility she has Carried herself towards me. WoL Most gracious sir, In humblest manner I require your highness That it shall please you to declare, in hearing Of all these ears, — for where I am robb'd and bound, There must I be unloos'd ; although not there At once and fully satisfied, — whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness ; or Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on 't ? or ever Have to you, — but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, — spake one the least word that might Be to the prejudice of her present state, Or touch of her good person ? K. Hen. My lord cardinal, I do excuse you ; yea, upon mine honour, I free you from't. You are not to be taught That you have many enemies, that know not Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do : by some of these The queen is put in anger. You are excus'd : But will you be more justified ? you ever Have wish'd the sleeping of this business ; never Desir'd it to be stirr'd ; but oft have hinder'd, oft, The passages made toward it : — on my honour, I speak my good lord cardinal to this point, And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't, I will be bold with time and your attention : — Then mark the inducement. Thus it came ; — give heed to't : — My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador ; Who had been hither sent on the debating A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary: I' the progress of this business, Ere a determinate resolution, he, — I mean the bishop, — did require a respite ; Wherein he might the king his lord advertise Whether our daughter were legitimate, Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble The region of my breast ; which forc'd such way That many maz'd considerings did throng, And press'd in with this caution. First, methought I stood not in the smile of heaven ; who had Commanded nature that my lady's womb, If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to 't than The grave does to the dead ; for her male issue Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them : hence 1 took a thought This was a judgment on me ; that my kingdom, Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should not Be gladded in 't by me : then follows that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in By this my issue's fail ; and that gave to me Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together ; that 's to say, I meant to rectify my conscience, — which I then did feel full sick, and yet not well, — By all the reverend fathers of the land, And doctors learn'd : — first, I began in private With you, my Lord of Lincoln ; you remember How under my oppression I did reek When I first mov'd you. Lin. Very well, my liege. K. Hen. I have spoke long : be pleas'd yourself to say How far you satisfied me. Lin. So please your highness, The question did at first so stagger me, — And did entreat your highness to this course Which you are running here. K. Hen. I then mov'd you, My Lord of Canterbury ; and got your leave To make this present summons : — unsolicited I left no reverend person in this court ; But by particular consent proceeded Under your hands and seals : therefore, go on ; For no dislike i' the world against the person Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward •. Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life l And kingly dignity, we are contented To wear our mortal state to come with her, Katharine our queen, before the primest creature That 's paragon'd o' the world. Cam*j'{ ,rni So pleasure your highness, The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness That we adjourn this court till further day: Meanwhile must be an earnest motion Made to the queen to call back her appeal She intends unto his holiness. Orpheus with his lute made trees, And the mountain-tops that freeze, Bow themselves, when he did sing : To his music plants and flowers Ever sprung ; as sun and showers There had made a lasting spring. Enter a Gentleman. Q. Kath. How now ? [cardinals Gent. An 't please your grace, the two great Wait in the presence. Q. Kath. Would they speak with me ? Gent. They will'd me say so, madam. Q. Kath. Pray their graces To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour? I do not like their coming, now I think on 't. They should be good men ; their affairs as righteous : But all hoods make not monks. Entsr WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS. Wo I. Peace to your highness ! Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife ; I would be all, against the worst may happen. What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords ? [withdraw Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to Into your private chamber, we shall give you The full cause of our coming. Q. Kath. Speak it here ; There 's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience, Deserves a corner : would all other women Could speak this with as free a soul as I do ! My lords, I care not, — so much I am happy Above a number, — if my actions Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em, Envy and base opinion set against 'em, I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wife in, Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing. Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritast regina serenissima, — Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin ; I am not such a truant since my coming As not to know the language I have lived in : A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious; Pray, speak in English: here are some will thank you, [sake, — If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' Believe me, she has had much wrong: lord cardinal, The willing'st sin I ever yec committed May be absolv'd in English. Wol. Noble lady, I am sorry my integrity should breed, — And service to his majesty and you, — So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant. We come not by the way of accusation To taint that honour every good tongue blesses, Nor to betray you any way to sorrow, — You have too much, good lady ; but to know How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you ; and to deliver, Like free and honest men, our just opinions, And comforts to your cause. ; .'.:•• Cam. Most honour 'd madam, My Lord of York,— out of his noble nature, Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace, — Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure Both of his truth and him, — which was too far,— Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace, His service and his counsel. Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside. My lords, I thank you both for your good -wills; Ye speak like honest men, — pray God ye prove so! But how to make ye suddenly an answer, In such a point of weight, so near mine honour, — More near my life, I fear, — with my weak wit, And to such men of gravity and learning, In truth, I know not. I was set at work Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business.

"734 KING HENRY VIII. [ACT III. For her sake that I have been, — for I feel The last fit of my greatness, — good your graces, Let me have time and counsel for my cause : Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless 1 Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears : Your hopes and friends are infinite. Q. Kath. In England But little for my profit : can you think, lords, That any Englishman dare give me counsel ? Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure, — Though he be grown so desperate to be honest, — And live a subject ? Nay, forsooth, my friends, They that must weigh out my afflictions, They that my trust must grow to, live not here : They are, as all my other comforts, far hence, In mine own country, lords. Cam. I would your grace Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel. Q. Kath. How, sir? Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection ; He 's loving and most gracious : 'twill be much Both for your honour better and your cause ; For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye You '11 part away disgrac'd. Wol. He tells you rightly. Q. KcUh. Ye tell me what ye wish for both, — my ruin : Is this your Christian counsel ? out upon ye ! Heaven is above all yet ; there sits a Judge That no king can corrupt. Cam. Your rage mistakes us. Q. Kath. The more shame for ye : holy men I thought ye, Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues ; But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye : Mend them, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort ? The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady, — A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd ? I will not wish ye half my miseries ; I have more charity: but say I warn'd ye ; Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye. Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction ; You turn the good we offer into envy. Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing : woe upon ye, me, — And all such false professors ! would you have If you have any justice, any pity, If ye be anything but churchmen's habits, — Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me? Alas ! has banish'd me his bed already, His love too long ago I I am old, my lords, And all the fellowship I hold now with him Is only my obedience. What can happen To me above this wretchedness ? all your studies Make me a curse like this. Cam. Your fears are worse. Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long, — let me speak myself, Since virtue finds no friends,— a wife, a true one? A woman, — I dare say without vain-glory, — Never yet branded with suspicion ? Have I with all my full affections Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven? obey'd him? Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him ? Almost forgot my prayers to content him ? And am I thus rewarded ? 'tis not well, lords. Bring me a constant woman to her husband, One that ne'er dream'd a j oy beyond his pleasure ; And to that woman, when she has done most, Yet will I add an honour, — a great patience. Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at. [guilty, Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so To give up willingly that noble title Your master wed me to : nothing but death Shall e'er divorce my dignities. Wol. Pray, hear me. Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth, Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it ! Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts. What will become of me now, wretched lady ? I am the most unhappy woman living. — Alas, poor wenches, where are now your fortunes ? [To her Women. Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity, No friends, no hope ; no kindred weep for me ; Almost no grave allow'd me : — like the lily, That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd, I '11 hang my head and perish. Wol. If your grace Could but be brought to know our ends are honest, You 'd feel more comfort : why should we, good lady, Upon what cause, wrong you ? alas, our places, The way of our profession is against it : We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em, For goodness' sake, consider what you do ; How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this Carriage. The hearts of princes kiss obedience, So much they love it ; but to stubborn spirits They swell, and grow as terrible as storms. I know you have a gentle, noble temper,

The king loves you ; Beware you lose it not : for us, if you .please To trust us in your business, we are ready To use our utmost studies in your service. Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords : and, pray, forgive me If I have us'd myself unmannerly ; You know I am a woman, lacking wit To make a seemly answer to such persons. Pray, do my service to his majesty : He has my heart yet ; and shall have my prayers While I shall have my life. Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain. Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints, And force them with a constancy, the cardinal Cannot stand under them : if you omit The offer of this time, I cannot promise But that you shall sustain more new disgraces, With these you bear already. Sur. I am joyful To meet the least occasion that may give me Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke, To be reveng'd on him. Suf. Which of the peers Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least Strangely neglected ? when did he regard The stamp of nobleness in any person Out of himself? Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures : What he deserves of you and me I know ; What we can do to him, — though now the time Gives way to us, — I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt Anything on him ; for he hath a witchcraft Over the king in 's tongue. Nor. O, fear him not -, His spell in that is out : the king hath found Matter against him that for ever mars The honey of his language. No; he's settled. Not to come off, in his displeasure. Sur. Sir, I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour. Nor. Believe it, this is true : In the divorce his contrary proceedings Are all unfolded ; wherein he appears As I would wish mine enemy. Sur. How came His practices to light ? Suf. Most strangely. Sur. O, how, how ? Suf. The cardinal's letters to the pope miscarried, [read And came to the eye o' the king : wherein was How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness To stay the judgment o' the divorce ; for if It did take place, I do, quoth he, perceive My king is tangled in affection to A creature of the queen sˆ Lady Anne Bullen. Sur. But will the king Digest this letter of the cardinal's ? The Lord forbid ! Nor. Marry, amen ! Suf. No, no j There be more wasps that buzz about his nose Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius Is stol'n away to Rome ; hath ta'en no leave ; Has left the cause o' the king unhandled ; and Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal, To second all his plot. I do assure you The king cried Ha ! at this.

lords, Saw you the cardinal ? Nor. My lord, we have [tion Stood here observing him : some strange commoIs in his brain : he bites his lip and starts ; Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground, Then lays his finger on his temple ; straight Springs out into fast gait ; then stops again, Strikes his breast hard ; and anon he casts His eye against the moon : in most strange postures We have seen him set himself. K. Hen. It may well be ; There is a mutiny in 's mind. This morning Papers of state he sent me to peruse, As I requir'd : and wot you what I found There, — on my conscience, put unwittingly? Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing, — The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household ; which I find at such proud rate that it out-speaks Possession of a subject. Nor. It 's heaven's will : Some spirit put this paper in the packet To bless your eye withal. K. Hen. If we did think His contemplation were above the earth, And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings : but I am afraid His thinkings are below the moon, not worth His serious considering. \He takes his seat and -whispers LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY. SCENE II.] KING HENRY VIII. 737 You were now running o'er: you have scarce time To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span To keep your earthly audit : sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad To have you therein my companion. mi. Sir, For holy offices I have a time ; a time To think upon the part of business which I bear i' the state ; and nature does require Her times of preservation, which perforce I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal, Must give my tendance to. K. Hen. You have said well. Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together. As I will lend you cause, my doing well With my well saying ! % K. Hen. 'Tis well said again ; And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well : And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you : He said he did ; and with his deed did crown His word upon you. Since I had my office I have kept you next my heart ; have not alone Employ'd you where high profits might come home, But par'd my present havings to bestow My bounties upon you. Wol. What should this mean ? [Aside. Sur. The Lord increase this business ! [Aside to others. K. Hen. Have I not made you The prime man of the state ? I pray you, tell me If what I now pronounce you have found true : And, if you may confess it, say withal If you are bound to us or no. What say you ? Wol. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces, [could Shower'd on me daily, have been more than My studied purposes requite ; which went Beyond all man's endeavours : — my endeavours Have ever come too short of my desires, Yet fill'd with my abilities : mine own ends Have been mine so that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and The profit of the state. For your great graces Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I Can nothing render but allegiant thanks ; My prayers to heaven for you ; my loyalty, Which ever has and ever shall be growing, Till death, that winter, kill it. -^ Hen. Fairly answer'd ; A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated : the honour of it Does pay the act of it ; as, i' the contrary, The foulness is the punishment. I presume That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you, My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour, more On you than any ; so your hand and heart, Your brain, and every function of your power, Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty, As 'twere in love's particular, be more To me, your friend, than any. Wol. I do profess

That for your highness' good I ever labour'd More than mine own ; that am, have, and will be, — [you, Though all the world should crack their duty to And throw it from their soul j though perils did Abound as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appear in forms more horrid, — yet my duty, As doth a rock against the chiding flood, Should the approach of this wild river break, And stand unshaken yours. K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken : Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast, For you have seen him open 't. — Read o'er this ; [Giving him papers* And after, this : and then to breakfast with What appetite you have. [Exit ', frowning upon CARDINAL WOLSEY : the Nobles throng after himt smiling and whispering, Wol. What should this mean ? What sudden anger's this ? how have I reap'd it? He parted frowning from me, as if ruin Leap'd from his eyes : so looks the chafed lion Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him ; Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper; I fear, the story of his anger. — 'Tis so; This paper has undone me : — 'tis the account Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom, And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence, Fit for a fool to fall by ! What cross devil Made me put this main secret in the packet I sent the king ? Is there no way to cure this ? No new device to beat this from his brains ? I know 'twill stir him strongly ; yet I know A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune, Will bring me off again. — What 5s this — To the Pope ? The letter, as I live, with all the business I writ to 's holiness. Nay then, farewell ! I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness ; And from that full meridian of my glory I haste now to my setting : I shall fall Like a bright exhalation in the evening, And no man see me more. 2 A

KING HENRY VIII. [ACT in. Re-enter the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain. Nor, Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you To render up the great seal presently Into our hands ; and to confine yourself To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's, Till you hear further from his highness. mi. Stay,— Where 's your commission, lords ? words cannot carry Authority so weighty. Sttf. Who dare cross 'em, Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly ? Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it,— I mean your malice, — know, officious lords, I dare and must deny it. Now I feel Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, — envy : How eagerly ye follow my disgraces, As if it fed ye ! and how sleek and wanton Ye appear in everything may bring my ruin ! Follow your envious courses, men of malice ; You have Christian warrant for them, and, no doubt, In time will find their fit rewards. That seal, You ask with such a violence, the king, — • Mine and your master, — with his own hand gave me ; — Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours, During my life ; and, to confirm his goodness, Tied it by letters-patents : now, who '11 take it ? Sur. The king, that gave it. Wol. It must be himself then. Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest. Wol. Proud lord, thou liest : Within these forty hours Surrey durst better Have burnt that tongue than said so. Sur. Thy ambition, Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law : The heads of all thy brother cardinals, — With thee and all thy best parts bound together, — Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy ! You sent me deputy for Ireland ; Far from his succour, from the king, from all That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him ; Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity, Absolv'd him with an axe. Wol. This, and all else This talking lord can lay upon my credit, I answer, is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts : how innocent I was From any private malice in his end, His noble jury and foul cause can witness. If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you You have as little honesty as honour, That in the way of loyalty and truth Toward the king, my ever royal master, Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be, And all that love his follies. Sur. By my soul, Your long coat, priest, protects you ; thou shouldst feel [lords, My sword i' the life-blood of thee else. —

My Can ye endure to hear this arrogance ? And from this fellow ? If we live thus tamely, To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, Farewell, nobility; let his grace go forward, And dare us with his cap like larks. . Wol. All goodness Is poison to thy stomach. Sur. Yes, that goodness Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one, Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion ; The goodness of your intercepted packets You writ to the pope against the king: your goodness, [ous. — Since you provoke me, shall be most notoriMy Lord of Norfolk, — as you are truly noble, As you respect the common good, the state Of our despis'd nobility, our issues, Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen, — Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles Collected from his life : — I '11 startle you Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal. Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man, But that I am bound in charity against it ! Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand : But, thus much, they are foul ones. Wol. So much fairer And spotless shall mine innocence arise, When the king knows my truth. Sur. This cannot save you : I thank my memory I yet remember Some of these articles ; and out they shall. Now, if you can blush and cry guilty, cardinal. You '11 show a little honesty. Wol. Speak on, sir ; I dare your worst objections : if I blush, It is to see a nobleman want manners. Sur. I'd rather want those than my head. — Have at you ! First, that, without the king's assent or knowledge, You wrought to be a legate ; by which power You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

SCENE II.] KING HENRY VIII. 739 Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus [king Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the To be your servant. Suf. Then, that, without the knowledge, Either of king or council, when you went Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold To carry into Flanders the great seal. Sur. Item, you sent a large commission To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude, Without the king's will or the state's allowance, A league between his highness and Ferrara. Suf. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin. Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance, [science, By what means got I leave to your own conTo furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways You have for dignities ; to the mere undoing Of all the kingdom. Many more there are, Which, since they are of you, and odious, I will not taint my mouth with. Cham. O my lord, Press not a falling man too far ! 'tis virtue : His faults lie open to the laws ; let them, Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him So little of his great self. Sur. I forgive him. [is, — Suf. Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure Because all those things you have done of late, By your power legatine within this kingdom, Fall into the compass of a prczmunire, — That therefore such a writ be sued against you; To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements, Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be Out of the king's protection : — this is my charge. Nor. And so we '11 leave you to your meditations How to live better. For your stubborn answer About the giving back the great seal to us, The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you. So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal. [Exeunt all but WOLSEY. Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me. Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness ! This is the state of man : to-day he puts forth The tender leaves of hope ; to-morrow blossoms, And bears his blushing honours thick upon him ; The third day comes a frost, a killing frost, And, — when he thinks, good easy man, full surely His greatness is a-ripening, — nips his root, And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd, Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders, This many summers in a sea of glory ; But far beyond my depth : my high-blown pride At length broke under me ; and now has left me, Weary and old with service, to the mercy Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me. Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye : I feel my heart new opened. O, how wretcnea Is that poor man that hangs on prince's favours ! There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to, That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin, More pangs and fears than wars or women have : And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer, Never to hope again. Enter CROMWELL, amazedly. Why, how now, Cromwell ! Crom. I have no power to speak, sir. Wol. What, amaz'd At my misfortunes ? can thy spirit wonder A great man should decline ? Nay, an you weep, I am fallen indeed. Crom. How does your grace ? Wol. Why, well ; Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell, know myself now ; and I feel within me A peace above all earthly dignities, A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me, I humbly thank his grace ; and from these shoulders, These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken A load would sink a navy, — too much honour : O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven ! Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it. [thinks, — Wol. I hope I have : I am able now, meOut of a fortitude of soul I feel, — To endure more miseries and greater far Than my weak -hearted enemies dare offer. What news abroad ? Crom. The heaviest and the worsj: Is your displeasure with the king. Wol. God bless him ! Crom. The next is that Sir Thomas More is chosen Lord Chancellor in your place. Wol. That 's somewhat sudden : But he 's a learned man. May he continue Long in his highness' favour, and do justice, For truth's sake and his conscience ; that his bones, [ings, When he has run his course and sleeps in blessMay have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em ! /740 KING HENRY VIII. [ACT iv. Crotn* That Cramner is return'd with welcome, Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Wol. That 's news indeed. Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne, Whom the king hath in secrecy long married, This day was view'd in open as his queen, Going to chapel ; and the voice is now Only about her coronation. Woli There was the weight that pull'd me down. O Cromwell, The king has gone beyond me : all my glories In that one woman I have lost for ever : No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours, Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell; I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now To be thy lord and master : seek the king ; That sun, I pray, may never set ! I have told him [thee ; What and, how true thou art: he will advance Some little memory of me will stir him, — I know his noble nature, —not to let Thy hopeful service perish too : good Cromwell, Neglect him not ; make use now, and provide For thine own future safety. Crom. O my lord, Must I then leave you? must I needs forego So good, so noble, and so true a master? Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron, With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord. The king shall have my service ; but my prayers For ever and for ever shall be yours. Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear In all my miseries ; but thou hast forc'd me, Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman. Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me, Cromwell ; And, — when I am forgotten, as I shall be, And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention Of me more must be heard of, — say I taught thee; Say Wolsey, — that once trod the ways of glory, And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,— Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in ; A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it. Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition : By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then > The image of his Maker, hope to win by it? Love thyself last : cherish those hearts that hate thee; Corruption wins not more than honesty. Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not: Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's, Thy God's, and truth's ; then, if thou fall'st, O Cromwell, Thou fall'st a blessed martyr ! Serve the king ; And, — pr'ythee, lead me in : There take an inventory of all I have, To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe, And my integrity to heaven, is all [well ! I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, CromHad I but serv'd my God with half the zeal I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age Have left me naked to mine enemies. Crom. Good sir, have patience. Wol. So I have. Farewell The hopes of court 1 my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt. ACT IV. [[6 10 SCENE I. — A Street in Westminster. Enter two Gentlemen, meeting. 1 Gent. You are well met once again. 2 Gent. So are you. 1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold The Lady Anne pass from her coronation? 2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial. 1 Gent. 'Tis very true : but that time offer'd sorrow ; This, general joy. 2 Gent. 'Tis well : the citizens, I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds ; As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward, In celebration of this day with shows, Pageants, and sights of honour. 1 Gent. Never greater, Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir. [tains, 2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that con That paper in your hand? 1 Gent. Yes ; 'tis the list Of those that claim their offices this day, By custom of the coronation. The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims To be high-steward ; next, the Duke of Norfolk, He to be earl marshal : you may read the rest. 2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs, I should have been beholden to your paper. But, I beseech you, what 's become of Katharine, The princess dowager? how goes her business?

SCENE I.] KING HENRY VIII. 741 1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other Learned and reverend fathers of his order, Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which She was often cited by them, but appeared not : And, to be short, for not appearance and The king's late scruple, by the main assent Of all these learned men, she was divorc'd, And the late marriage made of none effect : Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton, Where she remains now sick. 2 Gent. Alas, good lady ! — [Trumpets. The trumpets sound t stand close, the queen is coming. THE ORDER OF THE PROCESSION. A lively flourish of trumpets '. then enter t 1. Two Judges. 2. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him. 3. Choristers singing. [Music. 4. M ayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head a gilt copper crown. 5. Marquis Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demt-coronal of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS. 6; Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as highsteward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS. 7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports ; under it the Queen in her rcbe ; her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side of her, the Bishops of London and Winchester. 8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train. 9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers. A royal train, believe me. — These I know: — Who's that that bears the sceptre? 1 Gent. Marquis Dorset : And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod. 2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be The Duke of Suffolk? 1 Gent. 'Tis the same, — high-steward. 2 Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk? 1 Gent. Yes. 2 Gent. Heaven bless thee ! [Looking on the QUEEN. Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on. — Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel; Our king has all the Indies in his arms, And more and richer, when he strains that lady : I cannot blame his conscience. 1 Gent. They that bear The cloth of honour over her are four barons Of the Cinque-ports. 2 Gent. Those men are happy ; and so are all are near her. I take it, she that carries up the train Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk. 1 Gent. It is ; and all the rest are countesses. 2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed ; And sometimes falling ones. 1 Gent. No more of that. [Exit Procession, with a great flortrish of trumpets. Enter a third Gentleman. God save you, sir ! where have you been broiling? [a finger 3 Gent. Among the crowd i' the abbey ; where Could not be wedg'd in more : I am stifled With the mere rankness of their joy. 2 Gent. You saw The ceremony? 3 Gent. That I did. 1 Gent. How was it? 3 Gent. Well worth the seeing. 2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us. 3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off A distance from her : while her grace sat down To rest awhile, some half an hour or so, In a rich chair of state, opposing freely The beauty of her person to the people. Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman That ever lay by man : which when the people Had the full view of, such a noise arose As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest, As loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks, — Doublets, I think, — flew up ; and had their faces Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy I never saw before. Great-bellied women, That had not half a week to go, like rams In the old time of war, would shake the press, And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living Could say, This is my wife, there ; all were woven So strangely in one piece. 2 Gent. But what follow'd? 3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest paces [saintlike, Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and, Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly. Then rose again, and bow'd her to the people : When by the Archbishop of Canterbury She had all the royal makings of a queen ; As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown, The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

742 KING HENRY VIII. [ACT iv. Laid nobly on her : which perform'd, the choir, With all the choicest music of the kingdom, Together sung Te Deum. So she parted, And with the same full state pac'd back again To York Place, where the feast is held. 1 Gent. Sir, You must no more call it York Place, that's past: For, since the cardinal fell, that title 's lost : 'Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall. 3 Gent. I know it ; But 'tis so lately alter'd that the old name Is fresh about me. 2 Gent. What two reverend bishops Were those that went on each side of the queen? 3 Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner ; the one of Winchester, — Newly preferr'd from the king's secretary, — The other, London. 2 Gent. He of Winchester Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's, The virtuous Cranmer. 3 Gent. All the land knows that :: However, yet there is no great breach ; when it comes, [him. Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from 2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you? 3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell ; A man in much esteem with the king, and truly A worthy friend. — The king Has made him master o' the jewel-house, And one, already, of the privy council. 2 Gent. He will deserve more. ' 3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt. — Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests : Something I can command. As I walk thither I '11 tell ye more. Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — Kimbolton. Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE. Grif. How does your grace ? Kath. O Griffith, sick to death ! My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth, Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair : — So, — now, methinks, I feel a little ease, [me, Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou ledd'st That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey, Was dead? Grif. Yes, madam ; but I think your grace, Out of the pain you suffer 'd, gave no ear to 't. Kath. Pr'ythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died : If well, he stepp'd before me, happily, For my example. Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam : For after the stout Earl Northumberland Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,— As a man sorely tainted, — to his answer, He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill He could not sit his mule. Kath. Alas, poor man ! Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester, Lodg'd in the abbey ; where the reverend abbot, With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him ; To whom he gave these words, — O, father abbot, An old man, broken with the storms of state, Is come to lay his weary bones among ye ; Give him a little earth for charity ! So went to bed ; where eagerly his sickness Pursu'd him still : and three nights after this, About the hour of eight, — which he himself Foretold should be his last, — full of repentance, Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows, He gave his honours to the world again, His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace. Kath. So may he rest ; his faults lie gently on him ! [him, Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak And yet with charity. He was a man Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes ; one that, by suggestion, Tied all the kingdom : simony was fair play ; His own opinion was his law : i' the presence He would say untruths ; and be ever double Both in his words and meaning : he was never, But where he meant to ruin, pitiful : His promises were, as he then was, mighty ; But his performance, as he is now, nothing : Of his own body he was ill, and gave The clergy ill example. Grif. Noble madam, Men's evil manners live in brass ; their virtues We write in water. May it please your highness To hear me speak his good now ! Kath. Yes, good Griffith ; I were malicious else. Grif. This cardinal, Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle. He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one ; Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading : Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not ; But to those men that sought him sweet as summer. And though he were unsatisfied in getting, —

SCENE II.] KING HENRY VIII. 743 Which was a sin, — yet in bestowing, madam, He was most princely : ever witness for him Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you, Ipswich and Oxford ! one of which fell with him, Unwilling to outlive the good that did it ; The other, though unfinished, yet so famous, So excellent in art, and still so rising, That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue. His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him ; For then, and not till then, he felt himself, And found the blessedness of being little : And, to add greater honours to his age Than man could give him, he died fearing God. Kath. After my death I wish no other herald, No other speaker of my living actions, To keep mine honour from corruption, But such an honest chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me, With thy religious truth and modesty, Now in his ashes honour : peace be with him ! — Patience, be near me still ; and set me lower : I have not long to trouble thee. — Good Griffith, Cause the musicians play me that sad note I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating On that celestial harmony I go to. _Sad and solemn music. Grif. She is asleep; good wench, let's sit down quiet, For fear we wake her : — softly, gentle Patience. THE VISION. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages clad in white robes, -wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden •vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head ; at which the other four make reverent courtesies; then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in tJteir changes, and holding tJie garland over her head : which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise ebserve the same order: at which, — as it were by inspiration, — she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven : and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues. Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye ? Are ye all gone ? And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye? Grif. Madam, we are here. Kath. It is not you I call for : Saw ye none enter since I slept ? Grif. None, madam. Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop Invite me to a banquet ; whose bright faces Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun ? They promis'd me eternal happiness ; And brought me garlands, Griffith, whi which I feel I am not worthy yet to wear : I shall, Assuredly. [dreams Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good Possess your fancy. Kath. Bid the music leave, They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases. Pat. Do you note How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden ? How long her face is drawn? how pale she looks, And of an earthy cold ? Mark you her eyes ! Grif. She is going, wench : pray, pray. Pat. Heaven comfort her ! Enter a Messenger. Mess. An 't like your grace, — Kath. You are a saucy fellow : Deserve we no more reverence ? Grif. You are to blame, Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness, To use so rude behaviour : go to, kneel. Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness* pardon ; [staying My haste made me unmannerly. There is A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you. Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith : but this fellow Let me ne'er see again. [Exeunt GRIFFITH and Messenger. Re-enter GRIFFITH, with CAPUCIUS. If my sight fail not, You should be lord ambassador from the emperor, My royal nephew, and your name Capucius. Cap. Madam, the same, — your servant. Kath. O, my Lord, The times and titles now are alter'd strangely With me since first you knew me. But, I pray you, What is your pleasure with me ? Cap. Noble lady, First, mine own service to your grace ; the next, The king's request that I would visit you ; Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me Sends you his princely commendations, And heartily entreats you take good comfort. Kath. O, my good lord, that comfort comes too late ; 'Tis like a pardon after execution : That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me ; But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers. How does his highness ? Cap. Madam, in good health. Kath. So may he ever do ! and ever flourish, When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor

744 KING HENRY VIII. [ACT v. Banish'd the kingdom ! — - Patience, is that letter I caus'd you write yet sent away ? Pat. No, madam. [Giving it to KATHARINE. Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver This to my lord the king. Cap. Most willing, madam. Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness [daughter, — The model of our chaste loves, his young The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!— Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding ; She is young, and of a noble modest nature, — I hope she will deserve well ; — and a little To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him, [petition Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor Is, that his noble grace would have some pity Upon my wretched women, that so long Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully : Of which there is not one, I dare avow, — And now I should not lie, — but will deserve, For virtue and true beauty of the soul, For honesty and decent carriage, A right good husband, let him be a noble ; And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them. The last is, for my men, — they are the poorest, But poverty could never draw 'em from me, — That they may have their wages duly paid 'em, And something over to remember me by : If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life And able means, we had not parted thus. These are the whole contents : — and, good my lord, By that you love the dearest in this world, As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king To do me this last right. Cap. By heaven, I will, Or let me lose the fashion of a man ! [me Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember In all humility unto his highness : Say his long trouble now is passing [him, Out of this world ; tell him, in death I bless'd For so I will. — Mine eyes grow dim. — Farewell, My lord. — Griffith, farewell. — Nay, Patience, You must not leave me yet : I must to bed ; Call in more women. — When I am dead, good wench, Let me be us'd with honour : strew me over With maiden flowers, that all the world may know I was a chaste wife to my grave : embalm me, Then lay me forth : although unqueen'd, yet like A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me. I can no more. [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE. ACT V. :,li/:i -MK •:.-.- , .•>„' SCENE I. — LONDON. A Gallery in the Palace. Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him. Gar. It 's one o'clock, boy, is 't not ? Boy. It has struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities, Not for delights ; times to repair our nature With comforting repose, and not for us To waste these times. Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas ! Whither so late ? Lov. Came you from the king, my Lord? Gar. I did, Sir Thomas ; and left him at primero With the Duke of Suffolk. Lov. I must to him too, Before he go to bed, I'll take my leave. Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What 's the matter ? It seems you are in haste : an if there be No great offence belongs to 't, give your friend Some touch of your late business : affairs that walk, — As they say spirits do, — at midnight, have In them a wilder nature than the business That seeks despatch by day. Lov. My lord, I love you ; And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen 's in labour, They say in great extremity ; and fear'd She '11 with the labour end. Gar. The fruit she goes with I pray for heartily, that it may find [Thomas, Good time, and live : but for the stock, Sir I wish it grubb'd up now. Lov. Methinks I could Cry thee amen ; and yet my conscience says She 's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes. Gar. But, sir, sir, — Hear me, Sir Thomas: you are a gentleman Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious; And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well, — 'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me, — Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she, Sleep in their graves.

SCENE; i.] KING HENRY VIII. 745 Lou* Now, sir, you speak of two The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell, — [master Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made O' the rolls, and the king's secretary ; further, sir, Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments, With which the time will load him. The archbishop [speak Is the king's hand and tongue ; and who dare One syllable against him ? Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas, There are that dare ; and I myself have ventur'd To speak my mind of him : and indeed this day, Sir, — I may tell it you, — I think I have Incens'd the lords o' the council, that he is, — For so I know he is, they know he is, — A most arch heretic, a pestilence [moved, That does infect the land : with which they Have broken with the king ; who hath so far Given ear to our complaint, — of his great grace And princely care; foreseeing those fell mischiefs Our reasons laid before him, — hath commanded To-morrow morning to the council-board He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas, And we must root him out. From your affairs I hinder you too long : good night, Sir Thomas. Lov. Many good nights, my lord : I rest your servant. [Exeunt GARDINER and Page. As LOVELL is going out, enter the KING and the DUKE OF SUFFOLK. K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night; My mind 's not on 't ; you are too hard for me. Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before. K. Hen. But little, Charles ; Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. — Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news? Lov. I could not personally deliver to her What you commanded me, but by her woman I sent your message ; who return d her thanks In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness Most heartily to pray for her. K. Hen. What say'st thou, ha? To pray for her ? what, is she crying out ? Lov. So said her woman : and that her sufferance made Almost each pang a death. K. Hen. Alas, good lady ! Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and With gentle travail, to the gladding of Your highness with an heir ! K. Hen. JTis midnight, Charles ; Pr'ythee, to bed ; and in thy prayers remember The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone ; For I must think of that which company Will not be friendly to. Suf. I wish your highness A quiet night ; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers. K. Hen. Charles, good-night. [Exit SUFFOLK. Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY. Well, sir, what follows ?

[bishop, Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archAs you commanded me. K. Hen. Ha ! Canterbury? Den. Ay, my good lord. K. Hen. 'Tistrue: where is he, Denny? Den. He attends your highness' pleasure. K. Hen. Bring him to us. [Exit DENNY. Lov. This is about that which the bishop spake: I am happily come hither. [Aside. Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER. K. Hen. Avoid the gallery. [LOVELL seems to stay. Ha ! I have said. Be gone. What ! [Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY. Cran. I am fearful : — wherefore frowns he thus? 'Tis his aspect of terror. All 's not well. [Aside. K. Hen. How now, my lord ? you do desire to know Wherefore I sent for you. Cran. It is my duty To attend your highness' pleasure. K. Hen. Pray you, arise, My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury. Come, you and I must walk a turn together ; I have news to tell you : come, come, give me your hand. Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak, And am right sorry to repeat what follows : I have, and most unwillingly, of late Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you ; which, being consider 'd, Have movM us and our council that you shall This morning come before us ; where, I know, You cannot with such freedom purge yourself But that, till further trial in those charges Which will require your answer, you must take Your patience to you, and be well contented To make your house our Tower: you a brother of us, It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness Would come against you.

 Cran. I humbly thank your highness ; And am right glad to catch this good occasion Most throughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff And corn shall fly asunder : for I know There's none stands under more calumnious tongues Than I myself, poor man. K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury : Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted In us, thy friend : give me thy hand, stand up : Pr'ythee, let 's walk. Now, by my holy-dame, What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd You would have given me your petition that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together Yourself and your accusers ; and to have heard you, Without indurance, further. Cran. Most dread liege, The good I stand on is my truth and honesty : If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies, [not, Will triumph o'er my person ; which I weigh Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing What can be said against me. K. Hen. Know you not How your state stands i'the world, with the whole world ? Your enemies are many, and not small j their practices Must bear the same proportion ; and not ever The justice and the truth o' the question carries The due o' the verdict with it : at what ease Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt To swear against you ? such things have been done. You are potently oppos'd ; and with a malice Of as great size. Ween you of better luck, I mean in perjur'd witness, than your Master, Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd Upon this naughty earth ? Go to, go to ; You take a precipice for no leap of danger, And woo your own destruction. Cran. God and your majesty Protect mine innocence, or I fall into The trap is laid for me ! K. Hen. Be of good cheer ; They shall no more prevail than we give way to. Keep comfort to you ; and this morning see You do appear before them: if they shall chance, In charging you with matters, to commit you, The best persuasions to the contrary Fail not to use, and with what vehemency The occasion shall instruct you : if entreaties Will render you no remedy, this ring Deliver them, and your appeal to us There make before them. — Look, the good mam weeps ! He 's honest, on mine honour. God's bless'd mother ! I swear he is true-hearted ; and a soul None better in my kingdom. — Get you gone, And do as I have bid you. [Exit CRANMER.] — He has strangled His language in his tears. Enter an Old Lady. Gent. [Within.~\ Come back: what mean you? Old L. I '11 not come back ; the tidings that I bring [angels Will make my boldness manners. — Now, good Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person Under their blessed wings ! K. Hen. Now, by thy looks I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd ? Say ay ; and of a boy. Old L. Ay, ay, my And of a lovely boy : the God of Heaven Ay, ay, my liege ; Both now and ever bless her ! — 'tis a girl, — Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger ; 'tis as like you As cherry is to cherry. K. Hen. Lovell,— Re-enter LOVELL. IrtI Lov. Sir ? K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I '11 to the queen [Exit. Old L. An hundred marks ! By this light, I '11 ha' more. An ordinary groom is for such payment. I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this, the girl was like to him ? I will have more, or else unsay 't ; and now, While it is hot, I '11 put it to the issue. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — Lobby before the Council Chamber. Enter CRANMER; Servants, Door-keeper, &c., attending. Cran. I hope I am not too late ; and yet the gentleman That was sent to me from the council pray'd me To make great haste. All fast? what means this?— Ho! Who waits there ? — Sure, you know me ? D. Keep. Yes, my lord ; But yet I cannot help you. Cran. Why? D. Keep. Y Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for. Enter DOCTOR BUTTS. Cran. So.

SCENE II.] KING HENRY VIII. 747 Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad I came this way so happily : the king Shall understand it presently. [Exit. Cran. [Aside.'] 'Tis Butts, The King's physician : as he pass'd along, How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me ! Pray, heaven, he sound not my disgrace ! For certain, This is of purpose laid by some that hate me, — God turn their hearts ! I never sought their malice, — [make me To quench mine honour : they would shame to Wait else at door, a fellow-counseilor, Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasuies Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience. The KING awaTBuTTS appear at a window above. Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight,— K. Hen. What's that, Butts? Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day. K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it ? Butts. There my lord : The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury ; Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants, Pages, and footboys. K. Hen. Ha ! 'tis he indeed : Is this the honour they do one another ? 'Tis well there's one above them yet. I had thought They had parted so much honesty among 'em, — At least good manners, — as not thus to suffer A man of his place, and so near our favour, To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures, And at the door too, like a post with packets. By holy Mary, Butts, there s knavery : Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close ; We shall hear more anon. \Exeunt. The Cotmcil Chamber. Enter the Lord Chancellor, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the DUKE OF NORFOLK, EARL OF SURREY, Lord Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROMWELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand ; a seat being left void above him, as for the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at the lower end, as Secretary. Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary : Why are we met in council ? Crom. Please your honours, The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury. Gar. Has he had knowledge of it ? Crom. Yes. Nor. Who waits there ? D. Keep. Without, my noble lords? Gar. Yes. D. Keep. My lord archbishop ; And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures. Chan. Let him come in. D. Keep. Your grace may enter now. [CRAN. approaches the Council-table. Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry To sit here at this present, and behold

That chair stand empty : but we all are men, In our own natures frail, and capable Of our flesh ; few are angels : out of which frailty [teach us, And want of wisdom, you, that best should Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little, Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains, — For so we are inform'd, — with new opinions, Divers and dangerous ; which are heresies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious. Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, My noble lords ; for those that tame wild horses Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle, But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur 'em, Till they obey the manage. If we suffer, — Out of our easiness, and childish pity To one man's honour, — this contagious sickness, Farewell all physic : and what follows then ? Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the whole state : as, of late days, our neighbours, The upper Germany, can dearly witness, Yet freshly pitied in our memories. [gress Crcn. My good lords, hitherto in all the proBoth of my life and office, I have labour'd, And with no little study, that my teaching And the strong course of my authority Might go one way, and safely ; and the end Was ever to do well : nor is there living, — I speak it with a single heart, my lords, — A man that more detests, more stirs against, Both in his private conscience and his place, Defacers of a public peace, than I do. Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart With less allegiance in it ! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships

 That, in this case of justice, my accusers, Be what they will, may stand forth face to face, And freely urge against me. Suf. Nay, my lord, That cannot be : you are a counsellor, And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you. Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment, [pleasure, We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' And our consent, for better trial of you, From hence you be committed to the Tower ; Where, being but a private man again, You shall know many dare accuse you boldly, More than, I fear, you are provided for. Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I thank you ; [pass You are always my good friend ; if your will I shall both find your lordship judge and juror, You are so merciful : I see your end, — 'Tis my undoing : love and meekness, lord, Become a churchman better than ambition : Win straying souls with modesty again, Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience, I make as little doubt as you do conscience In doing daily wrongs. I could say more, But reverence to your calling makes me modest. Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary. That 's the plain truth : your painted gloss discovers, [ness. To men that understand you, words and weakCrom. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little, By your good favour, too sharp ; men so noble, However faulty, yet should find respect For what they have been : 'tis a cruelty To load a falling man. Gar. Good master secretary, I cry your honour mercy ; you may, worst Of all this table, say so. Crom. Why, my lord? Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer Of this new sect ? ye are not sound. Crom. Not sound ? Gar. Not sound, I say. Crom. Would you were half so honest ! Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears. Gar. I shall remember this bold language. Crom. Do. Remember your bold life too. Chan. This is too much ; Forbear, for shame, my lords. Gar. I have done. Crom. And I. Chan. Then thus for you, my lord : it stands agreed, I take it, by all voices, that forthwith You be conveyed to the Tower a prisoner ; There to remain till the king's further pleasure Be known unto us : — are you all agreed, lords ? All. We are. Cran. Is there no other way of mercy, But I must needs to the Tower, my lords ? Gar. What other Would you expect ? You are strangely troublesome.— Let some o' the guard be ready there. Enter Guard. Cran. For me ? Must I go like a traitor thither ? Gar.

Receive him, And see him safe i' the Tower. Cran. Stay, good my lords, I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords j By virtue of that ring I take my cause Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it To a most noble judge, the king my master. Cham. This is the king's ring. Sur. 'Tis no counterfeit. Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven : I told ye all, When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling, 'T would fall upon ourselves. Nor. Do you think, my lords, The king will suffer but the little finger Of this man to be vex'd ? Chan. 'Tis now too certain : How much more is his life in value with him ? Would I were fairly out on 't ! Crom. My mind gave me, In seeking tales and informations Against this man, — whose honesty the devil And his disciples only envy at, — Ye blew the fire that burns ye : now have at ye. Enter the KING frowning on them ; he takes his seat. Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince ; Not only good and wise, but most religious ; One that, in all obedience, makes the church The chief aim of his honour ; and, to strengthen That holy duty, out of dear respect, His royal self in judgment comes to hear The cause betwixt her and this great offender. K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations, Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not To hear such flattery now, and in my presence ; They are too thin and bare to hide offences. To me you cannot reach : you play the spaniel, And think with wagging of your tongue to win me;

SCENE II.] KING HENRY VIII. 749 But whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I am sure Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody. — Good man [to CRANMER], sit down. Now let me see the proudest, He that dares most, but wag his finger at thee : By all that 's holy, he had better starve Than but once think this place becomes thee not. Sur. May it please your grace, — K, Hen. No, sir, it does not please me. I had thought I had had men of some understanding And wisdom of my council ; but I find none. Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, This good man, — few of you deserve that title, — This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy At chamber door? and one as great as you are? Why, what a shame was this ! Did my commission Bid ye so far forget yourselves ? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him, Not as a groom : there 's some of ye, I see, More out of malice than integrity, Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean ; Which ye shall never have while I live. Chan. Thus far, My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd Concerning his imprisonment was rather, — If there be faith in men, — meant for his trial, And fair purgation to the world, than malice, — I 'm sure in me. K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him; Take him, and use him well, he 's worthy of it. I will say thus much for him, — if a prince May be beholding to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him. Make me no more ado, but all embrace him : Be friends, for shame, my lords ! — My Lord of Canterbury, I have a suit which you must not deny me ; That is, afair young maid that yet wants baptism, You must be godfather, and answer for her. Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory In such an honour : how may I deserve it, That am a poor and humble subject to you ? K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you 'd spare your spoons : you shall have Two noble partners with you : the old Duchess of Norfolk [you ? And Lady Marquis Dorset : will these please Oncemore,my Lord of Winchester, I charge you, Embrace and love this man. Gar. With a true heart And brother-love I do it. Cran. And let heaven Witness how dear I hold this confirmation. K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart : The common voice, I see, is verified Of thee, which says thus,- — Do my Lord of Canterbury A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever. — Come, lords, we trifle time away ; I long To have

this young one made a Christian. As I have made ye one, lords, one remain ; So I grow stronger, you more honour gain. [Exeunt. SCENE III.— The Palace Yard. Noise and tumult "within. Enter Porter and his Man. Port. You '11 leave your noise anon, ye rascals: do you take the court for Paris garden? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping. [Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder. Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue ! is this a place to roar in ? — Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones : these are but switches to them. — I '11 scratch your heads : you must be seeing christenings? do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals ? Man. Pray, sir, be patient : 'tis as much impossible, — • [cannons, — Unless we sweep them from the door with To scatter 'em as 'tis to make 'em sleep On May-day morning ; which will never be : We may as well push against Paul's as stir 'em. Port. How got they in, and be hang'd ? Man. Alas, I know not ; how gets the tide in? As much as one sound cudgel of four foot, — You see the poor remainder, — could distribute, I made no spare, sir. Port. You did nothing, sir. Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand, [any To mow 'em down before me : but if I spar'd That had a head to hit, either young or old, He or she, cuckold or cuckold -maker, Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again ; And that I would not for a cow, God save her! [Within.] Do you hear, master porter? Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. — Keep the door close, sirrah. Man. What would you have me do ? Port. What should you do, but knock them down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us ? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door I On my Christian conscience,

750 KING HENRY VIII. [ACT V.' this one christening will beget a thousand : here will be father, godfather, and all together. Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in 's nose ; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance : that fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me ; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out Clubs! when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on ; I made good my place : at length they came to the broomstaff to me ; I defied them still : when suddenly a file of boys behind them, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let them win the work : the devil was amongst them, I think, surely. Port. These are the youths that thunder at a play-house and fight for bitten apples ; that, no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of them in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days ; besides the running banquet of two beadles that is to come. Enter the Lord Chamberlain. Cham. Mercy o'me, what a multitude are here ! [coming, They grow still too ; from all parts they are As if we kept a fair here ! Where are these porters, These lazy knaves? — Ye have made a fine hand, fellows. There 's a trim rabble let in : are all these Your faithful friends o' the suburbs ? We shall have [ladies, Great store of room, no doubt, left for the When they pass back from the christening. Port. An ;t please your honour, We are but men ; and what so many may do, Not being torn a pieces, we have done : An army cannot rule 'em. Cham. As I live, If the king blame me for 't, I '11 lay ye all By the heels, and suddenly ; and on your heads Clap round fines for neglect : you 're lazy knaves; And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when Ye should do service. Hark ! the trumpets sound ; They are come already from the christening : Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly ; or I '11 find A Marshalsea shall hold you play these two months. Port. Make way there for the princess. Man. You great fellow, Stand close up, or 1 :11 make your head ache. Port. You i' the camlet, get up o' the rail ; I '11 pick you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt. SCENE IV.— The Palace. Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, DUKE OF NORFOLK, with his marshal's staff, DUKE OF SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening gifts ; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, tinder which the DUCHESS OF NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle,

SCENE IV.] KING HENRY VIII. 751 Though in her cradle, yet now promises Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings, Which time shall bring to ripeness : she shall be, — But few now living can behold that goodness, — A pattern to all princes living with her, And all that shall succeed : Saba was never More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue Than this pure soul shall be : all princely graces, That mould up such a mighty piece as this is, With all the virtues that attend the good, Shall still be doubled on her : truth shall nurse her, Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her : She shall be lov'd and fear'd : her own shall bless her ; Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, And hang their heads with sorrow : good grows with her : In her days every man shall eat in safety, Under his own vine, what he plants ; and sing The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours : God shall be truly known ; and those about her From her shall read the perfect ways of honour, And by those claim their greatness, not by blood. Nor shall this peace sleep with her : but as when The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix, Her ashes new create another heir, As great in admiration as herself; So shall she leave her blessedness to one, — When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness, — Who from the sacred ashes of her honour Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was, And so stand fix'd : peace, plenty, love, truth, terror, That were the servants to this chosen infant, Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him : Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine, His honour and the greatness of his name Shall be, and make new nations : he shall flourish, And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches To all the plains about him : — our children's children Shall see this and bless Heaven. K. Hen. Thou speak'st wonders. Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, An aged princess ; many days shall see her, And yet no day without a deed to crown it. Would I had known no more ! but she must die, She must, the saints must have her, — yet a virgin ; A most unspotted lily shall she pass To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her. K. Hen. O lord archbishop, Thou hast made me now a man ; never, before This happy child, did I get anything : This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me That when I am in heaven I shall desire To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.— I thank ye all. — To you, my good lord mayor, And you, good brethren, I am much beholding; I have received much honour by your presence, And ye shall find me thankful.— Lead the way, lords :— [ye, Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank She will be sick else. This day, no man think Has business at his house ; for all shall stay : This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt. EPILOGUE. 'Tis ten to one this play can never please All that are here : some come to take their ease, And sleep an act or two ; but those, we fear, We have frightened with our trumpets ; so, 'tis clear, They'll say 'tis naught : others to hear the city Abus'd extremely, and to cry, — T&at's witty! Which we have not done neither : that, I fear, All the expected good we 're like to hear For this play at this time, is only in The merciful construction of good women ; For such a one we show'd 'em : if they smile, And say 'twill do, I know, within awhile All the best men are ours ; for 'tis ill hap If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

Servant to PARIS. Servant to DIOMEDES. HELEN, Wife to MENELAUS. ANDROMACHE, Wife to HECTOR. CASSANDRA, Daughter to PRIAM, a Prophetess. CRESSIDA, Daughter to CALCHAS. Trojan and Greek Soldiers, and Attendants. SCENE, — TROY, and the Grecian Camp before it. PROLOGUE. In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd, Have to the port of Athens sent their ships, Fraught with the ministers and instruments Of cruel war : sixty and nine, that wore Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay Put forth toward Phrygia : and their vow is made To ransack Troy ; within whose strong immures The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen, With wanton Paris sleeps ; and that 's the quarrel. To Tenedos they come ; And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge Their warlike fraughtage : now on Dardan plains The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch eir brave pavilions : Priam's six-gated city, rdan, and Tymbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien, And Antenorides, with massy staples And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts, Sperr up the sons of Troy. Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits, On one and other side, Trojan and Greek, Sets all on hazard : — and hither am I come A prologue arm'd, — but not in confidence Of author's pen or actor's voice ; but suited In like conditions as our argument, — To tell you, fair beholders, that our play Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils, Beginning in the middle ; starting thence away To what may be digested in a play. Like, or find fault ; do as your pleasures are ; Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war. ACT I. SCENE I. — TROY. Before PRIAM'S Palace. Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS. Tro. Call here my varlet ; I '11 unarm again : Why should I war without the walls of Troy, That find such cruel battle here within ? Each Trojan

that is master of his heart, Let him to field ; Troilus, alas ! hath none. Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended ? Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength, [valiant ; Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness But I am weaker than a woman's tear, Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance, Less valiant than the virgin in the night, And skilless as unpractis'd infancy. Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this :

SCENE L] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 753 for my part, I '11 not meddle nor make no further. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding. Tro. Have I not tarried? Pan. Ay, the grinding ; but you must tarry the bolting. Tro. Have I not tarried ? Pan. Ay, the bolting ; but you must tarry the leavening. Tro. Still have I tarried. Pan. Ay, to the leavening ; but here 's yet in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking ; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips. [be, Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do. At Priam's royal table do I sit ; And when fair Cressid conies into my thoughts, — So, traitor! — when she comes! — When is she thence ? Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else. Tro. I was about to tell thee, — when my heart, As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain ; Lest Hector or my father should perceive me, I have, — as when the sun doth light a storm, — Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile : But sorrow that is couch'd in seeming gladness Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness. Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, — well, go to, — there were no more comparison between the women, — but, for my part, she is my kinswoman ; I would not, as they term it, praise her, — but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit ; but, — Tro. O Pandarus ! I tell thee, Pandarus,— When I do tell thee there my hopes lie drown'd, Reply not in how many fathoms deep They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad In Cressid's love : thou answer'st, she is fair ; Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart [voice ; Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her Handiest in thy discourse, O, that her hand, In whose comparison all whites are ink, Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense Hard as the palm of ploughman ! — This thou tell'st me, As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her ; But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, [me Thou la/st in every gash that love hath given jThe knife that made it. S .Pan. I speak no more than truth. Tro. Thou dost not speak so much. Pan. Faith, I '11 not meddle in 't. Let her be as she is : if she be fair, 'tis the better for her ; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands. Tro. Good Pandarus, — how now, Pandarus ! Pan. I have had my labour for my travail ; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you : gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour. Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus ? what, with me ? Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore she 's not so fair as Helen : an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I ? I care not an she were a blackamoor ; 'tis all one to me. Tro. Say I, she is not fair ? Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She 's a fool to stay behind her father ; let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her : for my part, I Ml meddle nor make no more in the matter. Tro. Pandarus, — Pan. Not I. Tro. Sweet Pandarus, — Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me : I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. [Exit. An alarum. Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours ! peace, rude sounds ! Fools on both sides ! Helen must needs be fair, When with your blood you daily paint her thus. I cannot fight upon this argument ; It is too starv'd a subject for my sword. But Pandarus, — O gods, how do you plague mel I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar ; And he 's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo As she is stubborn - chaste against all suit. Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love, What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we ? Her bed is India ; there she lies, a pearl : Between our Ilium and where she resides Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood ; Ourself the merchant ; and this sailing Pandar Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark. Alarum. Enter /ENEAS. &ne. How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield? [sorts, Tro. Because not there : this woman's answer For womanish it is to be from thence. What news, /Eneas, from the field to-day ? s£ne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt, Tro. By whom, ^!neas ? Troilus, by Menelaus.

754 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA [ACT i. Tro. Let Paris bleed : 'tis but a scar to scorn ; Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. {Alarum. ˆne. Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day ! Tro. Better at home, if would I might were may. — [thither ? But to the sport abroad ; — are you bound s£ne. In all swift haste. Tro. Come, go we, then, together. {Exeunt. SCENE II.— TROY. A Street. Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER. Cres. Who were those went by ? Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen. Cres. And whither go they ? Alex. Up to the eastern tower, Whose height commands as subject all the vale, To see the battle. Hector, whose patience Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd : He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer ; And, like as there were husbandry in war, Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he ; where every flower Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw In Hector's wrath. Cres. What was his cause of anger ? Alex. The noise goes, this : there is among the Greeks A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector ; They call him Ajax. Cres. Good ; and what of him ? Alex. They say he is a very man per se, And stands alone. Cres. So do all men, — unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs. Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions : he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant : a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion : there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of ; nor any man an attaint, but he carries some stain of it : he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair : he hath the joints of everything ; but everything so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use ; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight. Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry ? Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down ; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking. Cres. Who comes here ? Akx. Madam, your uncle Pandarus. Enter PANDARUS. Cres. Hector 's a gallant man. Alex. As may be in the world, lady. Pan. What 's that ? what 's that ? Cres. Good-morrow, uncle Pandarus. Pan. Good-morrow, cousin Cressid: what do you talk of? — Good-morrow, Alexander. — How do you, cousin ? When were you at Ilium ? Cres. This morning, uncle. Pan. What were you talking of when I came ? Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilium ? Helen was not up, was she ? Cres. Hector was gone ; but Helen was not up. Pan. E'en so : Hector was stirring early. Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger. Pan. Was he angry ? Cres. So he says here. Pan. True, he was so ; I know the cause too ; he '11 lay about him to-day, I can tell them that : and there is Troilus will not come far behind him ; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too. Cres. What, is he angry too ? Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two. Cres. O Jupiter ! there 's no comparison. Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him ? Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before, and knew him. Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus. Cres. Then you say as I say ; for I am sure he is not Hector. Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees. Cres. 'Tis just to each of them ; he is himself. Pan. Himself ! Alas, poor Troilus ! I would he were, — Cres. So he is. Pan. Condition, I had gone barefoot to India. Cres. He is not Hector. Pan. Himself ! no, he 's not himself,— would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must friend or end : well, Troilus, well, — I would my heart were in her body ! — No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus. Cres. Excuse me. Pan. He is elder. Cres. Pardon me, pardon me. Pan. The other 's not come to 't ; you shall tell me another tale when the other 's come to 't. Hector shall not have his wit this year, — Cres. He shall not need it if he have his own. Pan. Nor his qualities, —

SCEXI. ii.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 755 Cres. No matter. Pan. Nor his beauty. Cres. Twould not become him,— his own 's better. Pan. You have no judgment, niece : Helen herself swore the other day that Troilus, for a brown favour, — for so 'tis, I must confess, — not brown neither, — Cres. No, but brown. Pan. Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown. Cres. To say the truth, true and not true. Pan. She praised his complexion above Paris. Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough. Pan. So he has. Cres. Then Troilus should have too much : 'if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his ; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose. Pan. I swear to you I think Helen loves him better than Paris. Cres. Then she 's a merry Greek indeed. Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came tohim the other day into the compassed window, — and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin, — Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total. Pan. Why, he is very young : and yet will he, within three pounds, lift as much as his brother Hector. Cres. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter? Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him, — she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin, — Cres. Juno have mercy ! how came it cloven? Pan. Why, you know, 'tis dimpled : I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia. Cres. O, he smiles valiantly. Pan. Does he not ? Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn. Pan. Why, go to, then : — but to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus, — Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof if you '11 prove it so. Pan. Troilus ! why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg. Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell. Pan. I cannot choose but laugh to think how she tickled his chin ; — indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess, — Cres. Without the rack. Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin. Cres. Alas, poor chin ! many a wart is richer. Pan. But there was such laughing ! — Queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er, — Cres. With millstones. Pan. And Cassandra laughed, — Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes. — Did her eyes run o'er too ? Pan. And Hector laughed. Cres.

At what was all this laughing ? Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin. Cres. An 't had been a green hair I should have laughed too. Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer. Cres. What was his answer ? Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white. Cres. This is her question. Pan. That 's true ; make no question of that. One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white : that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons.— Jupiter ! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? — The forked one, quoth he ; pluck it out and give it him. But there was such laughing ! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed; and all the rest so laughed that it passed. Cres. So let it now ; for it has been a great while going by. Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday ; think on 't. Cres. So I do. Pan. I '11 be sworn 'tis true ; he will weep you, an 'twere a man born in April. Cres. And I '11 spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. [A retreat sounded. Pan. Hark ! they are coming from the field : shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium ? good niece, do ; sweet Cressida. Cres. At your pleasure. Pan. Here, here, here 's an excellent place ; here we may see most bravely : I '11 tell you them all by their names as they pass by ; but mark Troilus above the rest. Cres. Speak not so loud. . ?;' C»T9ff J ! ?.I/HotT 2i? /£NEAS passes. Pan. That 's /Eneas : is not that a brave man ? he *s one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you. But mark Troilus ; you shall see anon.

756 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT i. ANTENOR passes. Ores. Who's that? Pan. That's Antenor : he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you ; and he 's a man good enough : he's one o' the soundest judgments in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus ? — I '11 show you Troilus anon : if he see me, you shall see him nod at me. Cres. Will he give you the nod ? Pan. You shall see. Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more. HECTOR passes. Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that ; there 's a fellow ! — Go thy way, Hector ! ^-There 's a brave man, niece. — O brave Hector ! — Look how he looks ! — There's a countenance ! Is 't not a brave man ? Cres. O, a brave man ! Pan. Is 'a not ? It does a man's heart good. — Look you what hacks are on his helmet ! look you yonder, do you see ? look you there : there 's no jesting ; there 's laying on ; take 't off who will, as they say : there be hacks ! Cres. Be those with swords ? Pan. Swords ! anything, he cares not ; an the devil come to him, it 's all one : by god's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris : PARIS passes. look ye yonder, niece ; is Jt not a gallant man top, is't not?— Why, this is brave now. — Who said he came hurt home to-day ? he 's not hurt : why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha ! —Would I could see Troilus now !— you shall see Troilus anon. HELEN us passes. Cres. Who's that? Pan. That's Helenus : — I marvel where Troilus is : — that 's Helenus : — I think he went not forth to-day : — that 's Helenus. Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle ? Pan. Helenus! no; — yes, he'll fight indifferent well. — I marvel where Troilus is. — Hark ! do you not hear the people cry Troilus ? — Helenus is a priest. Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder ? TROILUS/^. Pan. Where ? yonder? that 's Deiphobus :— 'tis Troilus ! there 's a man, niece ! — Hem ! — Brave Troilus ! the prince of chivalry ! Cres. Peace, for shame, peace ! Pan. Mark him ; note him : — O brave Troilus 1 — look well upon him, niece ; look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's ; and how he looks, and how he goes ! — O admirable youth ! he ne'er saw three and twenty. — Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way ! — Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. 0 admirable man ! Paris? — Paris is dirt to him ; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot. Cres. Here come more. Forces pass. Pan.

Asses, fools, dolts ! chaff and bran, chaff and bran ! porridge after meat !— I could live and die i5 the eyes of Troilus. — Ne'er look, ne'er look ; the eagles are gone : crows and daws, crows and daws ! — I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece. Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, ˆa better man than Troilus. Pan. Achilles ! a drayman, a porter, a very camel. Cres. Well, welL Pan. Well, well! — Why, have you any discretion ? have you any eyes ? do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man ? Cres. Ay, a minced man : and then to be baked with no date in the pie, — for then the man's date 's out. Pan. You are such a woman ! one knows not at what ward you lie. Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly ; upon my wit, to defend my wiles ; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty ; my mask, to defend my beauty ; and you, to defend all these : and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches. Pan. Say one of your watches. Cres. Nay, I '11 watch you for that ; and that 's one of the chiefest of them too : if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow ; unless it swell past hiding, and then it is past watching. Pan. You are such another ! Enter TROILUS' Boy. 3 --z Ji .ovoiq Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you. Pan. Where? Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him. Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy. 1 doubt he be hurt. — Fare ye well, good niece.

SCENE III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 757 Cres. Adieu, uncle. Pan. I '11 be with you, niece, by and by. Cres. To bring, uncle. Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus. Cres. By the same token — you are a bawd. [Exit PANDARUS. Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice, He offers in another's enterprise: But more in Troilus thousand-fold I see Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be ; Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing : Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing: That she belov'd knows naught that knows not this, — Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is : That she was never yet that ever knew Love got so sweet as when desire did sue : Therefore this maxim out of love I teach, — Achievement is command ; ungain'd beseech : Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear, Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit. SCENE III.— THE GRECIAN CAMP. AGAMEMNON'S Tent. Before Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and others. Agam. Princes, [cheeks? What grief hath set the jaundice on your The ample proposition that hope makes In all designs begun on earth below [disasters Fails in the promis'd largeness : checks and Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd ; As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap, Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain Tortive and errant from his course of growth. Nor, princes, is it matter new to us That we come short of our suppose so far That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls stand ; Sith every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bias and thwart, not answering the aim, And that unbodied figure of the thought That gav 't surmised shape. Why, then, you princes, Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works ; And call them shames, which are, indeed, naught else But the protractive trials of great Jove To find persistive constancy in men ? The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love : for then the bold and coward, The wise and fool, the artist and unread, The hard and soft, seem all affin'd and kin : But, in the wind and tempest of her frown, Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan, Puffing at all, winnows the light away ; And what hath mass or matter, by itself Lies rich in virtue and unmingled. [seat, Nest. With due observance of thy godlike Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance Lies the true proof of men : the sea being smooth, How many shallow bauble boats dare sail Upon her patient breast, making their way With those of nobler bulk 1 But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, Bounding between the two moist elements, Like Perseus' horse : where 's then the saucy boat, Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now Co-rivall'd greatness? either to harbour fled Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide In storms of fortune : for in her ray and brightness The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze Than by the tiger : but when the splitting wind Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, And flies fled under shade, — why, then the thing of courage, As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize, And with an accent tun'd in self-same key Retorts to chiding fortune. Ulyss. Agamemnon, — Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece, Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit, In whom the tempers and the minds of all Should be shut up, — hear what Ulysses speaks. Besides the applause and approbation The which, — most mighty for thy place and sway, — [To AGAMEMNON. And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life, — [To NESTOR. I give to both your speeches, — which were such As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece Should hold up high in brass ; and such again As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver, [tree Should with a bond of air, — strong as the axleOn which heaven rides, — knit all the Greekish ears [both, — To his experienc'd tongue, — yet let it please Thou great, — and wise, — to hear Ulysses speak. Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect, That matter needless, of importless burden,

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT 1. Divide thy lips, than we are confident, When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws, We shall hear music, wit, and oracle. Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down, [master, And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a But for these instances. The specialty of rule hath been neglected : And look, how many Grecian tents do stand Hollowupon this plain, so many hollow factions. When that the general is not like the hive, To whom the foragers shall all repair, What honey is expected ? Degree being vizarded , The un worthiest shows as fairly in the mask. The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre, Observe degree, priority, and place, Insisture, course, proportion, season, form, Office, and custom, in all line of order : And therefore is the glorious planet Sol In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd Amidst the other ; whose medicinable eye Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil, And posts, like the commandment of a king, Sans check, to good and bad : but when the planets, In evil mixture, to disorder wander, What plagues and what portents ! what mutiny ! What raging of the sea ! shaking of earth ! Commotion in the winds ! frights, changes, horrors, Divert and crack, rend and deracinate The unity and married calm of states [shak'd, Quite from their fixture ! O, when degree is Which is the ladder to all high designs, The enterprise is sick ! How could communities, Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities, Peaceful commerce from dividable shores, The primogenitive and due of birth, Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels, But by degree, stand in authentic place ? Take but degree away, untune that string, And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets In mere oppugnancy : the bounded waters Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores. And make a sop of all this solid globe : Strength should be lord of imbecility, And the rude son should strike his father dead : Force should be right ; or, rather, right and wrong, — Between whose endless jar justice resides, — Should lose their names, and so should justice too. Then everything includes itself in power, Power into will, will into appetite ; And appetite, an universal wolf, So doubly seconded with will and power, Must make perforce an universal prey, And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon, This chaos, when degree is suffocate, Follows the choking. And this neglection of degree it is That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose It hath to climb. The general 's disdain'd By him one step below ; he by the next ; That next by him beneath : so every step, Exampled by the first pace that is sick Of his superior, grows to an envious fever Of pale and bloodless emulation ; And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot, Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length, Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength. Nest. Most wisely hath Ulyssesherediscover'd The fever whereof all our power is sick. Again. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses, What is the remedy ? [crowns Ulyss. The great Achilles, — whom opinion The sinew and the forehand of our host, — Having his ear full of his airy fame, Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent Lies mocking our designs : with him Patroclus, Upon a lazy bed, the livelong day Breaks scurril jests ; And with ridiculous and awkward action,— Which, slanderer, he imitation calls, — He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon, Thy topless deputation he puts on ; And, like a strutting player, — whose conceit Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage, — Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming He acts thy greatness in : and when he speaks 'Tis like a chime a-mending ; with terms unsquar'd, [dropp'd, Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling, From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause ; Cries, Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just. Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard, As he being drest to some oration. That 's done ; — as near as the extremes! ends Of parallels ; as like as Vulcan and his wife : Yet god Achilles still cries, Excellent! ' Tis ˆNestor right. Now play h im me, Patroclus, Arming to answer in a night alarm. And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age Must be the scene of mirth ; to cough and spit, And, with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget, Shake in and out the rivet : and at this sport Sir Valour dies : cries, O, enough, Patroclus ;

JSCENE'III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 759 Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all In pleastire of my spleen. And in this fashion All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes, Severals and generals of grace exact, Achievements, plots, orders, preventions, Excitements to the field or speech for truce, Success or loss, what is or is not, serves As stuff for these two to make paradoxes. Nest. And in the imitation of these twain, — Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns With an imperial voice, — many are infect. Ajax is grown self-willed ; and bears his head In such a rein, in full as proud a place As broad Achilles ; keeps his tent like him ; Makes factious feasts ; rails on our state of war Bold as an oracle ; and sets Thersites, — A slave, whose gall coins slanders like a mint, — To match us in comparisons with dirt, To weaken and discredit our exposure, How rank soever rounded in with danger. Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice ; Count wisdom as no member of the war ; Forestall prescience, and esteem no act But that of hand : the still and mental parts, — That do contrive how many hands shall strike, When fitness calls them on ; and know, by measure Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight, — Why, this hath not a finger's dignity: They call this bed- work, mappery, closet-war; So that the ram that batters down the wall, For the great swing and rudeness of his poise, They place before his hand that made the engine, Or those that with the fineness of their souls By reason guide his execution. Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse Makes many Thetis' sons. [Trumpet sounds. Agam. What trumpet ? look, Menelaus. Men. From Troy. Agam. What would you 'fore our tent ? s£ne. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you ? Agam. Even this. Jfcne. May one, that is a herald and a prince, Do a fair message to his kingly ears ? Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm [voice 'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one Call Agamemnon head and general. [may ALne. Fair leave and large security. How A stranger to those most imperial looks Know them from eyes of other mortals ? Agam. How ! Ay; I ask, that I might waken reverence, And bid the cheek be ready with a blush Modest as morning when she coldly eyes The youthful Phoebus : Which is that god in office, guiding men ? Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon ? Agam. This Trojan scorns us ; or the men of Troy Are ceremonious courtiers.

76o TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT i. \ He hath a lady wiser, fairer, truer Than ever Greek did compass in his arms And will to-morrow with his trumpet call, Mid- way between your tents and walls of Troy, To rouse a Grecian that is true in love : If any come, Hector shall honour him ; If none, he '11 say in Troy when he retires, The Grecian dames are sunburnt, and not worth The splinter of a lance. Even so much. Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord If none of them have soul in such a kind, We left them all at home : but we are soldiers ; And may that soldier a mere recreant prove That means not, hath not, or is not in love ! If then one is, or hath, or means to be, That one meets Hector ; if none else, I am he. Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man When Hector's grandsire suck'd : he is old now ; But if there be not in our Grecian host One noble man that hath one spark of fire To answer for his love, tell him from me — I '11 hide my silver beard in a gold beaver, And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn ; And, meeting him, will tell him that my lady Was fairer than his grandame, and as chaste As may be in the world : his youth in flood, I'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood. [youth ! j*Enc. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of Ulyss. Amen. [hand ; Agam. Fair Lord ^Eneas, let me touch your To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir. Achilles shall have word of this intent ; So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent : Yourself shall feast with us before you go, And find the welcome of a noble foe. [Exeunt all but ULYSS. and NEST. Ulyss. Nestor, — Nest. What says Ulysses ? [brain ; Ulyss. I have a young conception in my Be you my time to bring it to some shape. Nest. What is 't? Ulyss. This 'tis : — Blunt wedges rive hard knots : the seeded pride That hath to this maturity blown up In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd, Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil, To overbulk us all. Nest. Well, and how ? [sends, Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector However it is spread in general name, Relates in purpose only to Achilles. [stance, Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as subWhose grossness little characters sum up : And, in the publication, make no strain But that Achilles, were his brain as barren As banks of Libya, — though, Apollo knows, 'Tis dry enough,- — will, with great speed of judgment, Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose Pointing on him. Ulyss. And wake him to the

answer, think you ? [else oppose Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet: whom may you That can from Hector bring his honour off, If not Achilles? Though 't be a sportful combat, Yet in the trial much opinion dwells ; For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute With their fin'st palate: and trust to me, Ulysses, Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd In this wild action ; for the success, Although particular, shall give a scantling Of good or bad unto the general ; And in such indexes, although small pricks To their subsequent volumes, there is seen The baby figure of tAe giant mass Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd He that meets Hector issues from our choice : And choice being mutual act of all our souls, Makes merit her election ; and doth boil, As 'twere from forth us all, a man distill'd Out of our virtues ; who miscarrying, [part, What heart receives from hence the conquering To steal a strong opinion to themselves ? Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments. In no less working than are swords and bows Directive by the limbs. Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech ; — Therefore 'tis meet Achilles meet not Hector. Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares, And think perchance they'll sell ; if not, The lustre of the better shall exceed, By showing the worst first. Do not consent That ever Hector and Achilles meet ; For both our honour and our shame in this Are dogg'd with two strange followers. Nest. I see them not with my old eyes : what are they ? ;, . " Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector, [him : Were he not proud, we all should share with But he already is too insolent ; And we were better parch in Afric sun Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes, Should he 'scape Hector fair : if he were foil'd, Why, then we did our main opinion crush In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery ; And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw The sort to fight with Hector : among ourselves, Give him allowance for the better man ; For that will physic the great Myrmidon Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends.

SCENE III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 76i If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off, We '11 dress him up in voices : if he fail, Yet go we under our opinion still That we have better men. But, hit or miss, Our project's life this shape of sense assumes, — Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes. Nest. Now, Ulysses, I begin to relish thy advice ; And I will give a taste of it forthwith To Agamemnon : go we to him straight. Two curs shall tame each other : pride alone Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone. [Exeunt. ACT II. SCENE I. — Another part of the Grecian Camp. Enter AJAX and THERSITES. Ajax. Thersites, — Ther. Agamemnon, — how if he had boils, — full, all over, generally *, Ajax. Thersites, — Ther. And those boils did run ? — Say so, — did not the general run then ? were not that a botchy core? — Ajax. Dog, — Ther. Then would come some matter from him ; I see none now. Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel, then. [Beating him. Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord ! Ajax. Speak, then, thou vinewedst leaven, speak : I will beat thee into handsomeness. Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness : but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks ! Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation. Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strikest me thus ? Ajax. The proclamation, — Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think. Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not ; my fingers itch. Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee ; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another. Ajax. I say, the proclamation, — Ther. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles ; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him. Ajax. Mistress Thersites : Ther. Thou shouldst strike him. Ajax. Cobloaf ! Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit. Ajax. You whoreson cur ! [Beating him. Ther. Do, do. Ajax. Thou stool for a witch ! Ther. Ay, do, do ; thou sodden- witted lord ! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows ; an assinego may tutor thee : thou scurvy valiant ass ! thou art here but to thrash Trojans ; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou ! Ajax. You dog ! Ther. You scurvy lord ! Ajax. You cur ! [Beating him. Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel ; do, do. Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS. Achil. Why, how now, Ajax ! wherefore do you thus? — How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man? Ther. You see him there, do you ? Achil. Ay ; what 's the matter ? Ther. Nay, look upon him. Achil. So I do : what's the matter? Ther. Nay, but regard him well. Achil. Well ! why, I do so. Ther. But yet you look not well upon him ; for whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax. Achil. I know that, fool. Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself. Ajax. Therefore I beat thee. Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters ! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones : I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, — who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, — I '11 tell you what I say of him. Achil. What? Ther. I say, this Ajax, — [AjAX offers to beat Aim, ACHILLES interposes. Achil. Nay, good Ajax. Ther. Has not so much wit, — Achil. Nay, I must hold you. Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight. Achil. Peace, fool !

762 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT II. Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not : he there ; that he ; look you there. Ajax. O thou damned cur ! I shall, — AchiL Will you set your wit to a fool's ? Ther. No, I warrant you ; for a fool's will shame it. Patr. Good words, Thersites. AchiL What's the quarrel? Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenor of the proclamation, and he rails upon me. Ther. I serve thee not. Ajax. Well, go to, go to. Ther. I serve here voluntary. AchiL Your last service was sufferance, 'twas not voluntary, — no man is beaten voluntary : Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress. Ther. E'en so ; a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch if he knock out either of your brains : 'a were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel. AchiL What, with me too, Thersites ? Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor,— whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, — yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the wars. AchiL What, what ? Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles! to, Ajax! to! Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue. Ther. 'Tis no matter ; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards. Patr. No more words, Thersites ; peace ! Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I ? AchiL There 's for you, Patroclus. Ther. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents : I will keep where there is wit stirring, and leave the faction of fools. [Exit. Patr. A good riddance. AchiL Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host : — That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy, To-morrow morning call some knight to arms That hath a stomach ; and such a one that dare Maintain I know not what; 'tis trash. Farewell. Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him ? AchiL I know not, it is put to lottery ; otherwise He knew his man. Ajax. O, meaning you. — I '11 go learn more of it. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — TROY. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace. Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS. Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent, Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks : — Deliver Helen, and all damage else, — As honour, loss of time, travail, expense, Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consumed In hot digestion of this cormorant "war, — Shall be struck off: — Hector, what say you to 't ? Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I, As far as toucheth my particular, Yet, dread Priam, There is no lady of more softer bowels, More spongy to suck in the sense of fear, More ready to cry out, Who knows what follows? Than Hector is : the wound of peace is surety, Surety secure ; but modest doubt is call'd The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go : Since the first sword was drawn about this question, (Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes, Hath been as dear as Helen, — I mean, of ours: If we have lost so many tenths of ours, To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us, Had it our name, the value of one ten, — What merit 's in that reason which denies The yielding of her up ? Tro. Fie, fie, my brother ! Weigh you the worth and honour of a king, So great as our dread father, in a scale Of common ounces? will you with counters sum The past-proportion of his infinite ? And buckle-in a waist most fathomless With spans and inches so diminutive As fears and reasons ? fie, for godly shame I Hel. No marvel though you bite so sharp at reasons : [father You are so empty of them. Should not our Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons, Because your speech hath none that tells him so ? Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest ; [reasons : You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your You know an enemy intends you harm ; You know a sword employ'd is perilous, And reason flies the object of all harm : Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds A Grecian and his sword, if he do set The very wings of reason to his heels,

SCENE II.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 763 And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, Or like a star disorb'd? — Nay if we talk of reason [honour Let 's shut our gates and sleep : manhood and Should have hare hearts would they but fat their thoughts With this cramm'd reason : reason and respect Make livers pale and lustihood deject. [cost Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth The holding. Tro. What is aught but as 'tis valued ? Hect. But value dwells not in particular will ; It holds his estimate and dignity As well wherein 'tis precious of itself As in the prizer : 'tis mad idolatry To make the service greater than the god ; And the will dotes, that is attributive To what infectiously itself affects, Without some image of the affected merit. Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election Is led on in the conduct of my will ; My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears, Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores Of will and judgment : how may I avoid, Although my will distaste what it elected, The wife I chose ? there can be no evasion To blench from this, and to stand firm by honour : We turn not back the silks upon the merchant When we have soil'd them ; nor the remainder viands We do not throw in unrespective sieve, Because we now are full. It was thought meet Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks : Your breath of full consent bellied his sails ; The seas and winds, — old wranglers, — took a truce, [desir'd ; And did him service : he touch'd the ports And for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive, [freshness He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning. Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt : Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl, Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships, And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants. If you '11 avouch 'twas wisdom Paris went, — As you must needs, for you all cried, Go, go, — If you '11 confess he brought home noble prize, — As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands, And cried, Inestimable ! — why do you now The issue of your proper wisdoms rate, And do a deed that fortune never did, — Beggar the estimation which you priz'd Richer than sea and land? O theft most base, That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep ! 'But thieves, unworthy of a thing so stol'n, That in their country did them that disgrace, We fear to warrant in our native place ! Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry ! Pri. What noise?

what shriek is this? Pro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice. Cas. [Within.} Cry, Trojans! Hect. It is Cassandra. Enter CASSANDRA, raving. Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry ! lend me ten thousand eyes, And I will fill them with prophetic tears. Hect. Peace, sister, peace. [old, Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry, Add to my clamours ! let us pay betimes A moiety of that mass of moan to come. Cry, Trojans, cry ! practise your eyes with tears ! Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand ; Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all. Cry, Trojans, cry ! an Helen and a woe : Cry, cry ! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit. Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains Of divination in our sister work Some touches of remorse ? or is your blood So madly hot that no discourse of reason, Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause, Can qualify the same? Tro. Why, brother Hector, We may not think the justness of each act Such and no other than event doth form it ; Nor once deject the courage of our minds Because Cassandra 's mad : her brain-sick raptures Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel Which hath our several honours all engag'd To make it gracious. For my private part, I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons : And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us Such things as might offend the weakest spleen To fight for and maintain ! Par. Else might the world convince of levity As well my undertakings as your counsels: But I attest the gods, your full consent Gave wings to my propension, and cut off All fears attending on so dire a project. For what, alas, can these my single arms? What propugnation is in one man's valour, To stand the push and enmity of thost: This quarrel would excite ? Yet, I protest, Were I alone to pass the difficulties, And had as ample power as I have will, Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done, Nor faint in the pursuit.

764 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT ii. Prim Paris, you speak Like one besotted on your sweet delights : You have the honey still, but these the gall ; So to be valiant is no praise at all. Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself The pleasures such a beauty brings with it ; But I would have the soil of her fair rape Wip'd off in honourable keeping her. What treason were it to the ransack'd queen, Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me, Now to deliver her possession up On terms of base compulsion ! Can it be That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generousbosoms? There 's not the meanest spirit on our party, Without a heart to dare or sword to draw, When Helen is defended ; nor none so noble, Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd, Where Helen is the subject : then, I say, [well, Well may we fight for her, whom, we know The world's large spaces cannot parallel. Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said well; And on the cause and question now in hand Have gloz'd, — but superficially; not much Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought Unfit to hear moral philosophy: The reasons you allege do more conduce To the hot passion of distemper'd blood Than to make up a free determination 'Twixt right and wrong; for pleasure and revenge Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice Of any true decision. Nature ci'aves All dues be render'd to their owners : now, What nearer debt in all humanity Than wife is to the husband ? If this law Of nature be corrupted through affection ; And that great minds, of partial indulgence To their benumbed wills, resist the same ; There is a law in each well-order'd nation To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory. If Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king, — As it is known she is, — these moral laws Of nature and of nations speak aloud To have her back return'd : thus to persist In doing wrong extenuates not wrong, But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion Is this, in way of truth : yet, ne'ertheless, My spritely brethren, I propend to you In resolution to keep Helen still ; For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence Upon our joint and several dignities. Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our Were it not glory that we more affected Than the performance of our heaving spleens, I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector. She is a theme of honour and renown ; A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds; Whose present courage may beat down our foes, And fame in time to come can6nize us: For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose So rich advantage of a promis'd glory, As smiles upon the forehead of this action, For the wide world's revenue. Hect. I am yours, You valiant offspring of great Priamus. — I have a roisting challenge sent amongst The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits : I was advertised their great general slept, Whilst emulation in the army crept : This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — THE GRECIAN CAMP. Before ACHILLES' Tent. Enter THERSITES. Ther. How now, Thersites ! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury ! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus ? he beats me, and I rail at him : O worthy satisfaction ! would it were otherwise ; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I '11 learn to conjure and raise devils, but I '11 see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there 's Achilles, — a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king ot gods ; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caducetis ; if ye take not that little little less-than-little wit from them that they have ! which short-aimed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp ! or, rather, the bone-ache ! for that, methinks, is the curse dependent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers ; and devil envy say Amen. — What, ho ! my Lord Achilles ! Enter PATROCLUS. Patr. Who 's there? Thersites ! Good Thersites, come in and rail. Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation : but it is no matter ;

SCENE III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 765 thyself upon thyself ! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue ! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee ! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death ! then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corse, I '11 be sworn and sworn upon 't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. — Where's Achilles? Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer ? Ther. Ay, the heavens hear me ! Enter ACHILLES. Achil. Who 's there ? Pair. Thersites, my lord. Achil. Where, where? — Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals ? Come, — what 's Agamemnon ? Ther. Thy commander, Achilles : — then tell me, Patroclus, what 's Achilles ? Pair. Thy lord, Thersites : then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself? Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus : then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou ? Pair. Thou mayest tell that knowest. Achil. O, tell, tell. Ther. I '11 decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles ; Achilles is my lord ; I am Patroclus' knower ; and Patroclus is a fool. Patr. You rascal ! Ther. Peace, fool ! I have not done. Achil. He is a privileged man. — Proceed, Thersites. Ther. Agamemnon is a fool ; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool. Achil. Derive this ; come. Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles ; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon ; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool ; and Patroclus is a fool positive. Patr. Why am i a fool ? _ Ther. Make that demand of the jwefeft It suffices me thou art. — Look you, who comes here? Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. — Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit. Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery ! all the argument is a cuckold and a whore ; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now the dry serpigo on the subject ! and war and lechery confound all ! [Exit. Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX. Agam. Where is Achilles ? [lord. Patr. Within his tent ; but ill-dispos'd, my Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here. He shent our messengers ; and we lay by Our appertainments, visiting of him : Let him be told so ; lest, perchance, he think We dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are. Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit. Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent: He is not sick. Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart : you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man ; but, by my head, 'tis pride : but why, why? let him show us the cause. — A word, my lord. [Takes AGAMEMNON aside. Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him ? Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him. Nest. Who, Thersites? Ulyss. He. Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument. Ulyss. No ; you see, he is his argument that has his argument, — Achilles. Nest. All the better ; their fraction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong composure a fool could disunite. Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus. Nest. No Achilles with him. Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy : his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure. Re-enter PATROCLUS. Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry If anything more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness and this noble state To call upon him ; he hopes it is no other But for your health and your digestion sake, — An after-dinner's breath. Agam. Hear you, Patroclus : — We are too well acquainted with these answers : But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath ; and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him : yet all his virtues, — Not virtuously on his own part beheld, — Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss ; Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him T~v

766 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT n. We come to speak with him ; and you shall not sin If you do say we think him over-proud And under-honest ; in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgment ; and worthier than himself Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on, Disguise the holy strength of their command, And underwrite in an observing kind His humorous predominance ; yea, watch His pettish lunes, his ebbs, his flows, as if The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go tell him this ; and add, That if he overhold his price so much, We '11 none of him ; but let him, like an engine Not portable, lie under this report, — Bring action hither, this cannot go to war : A stirring dwarf we do allowance give Before a sleeping giant : — tell him so. Pair. I shall ; and bring his answer presently. [Exit. Again. In second voice we '11 not be satisfied ; We come to speak with him. — Ulysses, enter you. [Exit ULYSSES. Ajax. What is he more than another ? Agam. No more than what he thinks he is. Ajax. Is he so much ? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am ? Agam. No question. Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is ? Agam. No, noble Ajax ; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable. Ajax. Why should a man be proud ? How doth pride grow ? I know not what pride is. Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle ; and whatever praises itself but in the deed devours the deed in the praise. Ajax. I do hate a proud man as I hate the engendering of toads. Nest. Yet he loves himself : is 't not strange ? [Aside. Re-enter ULYSSES. Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow. Agam. What 's his excuse ? Ulyss. He doth rely on none ; But carries on the stream of his dispose, Without observance or respect of any, In will peculiar and in self-admission. Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request, Untent his person, and share the air with us ? Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only, [greatness : He makes important : possess'd he is with And speaks not to himself but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath : imagin'd worth Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse That 'twixt his mental and his active parts Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, And batters

down himself: what should I say? He is so plaguy proud that the death tokens of it Cry, No recovery. Agam. Let Ajax go to him. — Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent : 'Tis said he holds you well ; and will be led, At your request, a little from himself. Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so ! We '11 consecrate the steps that Ajax makes When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord, That bastes his arrogance with his own seam, And never suffers matter of the world Enter his thoughts, — save such as do revolve And ruminate himself, — shall he be worshipp'd Of that we hold an idol more than he ? No, this thrice-worthy and right valiant lord Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd ; Nor, by my will, assubjngate his merit, As amply titled as Achilles is, By going to Achilles : That were to enlard his fat-already pride, And add more coals to Cancer when he burns With entertaining great Hyperion. This lord go to him ! Jupiter forbid ; And say in thunder, Achilles go to him. Nest. O, this is well ; he rubs the vein of him. [Aside. Dio. And how his silence drinks up this ap?lause ! [Aside. f I go to him, with my armed fist I '11 pash him o'er the face. Agam. O, no, you shall not go. [pride : Ajax. An 'a be proud with me I '11 pheeze his Let me go to him. [quarrel. Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow ! Nest. How he describes himself ! [Aside. Ajax. Can he not be sociable ? Ulyss. The raven chides blackness. [Aside. Ajax. I '11 let his humours blood. Agam. He will be the physician that should be the patient. [Aside. Ajax. An all men were o' my mind, — Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [Aside. Ajax. 'A should not bear it so, 'a should eat swords first : shall pride carry it ? Nest. An 'twould, you 'd carry half. [Aside. Ulyss. 'A would have ten shares. [Aside.

SCENE III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 767 Ajax. I will knead him, I '11 make him supple. Nest. He 's not yet thorough warm : force him with praises : pour in, pour in : his ambition is dry. [Aside. Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike. [To AGAMEMNON. Nest. Our noble general, do not do so. Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles. [harm. Ulyss. Why 'tis this naming of him does him Here is a man — but 'tis before his face ; I will be silent. Nest. Wherefore should you so ? He is not emulous, as Achilles is. Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant. Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us ! Would he were a Trojan ! Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now, — Ulyss. If he were proud, — Dio. Or covetous of praise, — Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne, — Dio. Or strange, or self- affected! Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure ; [suck ; Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition : But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight, Let Mars divide eternity in twain, And give him half: and, for thy vigour, Bull-bearing Mil© his addition yield To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom, Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines Thy spacious and dilated parts : here's Nestor, — Instructed by the antiquary times, He must, he is, he cannot but be wise ; — But pardon, father Nestor, were your days As green as Ajax', and your brain so temper'd, You should not have the eminence of him, But be as Ajax. Ajax. Shall I call you father? Nest. Ay, my good son. Dio. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax. Ulyss. There is no tarrying here ; the hart Achilles Keeps thicket. Please it our great general To call together all his state of war ; Fresh kings are come to Troy. To-morrow We must with all our main of power stand fast : And here 's a lord, — come knights from east to west, And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best. Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep : Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks draw deep. [Exeunt. ACT III. SCENE I.— TROY. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace. Enter PANDARUS and a Servant. Pan. Friend, you, — pray you, a word : do not you follow the young Lord Paris ? Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me. Pan. You depend upon him, I mean ? Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord. Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman ; I must needs praise him. Serv. The lord be praised ! Pan. You know me, do you not ? Serv. Faith, sir, superficially, Pan. Friend, know me better ; I am the Lord Pandarus. Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better. Pan. I do desire it Serv. You are in the state of grace. [Music within. Pan. Grace ! not so, friend ; honour and lordship are my titles. — What music is this? Serv. I do but partly know, sir : it is music in parts. Pan. Know you the musicians ? Serv. Wholly, sir. Pan. Who play they to ? Serv. To the hearers, sir. Pan. At whose pleasure, friend ? Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music. Pan. Command, I mean, friend. Serv. Who shall I command, sir ? Pan. Friend, we understand not one another : I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play ? Serv. That 's to 't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person ; with him, the mortal Venus, the heartblood of beauty, love's invisible soul, — Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida ? Serv. No, sir, Helen : could you not find out that by her attributes ? Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus : I will make a complimental assault upon him, for my business seethes. Serv. Sodden business ! there 's a stewed phrase indeed ! Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended. Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company ! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them ! — especially to you, fair queen ! fair thoughts be your fair pillow 1

768 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT in. Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words. Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. — Fair prince, here is good broken music. Par. You have broke it, cousin : and by my life, you shall make it whole again ; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance. — Nell, he is full of harmony. Pan. Truly, lady, no, Helen. O, sir,— Pan* Rude, in sooth ; in good sooth, very rude. Par* Well said, my lord ! well, you say so in fits. Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen. — My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word ? Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out : we '11 hear you sing, certainly. Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me.— But, marry, thus, my lord, — My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus, — Helen. My Lord Pandarus ; honey-sweet lord, — Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to : — commends himself most affectionately to you, — Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody : if you do, our melancholy upon your head! Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen ; that '* a sweet queen, i' faith. Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence. Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn ; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words ; no, no. — And, my lord, he desires you that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse. Helen. My Lord Pandarus, — Pan. What says my sweet queen, — my very very sweet queen ? Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night ? Helen. Nay, but, my lord, — Pan. What says my sweet queen? — My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups. Par. I '11 lay my life, with my disposer Cressida. Pan. No, no, no such matter ; you are wide : come, your disposer is sick. Par. Well, I '11 make excuse. Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida ? no, your poor disposer 's sick. Par. I spy. Pan. You spy! what do you spy? — Come, give me an instrument. — Now, sweet queen. Helen. Why, this is kindly done. Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen. Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris. Pan. He ! no, she '11 none of him ; they two are twain. Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three. Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this ; I '11 sing you a song now. Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead. Pan. Ay, you may, you may. Helen. Let thy song be love : this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid ! Pan. Love ! ay, that it shall, i' faith, [love. Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but Pan. In good troth, it begins so : Love, love, nothing but love, still more ! For, oh, love s bow Shoots buck and doe I The shaft confounds. Not that it wounds, But tickles still the sore. These lovers cry — Oh ! oh 1 they die ! Yet that which seems the wound to kill, Doth turn oh I oh J to ha ! ha ! he ! So dying love lives still : Oh ! oh ! a while, but ha ! ha ! ha ! Oh t oh ! groans out for ha 1 ha ! ha ! Heigh ho ! Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose. Par. He eats nothing but doves, love ; and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love. Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers : is love a generation of vipers ? — Sweet lord, who 's a-field to-day ? Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy : I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not ? Helen. He hangs the lip at something : — you know all, Lord Pandarus. Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. — I long to hear how they sped to-day. You '11 remember your brother's excuse ? Par. To a hair. Pan. Farewell, sweet queen. Helen. Commend me to your niece. in/; Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit. [A retreat sounded. • Par. They are come from field : let us to Priam's hall [woo you To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris ; Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty Gives us more palm in beauty than we have, Yea, overshines ourself. Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — TROY. PANDARUS' Orchard. Enter PANDARLS and TROILUS' Boy, meeting. Pan. How now ! where 's thy master ? at my cousin Cressida's ? [him thither. Boy. No, sir ; he stays for you to conduct Pan. O, here he comes. Enter TROILUS. How now, how now ! Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy. Pan. Have you seen my cousin ? Tro. No, Pandarus : I stalk about her door, Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon, And give me swift transportance to those fields Where I may wallow in the lily beds Propos'd for the deserver ! O gentle Pandarus, From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings, And fly with me to Cressid ! Pan. Walk here i' the orchard, I '11 bring her straight. [Exit. Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round. The imaginary relish is so sweet That it enchants my sense : what will it be, When that the wat'ry palate tastes indeed Love's thrice-repured nectar? death, I fear me; Swooning destruction ; or some joy too fine, Too subtle-potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness, For the capacity of my ruder powers : I fear it much ; and I do fear besides That I shall lose distinction in my joys ; As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps The enemy flying. Re-enter PANDARUS. Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight : you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite : I '11 fetch her. It is the prettiest villain : she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit. ˆ Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom: My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse ; And all my powers do their bestowing lose, Like vassalage at unawares encount'ring The eye of majesty. Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA. Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby. — Here she is now : swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me. — What, are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways ; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills. — Why do you not speak to her? — Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loth you are to offend daylight ! an 'twere dark, you'd close sooner. So, so ; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now, a kiss in fee-farm ! build there, carpenter ; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river : go to, go to. Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady. Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds : but she '11 bereave you o' the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing again ? Here's — In witness whereof the parties interchangeably — Come in, come in : I '11 go get a fire. [Exit. Cres. Will you walk in, my lord ? Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus ! Cres. Wished, my lord ! — The gods grant, — O my lord ! Tro. What should they grant ? what makes this pretty abruption ? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love? Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes. Tro. Fears make devils of cherubims ; they never see truly. Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear : to fear the worst oft cures the worse. Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear : in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster. Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither ? Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings ; when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers ; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady, — that the will is infinite, and the execution confined ; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit. Cres. 770 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. TACT HI. formance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform ; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters ? Tro. Are there such ? such are not we : praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove ; our head shall go bare till merit crown it : no perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present : we will not name desert before his birth ; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith : Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth ; and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus. Cres. Will you walk in, my lord ? Re-enter PANDARUS. Pan. What, blushing still? have you not done talking yet ? Ores. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you. Pan. I thank you for that : if my lord get a boy of you, you '11 give him me. Be true to my lord : if he flinch, chide me for it. Tro. You know now your hostages ; your uncle's word and my firm faith. Pan. Nay, I '11 give my word for her too : our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won : they are burs, I can tell you ; they '11 stick where they are thrown. Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart : — Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months. Tro. Why was my Cressid, then, so hard to win ? Cres. Hard to seem won ; but I was won, my lord, With the first glance that ever — Pardon me, — If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now ; but not, till now, so much But I might master it : — in faith, I lie ; My thoughts were like unbridl'd children, grown Too headstrong for their mother: — see, we fools! Why have I blabb'd ? who shall be true to us, When we are so unsecret to ourselves ? — But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not ; And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man, Or that we women had men's privilege Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue ; For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence, Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws My very soul of conscience ! — Stop my mouth. Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence. Pan. Pretty, i' faith. Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me ; 'Twas not my purpose thus to beg a kiss : I am asham'd ; — O

heavens ! what have I done? For this time will I take my leave, my lord. Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid ! Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning, — Cres. Pray you, content you. Tro. What offends you, lady ? Cres. Sir, mine own company. Tro. You cannot shun Yourself. Cres. Let me go and try : I have a kind of self resides with you ; But an unkind self, that itself will leave To be another's fool. I would be gone : — Where is my wit ? I know not what I speak. Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely. Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love ; And fell so roundly to a large confession, To angle for your thoughts : but you are wise ; Or else you love not ; for to be wise and love Exceeds man's might ; that dwells with gods above. Tro. Othat I thought it could be in a woman, — As, if it can, I will presume in you, — To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love ; To keep her constancy in plight and youth, Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind That doth renew swifter than blood decays ! Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me, — That my integrity and truth to you Might be affronted with the match and weight Of such a winnow'd purity in love ; How were I then uplifted ! but, alas ! I am as true as truth's simplicity, And simpler than the infancy of truth. Cres. In that I '11 war with you. Tro. O virtuous fight, When right with right wars who shall be most right ! True swains in love shall, in the world to come, Approve their truths by Troilus : when their rhymes, Full of protest, of oath, and big compare, Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration, — As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre, — Yet, after all comparisons of truth,

SCENE III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 771 As truth's authentic author to be cited, As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse, And sanctify the numbers. Cres. Prophet may you be! If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth, When time is old and hath forgot itself, When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy, And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up, And mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing ; yet let memory From false to false, among false maids in love, Upbraid my falsehood ! when they have said — as false As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son ; Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood, As false as Cressid. Pan. Go to, a bargain made : seal it, seal it ; I '11 be the witness. Here I hold your hand ; here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers -between be called to the world's end after my name, 2all them all Pandars ; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers between Pandars ! say, amen. Tro. Amen. Cres. Amen. Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber and a bed ; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death : away 1 And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here, Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this geer ! [Exeunt. SCENE III.— THE GRECIAN CAMP. Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS. Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you The advantage of the time prompts me aloud To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind That, through the sight I bear in things to Jove, I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, Incurr'd a traitor's name ; expos'd myself, From certain and possess'd conveniences, To doubtful fortunes ; sequest'ring from me all That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition Made tame and most familiar to my nature ; And here, to do you service, am become As new into the world, strange, unacquainted : 1 do beseech you, as in way of taste, To give me now a little benefit, Out of those many registerˆ in promise, Which, you say, live to come in my behalf. Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan? make demand. [Antenor, Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Yesterday took : Troy holds him very dear. Oft have you, — often have you thanks therefore,— Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still denied : but this Antenor, I know, is such a wrest in their affairs That their negotiations all must slack Wanting his manage ; and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam, In change of him : let him be sent, great princes, And he shall buy my daughter ; and her presence Shall quite strike off all service I have done In most accepted pain. Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, And bring us Cressid hither : Calchas shall have What he requests of us —Good Diomed, Furnish you fairly for this interchange : Withal, bring word if Hector will to-morrow Be answered in his challenge : Ajax is ready. Dio. This shall I undertake ; and 'tis a burden Which I am proud to bear. [Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS, Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their tent. Ulyss. Achilles stands i' the entrance of his tent : — Please it our general to pass strangely by him, As if he were forgot ; and, princes all, Lay negligent and loose regard upon him : I will come last. 'Tis like he '11 question me Why such unplausive eyes are bent on him : If so, I have derision med'cinable, To use between your strangeness and his pride, Which his own will r.hall have desire to drink : It may do goodj pride hath no other glass To show itself but pride ; for supple knees Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees. Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on A form of strangeness as we pass along ; — So do each lord ; and either greet him not, Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way. Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me ? [Troy. You know my mind, I '11 fight no more 'gainst Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us? [general? Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the Achil. No.

772 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT in. Nest. Nothing, my lord. Agam. The better. [Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR. Achil. Good day, good day. Men. How do you? how do you? {.Exit. Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me? Ajax. How now, Patroclus? Achil. Good-morrow, Ajax. Ajax. Ha? Achil. Good-morrow. Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit. Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles? [to bend, Pair. They pass by strangely . they were us'd To send their smiles before them to Achilles ; To come as humbly as they us'd to creep To holy altars. Achil. What, am I poor of late ? 'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune, [is, Must fall out with men too. What the declin'd He shall as soon read in the eyes of others As feel on his own fall : for men, like butterflies, Show not their mealy wings but to the summer ; And not a man, for being simply man, Hath any honour ; but honour for those honours That are without him. as place, riches, and favour, Prizes of accident as oft as merit : Which when they fall, as being slippery standers, The love that lean'd on them as slippery too, Do one pluck down another, and together Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me ; Fortune and I are friends ; I do enjoy At ample point all that I did possess [out Save these men's looks ; who do, methinks, find Something not worth in me such rich beholding As they have often given. Here is Ulysses : I '11 interrupt his reading. — How now, Ulysses ! Ufyss. Now, great Thetis' son ! Achil. What are you reading ? Ulyss. A strange fellow here Writes me, That man, — how dearly ever parted, How much in having, or without or in, — Cannot make boast to have that which he hath, Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection ; As when his virtues shining upon others Heat them, and they retort that heat again To the first giver. Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses. The beauty that is borne here in the face The bearer knows not, but commends itself To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself, — That most pure spirit of sense, — behold itself, Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd: Salutes each other with each other's form : For speculation turns not to itself Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all. Ulyss. I do not strain at the position, — It is familiar, — but at the author's drift ; Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves That no man is the lord of anything, — Though in and of him there be much consisting, — Till he communicate his parts to others ; Nor doth he of himself know them for aught Till he behold them form'd in the applause Where they 're extended ; who, like an arch, reverberates The voice again ; or, like a gate of steel Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this; And apprehended here immediately The unknown Ajax. Heavens, what a man is there ! a very horse ; That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are Most abject in regard and dear in use ! What things again most dear in the esteem And poor in worth ! Now shall we see to-morrow An act that very chance doth throw upon him, Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do, While some men leave to do ! How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall, Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes ! How one man eats into another's pride, While pride is fasting in his wantonness ! To see these Grecian lords ! — why, even already They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast, And great Troy shrinking. Achil, I do believe it ; for they pass'd by me As misers do by beggars, — neither gave to me Good word nor look. What, are my deeds forgot? [back, Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his Wherein he puts alms for oblivion, A great-siz'd monster of ingratitudes : Those scraps are good deeds past ; which are devour'd As fast as they are made, forgot as soon As done: perseverance, dear my lord, Keeps honour bright : to have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail [way ; In monumental mockery. Take the instant For honour travels in a strait so narrow [path ; Where one but goes abreast : keep, then, the For emulation hath a thousand sons That one by one pursue : if you give way, Or hedge aside from the direct forthright, Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by.

SCENE III.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 773 And leave you hindmost ; Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank, Lie there for pavement to the abject rear, O'er-run and trampl'd on : then what they do in present, [yours ; Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop For time is like a fashionable host, [hand ; That slightly shakes his parting guest by the And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly, Grasps in the comer : welcome ever smiles, And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was ; For beauty, wit, High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service, Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all To envious and calumniating time. [kin, — One touch of nature makes the whole world That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds, [past ; Though they are made and moulded of things And give to dust that is a little gilt [eye More laud than gilt o'er-dusted. The present Praises the present object: Then marvel not, thou great and complete man, That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax ; Since things in motion sooner catch the eye Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee. And still it might ; and yet it may again, If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive, And case thy reputation in thy tent ; Whose glorious deeds but in these fields of late Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves, And drave great Mars to faction. Achil. Of this my privacy I have strong reasons. Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy The reasons are more potent and heroical : 'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love With one of Priam's daughters. Achil. Ha ! known ! Ulyss. Is that a wonder ? The providence that's in a watchful state Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold ; Finds bottom in the uncomprehcnsive deeps ; Keeps place with thought, and almost, like the gods, Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles. There is a mystery — with whom relation Durst never meddle — in the soul of state ; Which hath an operation more divine Than breath or pen can give expressure to : All the commerce that you have had with Troy As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord ; And better would it fit Achilles much To throw down Hector than Polyxena : But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at borne, When fame shall in our island sound her trump ; And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing, Great Hector's sister did Achilles win ; Bttt our brave Ajax bravely beat down him. Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak; The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break. [Exit. Pair. To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you: A woman impudent and mannish grown Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this ; They think my little stomach to the war, And your great love to me, restrains you thus : Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold, And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane, Be shook to air. Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector ? Patr. Ay, and perhaps receive much honour by him. Achil. I see my reputation is at stake; My fame is shrewdly gor'd. Patr. O, then, beware; Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves ; Omission to do what is necessary Seals a commission to a blank of danger ; And danger, like an ague, subtly taints . Even then when we sit idly in the sun. Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus : I '11 send the fool to Ajax, and desire him To invite the Trojan lords, after the combat, To see us here unarm'd : I have a woman's longing, An appetite that I am sick withal, To see great Hector in his weeds of peace ; To talk with him, and to behold his visage, Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd ! Enter THERSITES. Ther. A wonder ! Achil. What? Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field asking for himself. Achil. How so? Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector ; and is so prophetically proud of an heroical cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing. Achil. How can that be? Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, — a stride and a stand : ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain

774 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT iv. to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say, There were wit in this head, an 'twould out ; and so there is ; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man 's undone for ever ; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he '11 break it himself in vain-glory. He knows not me : I said Goodmorrowˆ Ajax ; and he replies, Thanks, Agamemnon. What think you of this man, that takes me for the general ? He is grown a very land fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion ! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. Ach.il. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites. Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering : speaking is for beggars ; he wears his tongue in 's arms. I will put on his presence : let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him, — I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent ; and to procure safe conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-orseven -times-honoured captain -general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this. Pair. Jove bless great Ajax ! Ther. Hum! Pair. I come from the worthy Achilles, — Ther. Ha! Pair. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent, — Ther. Hum! Pair. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon. Ther. Agamemnon! Pair. Ay, my lord. Ther. Ha! Patr. What say you to 't ? Ther. God be wi' you, with all my heart. Patr. Your answer, sir. Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other : howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me. Patr. Your answer, sir. Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart. Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he? Ther. No, but he 's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains I know not: but, I am sure, none ; unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on. Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight. Ther. Let me bear another to his horse ; for that 's the more capable creature. Achil. My mind is troubl'd, like a fountain stirr'd ; And I myself see not the bottom of it. [Exeunt ACHIL. and PATROCLUS. Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it ! I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit. ACT

IV. SCENE I. — TROY. A Street. Enterˆ at one side, ./ENEAS, and Servant with a torch; at the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES, and others, -with torches. 'Par. See, ho ! who 's that there ? Dei. 'Tis the Lord ˆEneas. Ai.ne. Is the prince there in person? — Had I so good occasion to lie long [business As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly Should rob my bed-mate of my company. Dio. That's my mind too. — Good-morrow, Lord yfineas. [hand, — Par. A valiant Greek, ˆEneas, — take his Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field. ALne* Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce ; But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance As heart can think or courage execute. Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces. Our bloods are now in calm ; and, so long, health ; But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I '11 play the hunter for thy life With all my force, pursuit, and policy. ALne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly [ness, With his face backward. — In humane gentleWelcome to Troy ! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome indeed ! By Venus' hand I swear No man alive can love, in such a sort, The thing he means to kill, more excellently. Dio. We sympathise.— Jove, let ˆneas live, If to my sword his fate be not the glory, A thousand complete courses of the sun ! But, in mine emulous honour, let him die, With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow ! ALne. We know each other well. Dio. We do ; and long to know each other worse.

SCENE I.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 775 Par. This is the most despiteful gentle greeting, The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of. — What business, lord, so early? j&ne. I was sent for to the king ; but why, I know not. [this Greek Par. His purpose meets you : 'twas to bring To Calchas' house ; and there to render him, For the enfreed Antenor, the fair Cressid : Let's have your company; or, if you please, Haste there before us : I constantly do think, — Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge,— My brother Troilus lodges there to-night : Rouse him, and give him note of our approach, With the whole quality wherefore: I fear We shall be much unwelcome. ALne. That I assure you : Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece Than Cressid borne from Troy. Par. There is no help ; The bitter disposition of the time Will have it so. On, lord ; we '11 follow you. j&ne. Good-morrow, all. [Exit, with Servant. Par. And tell me, noble Diomed, — faith, tell me true, Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship, — Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, Myself or Menelaus? Dio. Both alike : He merits well to have her, that doth seek her, — Not making any scruple of her soilure, — With such a hell of pain and world of charge ; And you as well to keep her, that defend her, — Not palating the taste of her dishonour, — With such a costly loss of wealth and friends : He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece ; You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors : Both merits pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more ; But he as he, each heavier for a whore. Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman. Dio. She 's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris : — For every false drop in her bawdy veins A Grecian's life hath sunk ; for every scruple Of her contaminated carrion weight [speak, A Trojan hath been slain : since she could She hath not given so many good words breath As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death. Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy : But we in silence hold this virtue well, — We '11 not commend what we intend to sell. Here lies our way. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — TROY. Court ˆPANDARUS' House. Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA. Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold. [uncle down ; Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine He shall unbolt the gates. Tro. Trouble him not ; To bed, to bed : sleep kill those pretty eyes, And give as soft attachment to thy senses As infants empty of all thought ! Cres. Good -morrow, then. Tro. I pr'ythee now, to bed. Cres. Are you aweary of me ? Tro. O Cressida ! but that the busy day, Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows, And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer, I would not from thee. Cres. Night hath been too brief. Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays As tediously as hell ; but flies the grasps of love With wings more momentary-swift than thought You will catch cold, and curse me. Cres. Pr'ythee, tarry; — You men will never tarry. — 0 foolish Cressid ! — I might have still held off, And then you would have tarried. Hark ! there's one up. [here? Pan. [Within.} What, 's all the doors open Tro. It is your uncle. [mocking : Cres. A pestilence on him ! now will he be 1 shall have such a life ! — Enter PANDARUS. Pan. How now, how now? how go maidenheads? — Here, you maid ! where 's my cousin Cressid? Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle ! You bring me to do, and then you flout me too. Pan. To do what? to do what? — let her say what: what have I brought you to do? Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart! you '11 ne'er be good, Nor suffer others. Pan. Ha, ha ! Alas, poor wretch ! ah, poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him ! Cres. Did not I toll you? — would he were knock'd i' the head ! — [Knocking. Who 's that at door? good uncle, go and see. —

776 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT iv. My lord, come you again into my chamber : You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily. Tro. Ha! ha! Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing. — [Knocking. How earnestly they knock ! — Pray you, come in : I would not for half Troy have you seen here. [Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA. Pan. [Going' to the door.'] Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now? what's the matter? Enter ˆENEAS. &ne. Good-morrow, lord, good-morrow. Pan. Who's there? my lord yEneas? By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early? j3Lne. Is not Prince Troilus here? Pan. Here ! what should he do here ? ALne. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him : It doth import him much to speak with me. Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn. — For my own part, I came in late. What should he do here? j*Ene. Who! — nay, then: — come, come, you '11 do him wrong ere you are ware : you Ml be so true to him to be false to him ; do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither ; goAs PANDARUS is going out, re-enter TROILUS. Tro. How now ! what 's the matter? sEne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you, My matter is so rash. There is at hand Paris your brother, and Deiphobus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us ; and for him forthwith, Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The Lady Cressida. Tro. Is it so concluded? sEne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy: They are at hand, and ready to effect it. Tro. How my achievements mock me ! I will go meet them : — and, my lord yEneas, We met by chance ; you did not find me here. sEne. Good, good, my lord ; the secrets of nature Have not more gift in taciturnity. [Exeunt TROILUS and ˆENEAS. Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost? The devil take Antenor ! the young prince will go mad : a plague upon Antenor ! I would they had broke 's neck ! Re-enter CRESSIDA. Cres. How now! what is the matter? who was here? Pan. Ah, ah ! Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where 's my lord? gone! tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter? Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above ! Cres. O the gods! what's the matter? Pan. Pr'ythee, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born? I knew thou wouldst be his death ! — O, poor gentleman ! — A plague upon Antenor ! Cres.

Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what 's the matter ? Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone ; thou art changed for Antenor : thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus : 'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it. Cres. O you immortal gods ! — I will not go. Pan. Thou must. Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father; I know no touch ot consanguinity ; No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me As the sweet Troilus. — O you gods divine ! Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood [death If ever she leave Troilus ! Time, force, and Do to this body what extremes you can ; But the strong base and building of my love Is as the very centre of the earth, Drawing all things to it.— I '11 go in and weep, — Pan. Do, do. Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks ; [heart Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. [Exeunt. SCENE III.— TROY. Street before PANDARUS' House. Enter PARIS, TROILUS, AENEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES. Par. It is great morning ; and the how prefix'd Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon : — good my brother Troilus, Tell you the lady what she is to do, And haste her to the purpose. Tro. SCENE IV.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 777 Think it an altar ; and thy brother Troilus A priest, there offering to it his own heart. [Exit. Par. I know what 'tis to love ; And would, as I shall pity, I could help ! — Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — TROY. A Room in PANDARUS' House. Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA. Pan. Be moderate, be moderate. Cres. Why tell you me of moderation ? The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste, And violenteth in a sense as strong [it? As that which causeth it : how can I moderate If I could temporize with my affection, Or brew it to a weak and colder palate, The like allayment could I give my grief : My love admits no qualifying dross ; No more my grief, in such a precious loss. Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Enter TROILUS. Ah, sweet ducks ! Cres. O Troilus ! Troilus ! [Embracing- him. Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here ! Let me embrace too. O heart, as the goodly saying is, — • O heart, heavy heart, Why sigh'st thou without breaking? where he answers again, Because thou canst not ease thy smart By silence nor by speaking. There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse : we see it, we see it. — How now, lambs ! [purity Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a That the bless'd gods, — as angry with my fancy, More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities, — take thee from me. Cres. Have the gods envy? Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay ; 'tis too plain a case. Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy? Tro. A hateful truth. Cres. What, and from Troilus too? Tro. From Troy and Troilus. Cres. Is it possible? Tro. And suddenly ; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows Even in the birth of our own lab'ring breath : We two, that with so many thousand sighs Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves With the rude brevity and discharge of one. Injurious time now, with a robber's haste, Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how : As many farewells as be stars in heaven, With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them, He fumbles up into a loose adieu ; And scants us with a single famish'd kiss, Distasted with the salt of broken tears. JEne. [Within.'} My lord, is the lady ready? Tro. Hark ! you are call'd. Some say the Genius so Cries,

Come! to him that instantly must die. — Bid them have patience ; she shall come anon. Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root? [Exit. Cres. I must, then, to the Grecians ? Tro. No remedy. Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks! When shall we see again ? Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart, — [is this ? Cres. I true ! how now ! what wicked deem Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly, For it is parting from us : I speak not be thou true, as fearing thee ; For I will throw my glove to death himself That there 's no maculation in thy heart : But be thou true, say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation ; be thou true, And I will see thee. [dangers Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to As infinite as imminent ! but I '11 be true. Tro. And I '11 grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve. [see you ? Cres. And you this glove. When shall I Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels, To give thee nightly visitation. But yet be true. Cres. O heavens ! — be true, again ! Tro. Hear why I speak it, love: The Grecian youths are full of quality ; They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing, And swelling o'er with arts and exercise : How novelty may move, and parts with person, Alas, a kind of godly jealousy, — Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin, — Makes me afeard. Cres. O heavens ! you love me not. Tro. Die I a villain, then ! In this I do not call your faith in question So mainly as my merit ; I cannot sing, Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,

778 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT iv. Nor play at subtle games ; fair virtues all, To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant : But I can tell, that in each grace of these There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted. Ores. Do you think I will ? Tro. No. But something may be done that we will not : And sometimes we are devils to ourselves, When we will tempt the frailty of our powers, Presuming on their changeful potency. ˆEne. \Within.~\ Nay, good my lord, — Tro. Come, kiss ; and let us part. Par. {Within.} Brother Troilus ! Tro. Good brother, come you hither ; And bring ˆEneas and the Grecian with you. Ores. My lord, will you be true ? Tro. Who, I ? alas, it is my vice, my fault : While others fish with craft for great opinion, I with great truth catch mere simplicity; Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns, With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare. Fear not my truth : the moral of my wit Is — plain and true ; there 's all the reach of it. Enter AENEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES. Welcome, Sir Diomed ! here is the lady Which for An tenor we deliver you: At the port, lord, I '11 give her to thy hand ; And by the way possess thee what she is. Entreat her fair ; and, by my soul, fair Greek, If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword, Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe As Priam is in Ilion. Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, So please you, save the thanks this prince expects : The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, Pleads your fair usage ; and to Diomed You shall be mistress, and command him wholly. Tro. Grecian,thou dost not use mecourteously , To shame the zeal of my petition to thee In praising her : I tell thee, lord of Greece, She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant. I charge thee use her well, even for my charge ; For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not, Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard, I '11 cut thy throat. Dio. O, be not mov'd, Prince Troilus : Let me be privileg'd by my place and message To be a speaker free ; when I am hence I '11 answer to my lust: and know you, lord, I '11 nothing do on charge : to her own worth She shall be priz'd; but that you say/' be 't so," I '11 speak it in my spirit and honour, "no." Tro. Come, to the port.— I'll tell thee, Diomed, [head. — This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy Lady, give me your hand ; and, as we walk, To our own selves bend we our needful talk. [Exeunt TRO., CRES., and DIOMEDES. [Trumpet within. Par. Hark ! Hector's trumpet. j&ne. How have we spent this morning? The prince must think me tardy and remiss, That swore to ride before him to the field. Par* 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with him. Dio. Let us make ready straight. j$Lne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity Let us address to tend on Hector's heels : The glory of our Troy doth this day lie On his fair worth and single chivalry. {Exeunt. SCENE V, — THE GRECIAN CAMP. Lists set out. Enter A.} AX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and others* Agam, Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair, Anticipating time. With starting courage Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy, Thou dreadful Ajax ; that the appalled air May pierce the head of the great combatant, And hale him hither. Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there 's my purse, Now crack thy lungs and split thy brazen pipe : Blow, villain, till thy sphered bias cheek Out-swell the colic of puff'd Aquilon : Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood ; Thou blow'st for Hector. {Trumpet sounds. Ulyss, No trumpet answers. Achil. 'Tis but early day. Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daughter ? Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait ; He rises on the toe : that spirit of his In aspiration lifts him from the earth. Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA. Agam. Is this the lady Cressid? Dio. Even she ? Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady. Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss. Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; 'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.

SCENB V.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 779 Nest. And very courtly counsel: I '11 begin. — So much for Nestor. [fair lady. Achil. I '11 take that winter from your lips, Achilles bids you welcome. Men. I had good argument for kissing once. Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now ; For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiinent, And parted thus you and your argument. Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns ! For which we lose our heads to gild his horns. Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; — this, mine; Patroclus kisses you. Men. O, this is trim ! Patr. Paris and I kiss evermore for him. Men. I '11 have my kiss, sir. — Lady, by your leave. Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive? Patr. Both take and give. Cres. I'll make my match to live, The kiss you take is better than you give ; Therefore no kiss. Men. I '11 give you boot, I '11 give you three for one. [none. Cres. You 're an odd man ; give even or give Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd. Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 'tis true, That you are odd, and he is even with you. Men. You fillip me o' the head. Cres. No, I '11 be sworn. Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn. — May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you ? Cres. You may. Ulyss. I do desire it. Cres. Why, beg then, do. Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss When Helen is a maid again, and his. Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due. [you. Ulyss. Never 's my day, and then a kiss of Dio. Lady, a word. — I'll bring you to your father. [DIOMEDES leads out CRESSIDA. Nest. A woman of quick sense. Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her ! There 's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, Nay, her foot speaks : her wanton spirits look out At every joint and motive of her body. O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue, That give a coasting welcome ere it comes, And wide unclasp the tables cf their thoughts To every ticklish reader ! set them down For sluttish spoils of opportunity, And daughters of the game. [Trumpet within. All. The Trojans' trumpet. Agam. Yonder comes the troop. Enter HECTOR, armed; ˆENEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants. ALne. Hail, all you state of Greece! what shall be done [purpose To him that victory commands? Or do you A victor shall be known? will you the knights Shall to the edge of all extremity Pursue each other : or shall be divided By any voice or order of the field? Hector bade ask. Agam. Which way would Hector have it ? s£ne. He cares not ; he '11 obey conditions. Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done, A little proudly, and great deal misprizing The knight oppos'd. j£ne. If not Achilles, sir, What is your name? Achil. If not Achilles, nothing. ALne. Therefore Achilles. But, whate'er, know this: — In the extremity of great and little Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector; The one almost as infinite as all, The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well, And that which looks like pride is courtesy. This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood : In love whereof, half Hector stays at home ; Half heart, hah hand, half Hector comes to seek [Greek. This blended knight, half Trojan and half Achil. A maiden battle then? — O, I perceive you. Re-enter DIOMEDES. Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. — Go, gentle knight, Stand by our Ajax ; as you and Lord ˆneas Consent upon the order of their fight So be it ; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath : the combatants being kin Half stints their strife before their strokes begin. [AjAX and HECTOR enter the lists. Ulyss. They are oppos'd already. Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy? [knight; Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true Not yet mature, yet matchless : firm of word ; Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue ; Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon calm'd :

78o TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT iv. His heart and hand both open and both free ; For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows ; Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty, Nor dignifies an impure thought with breath : Manly as Hector, but more dangerous ; For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes To tender objects; but he, in heat of action, Is more vindicative than jealous love: They call him Troilus ; and on him erect A second hope, as fairly built as Hector. Thus says yEneas ; one that knows the youth Even to his inches, and, with private soul, Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me. [Alarum. HECTOR and AJAX _/%>/ */. Again. They are in action. Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own ! Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st ; Awake thee ! Agam. His blows are well disposed : — there, Ajax ! Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease. &ne. Princes, enough, so please you. Ajax. I am not warm yet, let us fight again. Dio. As Hector pleases. Hect. Why, then will I no more : — Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son, A cousin-german to great Priam's seed ; The obligation of our blood forbids A gory emulation 'twixt us twain ; Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so, That thou could'st say This hand is Grecian all, And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood Runs on the dexter cheek , and this sinister Bounds in my fathers ; by Jove multipotent, Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member Wherein my swcrd had not impressure made Of our rank feud : but the just gods gainsay That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother, My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword Be drain'd ! Let me embrace thee, Ajax: By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms ; Hector would have them fall upon him thus : Cousin, all honour to thee ! Ajax. I thank thee, Hector : Thou art too gentle and too free a man : I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence A great addition earned in thy death. Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable, — On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st Oyes Cries, J^his is he, — could promise to himself A thought of added honour torn from Hector. sEne. There is expectance here from both the sides What further you will do. Hect. We '11 answer it ; The issue is embracement : — Ajax, farewell. Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success, — As selcl' I have the chance, — I would desire My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish ; and great Achilles Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector. Hect. ./Eneas, call my brother Troilus to me : And signify this loving interview To the expecters of our Trojan part ; [cousin ; Desire them home. — Give me thy hand, my I will go eat with thee, and see your knights. Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here. [by name ; Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes Shall find him by his large and portly size. Agam. Worthy of arms ! as welcome as to one That would be rid of such an enemy ; But that 's no welcome : understand more clear, What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks And formless ruin of oblivion ; But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, Bids thee, with most divine integrity, From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome. Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon, [to you. Agam. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less \To TROILUS. Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting ; — You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither. Hect. Who must we answer? &ne. The noble Menelaus. Hect. O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks ! Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath ; Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove : She 's well, but bade me not commend her to you. [theme. Men. Name her not now, sir ; she 's a deadly Hect. O, pardon ; I offend. [oft, Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth j and I have seen thee, As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed, Despising many forfeits and subduements, When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air, Not letting it decline on the declin'd, That I have said to some my standers-by, Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life! And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,

SCENE V.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 781 When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'dthee in, Like an Olympian wrestling : this have I seen ; But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel, I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire, And once fought with him: he was a soldier good; But, by great Mars, the captain of us all, Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee ; And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents. ˆ.ne. 'Tiˆ the old Nestor. Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle, That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time: — Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee. Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention, As they contend with thee in courtesy. Hect. I would they could. Nest. Ha! [morrow: — By this white beard, I 'd fight with thee toWell, welcome, welcome ! I have seen the time. Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands, When we have here her base and pillar by us. Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well. Ah, sir, there 's many a Greek and Trojan dead, Since first I saw yourself and Diomed In I lion, on your Greekish embassy. [ensue : Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would My prophecy is but half his journey yet ; For yonder walls, that pertly front your town, Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds, Must kiss their own feet. Hect. I must not believe you : There they stand yet ; and modestly I think The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost A drop of Grecian blood : the end crowns all ; And that old common arbitrator, time, Will one day end it. Ulyss. So to him we leave it. Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome : After the general, I beseech you next To feast with me, and see me at my tent. Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou !— Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee ; I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector, And quoted joint by joint. Hect. Is this Achilles? Achil. I am Achilles. [thee. Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on Achil. Behold thy fill. Hect. Nay, I have done already. AchiL Thou art too brief : I will the second time, As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb. Hect. O, like a book of sport thou 'It read me o'er ; But there 's more in me than thou understand'st. Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye? Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body [there, Shall I destroy him? whither there, or there, or That I may give the local wound a name, And make distinct the very breach whereout

Hector's great spirit flew : answer me, heavens ! Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man, To answer such a question : stand again : Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly. As to prenominate in nice conjecture Where thou wilt hit me dead? Achil. I tell thee, yea. Hect. Wert thou an oracle to tell me so, I 'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well; For I '11 not kill thee there, nor there, nor there ; But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm, I Ml kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er. — You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag, His insolence draws folly from my lips ; But I Ml endeavour deeds to match these words, Or may I never, — Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin : — And you, Achilles, let these threats alone, Till accident or purpose bring you to 't : You may have every day enough of Hector, If you have stomach ; the general state, I fear, Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him. Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field : We have had pelting wars since you refus'd The Grecians' cause. Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector? To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death; To-night all friends. Hect. Thy hand upon that match. Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent ; There in the full convive we : afterwards, As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him. — Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow, That this great soldier may his welcome know. \Exeunt all but TRO. and ULYSSES. Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you, In what place of ths field doth Calchas keep? Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus : There Diomed doth feast with him to-night ; Who neither looks upon the heaven nor earth, But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view On the fair Cressid. Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,

782 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT v. After we part from Agamemnon's tent, To bring me thither ? Ulyss. You shall command me, sir. As gentle tell me, of what honour was This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there That wails her absence? Tro. Q, sir, to such as boasting show their scars A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord? She was belov'd, she lov'd ; she is, and doth : But, still, sweet love is food for fortune's tooth. [Exeunt. ACT V. SCENE I. — THE GRECIAN CAMP. ACHILLES' Tent. Before Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS. Achil. I '11 heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night, Which with my scimitar I '11 cool to-morrow. — Patroclus, let us feast him to the height. Pair. Here comes Thersites. Enter THERSITES. Achil. How now, thou core of envy! Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news? Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot worshippers, here 's a letter for thee. Achil. From whence, fragment? Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy. Patr. Who keeps the tent now? [wound. Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's Patr. Well said Adversity! and what need these tricks? Ther. Pr'ythee, be silent, boy ; I profit not by thy talk ; thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet. Patr. Male varlet, you rogue ! what's that? Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases of the south, the guts griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, limekilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled feesimple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries ! Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus? Ther. Do I curse thee? Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt ; you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no. Ther. No I why art thou, then, exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleave-silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, — diminutives of nature ! Patr. Out, gall ! Ther. Finch egg ! [quite Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle. Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba ; A token from her daughter, my fair love ; Both taxing me and gaging me to keep An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it : Fall, Greeks ; fail, fame ; honour ; or go or stay ;

My major vow lies here, this I '11 obey. — Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent; This night in banqueting must all be spent. — Away, Patroclus! _Exeunt ACHIL. and PATR. Ther. With too much blood and too little brain these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I '11 be a curer of madmen. Here 's Agamemnon, — an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails ; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax : and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull, — the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds ; a thrifty shoeinghorn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg, — to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox, were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus, — I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. — Hoy-day ! spirits and fires ! Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, -with lights. Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong. Ajax. No, yonder 'tis ; There, where we see the lights. Hect. I trouble you. Ajax. No, not a whit. Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you. Re-enter ACHILLES. Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all. [good night. Again. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

How the devil luxury, with his fat rump and potato finger, tickles these together ! Fry, lechery, fry ! Dio. But will you, then? Cres. In faith, I will, la ; never trust me else. Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it. Cres. I '11 fetch you one. [Exit. Ulyss. You have sworn patience. Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord ; I will not be myself, nor have cognition Of what I feel : I am all patience. Re-enter CRESSIDA. Ther. Now the pledge ; now, now, now ! Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. Tro. O, beauty ! where 's thy faith ? Ulyss. My lord,— Tro. I will be patient ; outwardly I will. Cres. You look upon that sleeve ; behold it well.— He lov'd me — O false wench! — Give't me again. Dio. Whose was 't ? Cres. It is no matter, now I have 't again. I will not meet with you to-morrow night : I pr'ythee, Diomed, visit me no more, [stone. Ther. Now she sharpens :— Well said, WhetDio. I shall have it. Cres. What, this? Dio. Ay, that. Cres. O, all you gods? — O pretty, pretty pledge ! Thy master now lies thinking in his bed Of thee and me ; and sighs, and takes my glove, And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, As I kiss thee. — Nay, do not snatch it from me ; He that takes that doth take my heart withal. Dio. I had your heart before, this follows it. Tro. I did swear patience. Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not ; I '11 give you something else. Dio. I will have this: whose was it? Cres. It is no matter. Dio. Come, tell me whose it was. Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will. But, now you have it, take it. Dio. Whose was it? Cres. By all Diana's waiting women yond, And by herself, I will not tell you whose. Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm ; And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it. Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn, It should be challeng'd. Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; — and yet it is not ; I will not keep my word. Dio. Why, then, farewell ; Thou never shalt mock Diomed again, [word Cres. You shall not go : — one cannot speak a But it straight starts you. Dio. I do not like this fooling. Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you pleases me best. Dio. What, shall I come? the hour? Cres. Ay, come : — O Jove ! Do come : — I shall be plagu'd. Dio. Farewell till then. Cres. Goodnight: I pr'ythee, come. [Exit DIOMEDES. Troilus, farewell ! one eye yet looks on thee ; But with my heart the other eye doth see. Ah, poor our sex ! this fault in us I find, The error of our eye directs our mind : What error leads must err ; O, then conclude, Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude. [Exit. Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more, Unless she said, My mind is now turn'd whore. Ulyss. All 's done, my lord. Tro. It is. Ulyss. Why stay we, then? Tro. To make a recordation to my soul Of every syllable that here was spoke. But if I tell how these two did co-act, Shall I not lie in publishing a truth? Sith yet there is a credence in my heart, An esperance so obstinately strong, That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears ; As if those organs had deceptious functions Created only to calumniate. Was Cressid here? Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan. Tro. She was not, sure. Ulyss. Most sure she was. Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness. [but now. Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord : Cressid was here Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood ! Think, we had mothers ; do not give advantage To stubborn critics, — apt, without a theme, For depravation, — to square the general sex By Cressid's rule : rather think this not Cressid. Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers? Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

SCENE II.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 785 Ther. Will he swagger himself out on 's own eyes? Tro. This she ? no; this is Diomed's Cressida : If beauty have a soul, this is not she; If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimonies, If sanctimony be the gods' delight, If there be rule in unity itself, This is not she. O madness of discourse, That cause sets up with and against itself ! Bi-fold authority ! where reason can revolt Without perdition, and loss assume all reason Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid! Within my soul there doth conduce a fight Of this strange nature, tnat a thing inseparate Divides more wider than the sky and earth ; And yet the spacious breadth of this division Admits no orifex for a point, as subtle As Ariachne's broken woof, to enter. Instance, O instance ! strong as Pluto's gates ; Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven : Instance, O instance ! strong as heaven itself; The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos' d ; And with another note, five-finger-tied, The fractions of her faith, orts of her love, The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy relics Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed. Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be but half-attach'd With that which here his passion doth express ? Tro. Ay, Greek ; and that shall be divulged well In characters as red as Mars his heart [fancy Inflam'd with Venus: never did young man With so eternal and so fix'd a soul. Hark, Greek : as much as I do Cressid love, So much by weight hate I her Diomed : That sleeve is mine that he '11 bear on his helm ; Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill My sword should bite it : not the dreadful spout Which shipmen do the hurricano call, Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun, Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear In his descent, than shall my prompted sword Falling on Diomed. Ther. He '11 tickle it for his concupy. Tro. O Cressid ! O false Cressid ! false, false, false ! Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, And they '11 seem glorious. Ulyss. O, contain yourself ; Your passion draws ears hither. Enter /ENEAS. ALne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord : Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy ; Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home. Tro. Have with you, prince. — My courteous lord, adieu. — Farewell, revolted fair ! — and, Diomed, Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head ! Ulyss. I '11 bring you to the gates. Tro. Accept distracted thanks. {Exeunt TRO., ˆNE., and ULYSS. Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed ! I would croak like a raven ; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery ; still wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion : a burning devil take them ! SCENE III. — TROY. Before PRIAM'S Palace. Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE. And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd To stop his ears against admonishment ? Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day. Hect. You train me to offend you ; get you in : By all the everlasting gods, I '11 go ! And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day. Hect. No more, I say. Enter CASSANDRA. Cas. Where is my brother Hector ? And, Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent. Consort with me in loud and dear petition, Pursue we him on knees ; for I have dream'd Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter. Cas. O, 'tis true. Hect. Ho ! bid my trumpet sound ! Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother. [me swear. Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows: They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd Than spotted livers in the sacrifice. And. O, be persuaded ! do not count it holy To hurt by being just : it is as lawful, For we would give much, to use violent thefts, And rob in the behalf of charity. [vow ; Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the But vows to every purpose must not hold : Unarm, sweet Hector. Hect. Hold you still, I say ; Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate : Life every man holds dear ; but the dear man Holds honour far more precious dear than life. —

786 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT v. Enter TROILUS. How now, young man ! mean'st thou to fight to-day ? And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade. [Exit CASSANDRA. Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth ; I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry : Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong, And tempt not yet the brushes of the war. Unarm thee, go ; and doubt thou not, brave boy, I '11 stand to-day for thee, and me, and Troy. Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you, Which better fits a lion than a man. Hect, What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it. [fall, Tro. When many times the captive Grecians Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword, You bid them rise and live. Hect, O, 'tis fair play. Tro. Fool's play, by Heaven, Hector. Hect. How now ! how now ! Tro. For the love of all the gods, Let 3s leave the hermit pity with our mothers ; And when we have our armours buckled on, The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords ; Spur them to ruthful work, rein them from ruth. Hect. Fie, savage, fie!. Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars. Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day, Tro Who should withhold me ? Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire ; Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees, Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears ; Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn, Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way, But by my ruin. Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM. Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast: He is thy crutch ; now if thou lose thy stay, Thou on him leaning and all Troy on thee, Fall all together. Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back : Thy wife hath dream'd ; thy mother hath had visions ; Cassandra doth foresee ; and I myself Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt, To tell thee that this day is ominous : Therefore, come back. Hect. ^Eneas is a-field ; And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks, Even in the faith of valour, to appear This morning to them. Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go. Hect. I must not break my faith. You know me dutiful ; therefore, dear sir, Let me not shame respect ; but give me leave To take that course by your consent and voice Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam. Cas. O Priam, yield not to him ! And. Do not, dear father. Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you : Upon the love you bear me, get you in. [Exit ANDROMACHE. Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl Makes all these bodements. Cas. O, farewell, dear Hector ! Look, how thou diest ! look, how thy eye turns pale! Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents ! Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out! How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth! Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement, Like witless antics, one another meet, And all cry, Hector ! Hector 3s dead ! O Hector ! Tro. Away ! away ! [my leave : Cas. Farewell: — yet, soft! — Hector I take Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exit. Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim : [fight ; Go in, and cheer the town: v/e'll forth, and Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night. [about thee ! Pri. Farewells the gods with safety stand [Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR. Alarums. Tro. They are at it, hark ! Proud Diomed, believe, I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve. As TROILUS is going out, enter from the other side PANDARUS. Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear? Tro. What now? [girl. Pan. Here 's a letter come from yond poor Tro. Let me read, Pan. A whoreson phtisick, a whoreson rascally phtisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl ; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that unless a man were cursed I cannot tell what to think on't. — What says she there? Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;

SCENE IV.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 787 The effect doth operate another way. — [Tearing the letter. Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together.— My love with words and errors still she feeds ; But edifies another with her deeds. {Exeunt severally. SCENE IV. — Plains between Troy and the Grecian Camp. Alarums : excursions. Enter THERSITES. Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there .in his helm : I would fain see them meet; that that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeve-less errand. O' the t'other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals, — that stale old mouseeaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, — is not proved worth a blackberry: — they set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day ; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft ! here come sleeve, and t'other. Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following. Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx I would swim after. Dio. Thou dost miscall retire: I do not fly ; but advantageous care Withdrew me from the odds of multitude: Have at thee ! Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian ! now for thy whore, Trojan ! — now the sleeve, now the sleeve ! [Exeunt TRO. and DiQ.t fighting. Enter HECTOR. Hect. What art thou, Greek! art thou for Hector's match? Art thou of blood and honour? Ther. No, no, — I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave ; a very filthy rogue. Hect. I do believe thee ; — live. [Exit. Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me ; but a plague break thy neck for frighting me! — What 's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle. Yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I '11 seek them. [Exit. SCENE V. — Another part of the Plains. Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant. Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus1 horse ; Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid: Fellow, commend my service to her beauty ; Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan, And am her knight by proof. Set v. I go, my lord.

[Exit. Enter AGAMEMNON. Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus Hath beat down Menon : bastard Margarelon Hath Doreus prisoner, And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the pashed corses of the kings Epistrophus and Cedius : Polixenes is slain ; Amphimacus and Thoas deadly hurt ; Patroclus ta'en, or slain ; and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruis'd : the dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers : — haste we, Diomed, To reinforcement, or we perish all. Enter NESTOR, Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles ; And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame. — There is a thousand Hectors in the field : Now here he fights on Galathe his horse, And there lacks work ; anon he 's there afoot, And there they fly or die, like scaled skulls Before the belching whale ; then is he yonder, And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge, Fall down before him like the mower's swath : Here, there, and everywhere he leavesand takes; Dexterity so obeying appetite That what he will he does ; and does so much That proof is call'd impossibility. Enter ULYSSES. Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance: Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood, Together with his mangl'd Myrmidons, That noiseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him, Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend, And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it, Roaring for Troilus ; who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution; Engaging and redeeming of himself With such a careless force and forceless care

788 TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. [ACT v. As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all. Enter AjAX. Ajax. Troilus ! thou coward Troilus ! [Exit. Dio. Ay, there, there. Nest. So, so, we draw together. Enter ACHILLES. Achil. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face ; Know what it is to meet Achilles angry : — Hector! where Js Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt. SCENE VI.— Another Part of the Plains. Enter AJAX. Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head ! Enter DlOMEDES. Dio. Troilus, I say ! where 's Troilus ? Ajax. What wouldst thou ? Dio. I would correct him. Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office [Troilus ! Ere that correction. — Troilus, I say! what, Enter TROILUS. Tro. O traitor Diomed ! — turn thy false face, thou traitor, And pay thy life thou owest me for my horse ! Dio. Ha ! art thou there ? Ajax. I'llfightwith him alone: stand, Diomed. Dio. He is my prize. I will not look upon. Tro. Come, both, you cogging Greeks ; have at you both. [Exeunt fighting. Enter HECTOR. Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother ! Enter ACHILLES. Achil. Now do I see thee, ha ! have at thee, Hector ! Hect. Pause, if thou wilt. [Trojan : Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Be happy that my arms are out of use : My rest and negligence befriend thee now, But thou anon shalt hear of me again; Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit. Hect. Fare thee well :— I would have been much more a fresher man Had I expected thee. — How now, my brother ! Re-enter TROILUS. Tro. Ajax hath ta'en ˆEneas : shall it be ? No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven, He shall not carry him ; I '11 be ta'en too, Or bring him off. — fate, hear me what I say! I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit. Enter one in sumptuous armoiir. Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark : — No? wilt thou not ? — I like thy armour well ; I '11 frush it, and unlock the rivets all. [abide? But I 11 be master of it .—Wilt thou not, beast, Why then, fly on, I '11 hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt. SCENE VII. — Another Part of the Plains. Enter ACHILLES, ivtth Myrmidons. Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons ; Mark what I say. — Attend me where I wheel: Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath: And when I have the bloody Hector found, Empale him with your weapons round about ; In fellest manner execute your aims. Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye: — It is decreed Hector the great must die. [Exeunt. Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting; then TKERSITES. Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull ! now, dog ! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo ! now my double-henned sparrow ! 'loo, Paris, 'loo ! The bull has the game : — 'ware horns, ho ! [Exeunt PARIS and MENELAUS. Enter MARGARELON. Mar. Turn, slave, and fight. Ther. What art thou ? Mar. A bastard son of Priam's. Ther I am a bastard too ; I love bastards : I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in everything illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard ? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us: if the son of a whore fight for a whore he tempts judgment : farewell, bastard. [Exit. Mar. The devil take thee, coward ! [Exit. SCENE VIII. — Another Part of the Plains. Enter HECTOR. Hect. Most putrified core, so fair without, Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy lite. Now is my day's work done: I'll take good breath:

SCENE IX.] TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 789 Rest, sword ; thou hast thy fill of blood and death ! [Pˆlts off his helmet and hangs his shield behind him. Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons, Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set; How ugly night comes breathing at his heels ; Even with the vail and dark'ning of the sun, To close the day up, Hector's life is done. Hect. I am unarm'd ; forego this vantage, Greek. [I seek. Achil. Strike, fellows, strike ; this is the man [HECTOR falls. So, Ilion, fall thou next! now, Troy, sink down! Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone. — On, Myrmidons; and cry you all amain, Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain. [A retreat sounded. Hark ! a retire upon our Grecian part, [my lord. Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth, And, stickler-like, the armies separate. My half-supp'd sword, that frankly would have fed, [bed— Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to [Sheathes his sword. Come, tie his body to my horse's tail ; Along the field I will the Trojan trail. [Exeunt. SCENE IK.— Another Part of the Plains. Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, atid others, man king. Shouts within. Again. Hark ! hark ! what shout is that ? Nest. Peace, drums ! [Achilles ! [Within.] Achilles! Achilles! Hector 's slain, Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles. Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be ; Great Hector was a man as good as he. [sent Agam. March patiently along. — Let one be To pray Achilles see us at our tent. — If in his death the gods have us befriended ; Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. [Exeunt, marching. SCENE ˆ.—Another Part of the Plains. Enter AENEAS and Trojans. sEne. Stand, ho ! yet are we masters of the field: Never go home ; here starve we out the night. Enter TROILUS. Tro. Hector is slain. All. Hector !— the gods forbid ! Tro. He 's dead ; and at the murderer's horse's tail, [field.— In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed! [Troy! Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy. And linger not our sure destructions on ! JEne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host. Tro. You understand me not that tell me so : I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death ; But dare all imminence that gods and men Address their dangers in. Hector is gone : Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba

? Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd Go in to Troy, and say there, Hector 's dead : There is a word will Priam turn to stone ; Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives, Cold statues of the youth ; and, in a word, Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away: Hector is dead ; there is no more to say. Stay yet. — You vile abominable tents, Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains, Let Titan rise" as early as he dare, I'll through and through you! — And, thou great-siz'd coward, No space of earth shall sunder our two hates: I '11 haunt thee like a wicked conscience still, That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's thoughts. — Strike a free march to Troy ! — with comfort go : Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe. [Exeunt yENEAS and Trojans. As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side, PANDARUS. Pan. But hear you, hear you ! Tro. Hence, broker lackey! ignomy and shame pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name ! [Exit. Pan. A goodly medicine for my aching bones! — O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set at work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so loved, and the performance so loathed ? what verse for it? what instance for it?— Let me see: — Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing Till he hath lost his honey and his sting ; And being once subdued in armed tail, Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail —

I have not seen you long: how goes the world ? Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows. Poet. Ay, that 's well known : But what particular rarity ? what strange, Which manifold record not matches ? See, Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjur'd to attend I know the merchant. Pain. I know them both; the other 's a jeweller. Mer. O, 'tis a worthy lord ! few. 792 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT i. Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life. Here is a touch ; is 't good ? Poet. I will say of it It tutors nature : artificial strife Lives in these touches, livelier than life. Enter certain Senators, and pass over. Pain. How this lord is follow'd ! Poet. The senators of Athens: — happy man ! Pain. Look, more ! Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors. I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man, Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug With amplest entertainment . my free drift Halts not particularly, but moves itself In a wide sea of wax : no levell'd malice Infects one comma in the course I hold ; But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on, Leaving no track behind. Pain. How shall I understand you ? Poet. I will unbolt to you. You see how all conditions, how all minds, — As well of glib and slippery creatures as Of grave and austere quality, — tender down Their services to Lord Timon r his large fortune, Upon his good and gracious nature hanging, Subdues and properties to his love and tendance All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer To Apemantus, that few things loves better Than to abhor himself: even he drops down The knee before him, and returns in peace Most rich in Timon's nod. Pain. I saw them speak together Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd : the base o' the mount Is rank'd with all deserts, all kinds of natures, That labour on the bosom of this sphere To propagate their states: amongst them all, Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd, One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame, Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her ; [servants Whose present grace to present slaves and Translates his rivals. Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope. This throne, this Fortune, andthishill, methinks, With one man beckon'd from the rest below, Bowing his head against the steepy mount To climb his happiness, would be well express'd In our condition. Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on. All those which were his fellows but of late, — Some better than his value, — on the moment Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance, Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear, Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him Drink the free air. Pain. Ay, marry, what of these ? Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood, Spurnsdownher late belov'd, all his dependents, Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top, Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down, Not one accompanying his declining foot. Pain. 'Tis common : A thousand moraJ paintings I can show That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen The foot above the head. Trumpets sound. Enter TlMON, attended ; the Servant of VWIIDIVS talking with him. Tun. Imprison'd is he, say you ? Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt; His means most short, his creditors most strait : Your honourable letter he desires To those have shut him up ; which failing him, Periods his comfort. Tim. Noble Ventidius ! Well; I am not of that feather to shake oft [him My friend when he most needs me, I do know A gentleman that well deserves a help, — [him. Which he shall have ; I '11 pay the debt, and free Ven. Serv. Your lordship ever binds him. Tim. Commend me to him : I will send his ransom \ And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come tome : — 'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, But to support him after. — Fare you well. Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour ! [Exit. Enter an Old Athenian. Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak. Tim. Freely, good father. Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius. Tim. I have so : what of him ? Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee. Tim. Attends he here, or no ? — Lucilius ! LUCILIUS comes forward Jrom among the Attendants. Luc. Here, at your lordship's service. Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature, By night frequents my house. I am a man That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift ;

SCENE I.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 793 And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd Than one which holds a trencher. Tim. Well ; what further ? Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else, On whom I may confer what I have got : The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride, And I have bred her at my dearest cost In qualities of the best. This man of thine Attempts her love : I pr'ythee, noble lord, join with me to forbid him her resort ; Myself have spoke in vain. Tim. The man is honest. Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon : His honesty rewards him in itself; It must not bear my daughter. Tim. Does she love him ? Old Ath. She is young and apt : Our own precedent passions do instruct us What levity 's in youth. Tim. [To LUCILIUS.] Love you the maid? Luc. Ay, my good lord ; and she accepts of it. [missing, Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be I call the gods to witness, I will choose Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world, And dispossess her all. Tim. How shall she be endow'd, If she be mated with an equal husband ? Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future all. [long : Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me To build his fortune I will strain a little, For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter : What you bestow, in him I '11 counterpoise, And make him weigh with her. Old Ath. Most noble lord, Pawn me to this your honour, she is his. Tim. My hand to thee ; mine honour on my promise. [may Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship : never That state or fortune fall into my keeping Which is not ow'd to you ! [Exeunt LUCILIUS and Old Athenian. Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship ! [anon : Tim. I thank you ; you shall hear from me Go not away. — What have you there, my friend ? Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech Your lordship to accept. Tim. Painting is welcome. The painting is almost the natural man ; For since dishonour traffics with man's nature, He is but outside : these pencill'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work ; And you shall find I like it : wait attendance .Till you hear further from me. Pain. The gods preserve you ! Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand : We must needs dine together. — Sir, your jewel Hath suffer'd under praise. Jew. What, my lord! dispraise? Tim. A mere satiety of commendations, If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd It would unclew m : quite. Jew. My lord, 'tis rated As those which sell would give. But you well know, Things of light value, differing in the owners, Are prized by their masters: believe 't, dear lord, You mend the jewel by the wearing it. Tim. Well mock'd. [common tongue, Mer. No, my good lord ; he speaks the Which all men speak with him. [chid ? Tim. Look, who comes here: will you be Enter APEMANTUS. Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship. Mer. He '11 spare none. Tim. Good-morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus ! [good-morrow ; Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest. [know'st them not. Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou Apem. Are they not Athenians ? Tim. Yes. Apem. Then I repent not. Jew. You know me, Apemantus? Apem. Thou knowest I do ; I call'd thee by thy name. Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus. Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon. Tim. Whither art going ? [brains. Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's Tim. That 's a deed thou 'It die for. [law. Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus ? Apem. The best, for the innocence. Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it? Apem. He wrought better that made the painter ; and yet he 's but a filthy piece of work. Pain. You are a dog. Apem. Thy mother's of my generation: what 's she, if I be a dog ? Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus ? Apem. No ; I eat not lords. Tim. An thou shouldst, thou 'dst anger ladies. Apem. O, they eat lords ; so they come by great bellies. Tim. That 's a lascivious apprehension.

794 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT i. Apem. So thou apprehendest it : take it for thy labour. Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apeman tus ? Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit. Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth? Apem. Not worth my thinking, — How now, poet! Poet. How now, philosopher ! Apem. Thou liest. Poet. Art not one ? Apem. Yes. Poet. Then I lie not. Apem. Art not a poet ? Poet. Yes. Apem. Then thou liest : look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow. Poet. That 's not feign'd, — he is so. Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour : he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord ! Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus ? Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart. Tim. What, thyself? Apem. Ay. Tim. Wherefore? Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord. — Art not thou a merchant ? Mer. Ay, Apemantus. Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not ! Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it. Apem. Traffic 's thy god, and thy god confound thee ! Trumpet sounds. Enter a Servant. Tim. What trumpet 's that ? Serv. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse, All of companionship. Tim. Pray, entertain them ; give them guide to us. — [Exeunt some Attendants. You must needs dine with me: — go not you hence Till I have thank'd you : — when dinner 's done Show me this piece. — I am joyful of your sights. Enter ALCIBIADES, with his company. Most welcome, sir ! [They salute. Apem. So, so, there ! — Aches contract and starve your supple joints! — That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves, [bred out And all this court'sy! The strain of man's Into baboon and monkey. Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed Most hungerly on your sight. Tim. Right welcome, sir ! Ere we depart we '11 share a bounteous time In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in. [Exeunt all but APEMANTUS. Enter Two Lords. I Lord. What time o' day is't, Apemantus? Apem. Time to be honest. 1 Lord. That time serves still, [omitt'st it. Apem. The more accursed thou, that still 2 Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast. Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools. 2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well. Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me fare well twice. 2 Lord. Why, Apemantus? Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none. 1 Lord. Hang thyself. Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding : make thy requests to thy friend. 2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I '11 spurn thee hence. Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' the ass. [Exit. 1 Lord. He 's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes The very heart of kindness. [gold, 2 Lord. He pours it out ; Plutus, the god of Is but his steward : no meed but he repays Sevenfold above itself ; no gift to him But breeds the giver a return exceeding All use of quittance. 1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries That ever govern'd man. [Shall we in ? 2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes ! i Lord. I '11 keep you company. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ATHENS. A Room of State in TIMON'S House. Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and others attending; then enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, Lucius, LUCULLUS, SEMPRONIUS, andother Athenian Senators, with VENTIDIUS, and Attendants. Then comes ; dropping after all \ APEMANTUS, discontentedly. Ven. Most honour'd Timon, [father's age, It hath pleas'd the gods to remember my And call him to long peace. He is gone happy, and has left me rich : Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound

SCENE II.} TIMON OF ATHENS. 795 To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help I deriv'd liberty. Tim. O, by no means, Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love: I gave it freely ever ; and there 's none Can truly say he gives if he receives : [dare If our betters play at that game, we must not To imitate them ; faults that are rich are fair. Ven. A noble spirit ! [They all stand ceremoniously looking on TIMON. Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes, Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown ; But where there is true friendship there needs none. Pray, sit ; more welcome are ye to my fortunes Than my fortunes to me. [They sit. I Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it. Apern. Ho, ho, confess'd it ! hang'd it, have you not ? Tim. O, Apemantus ! — you are welcome. Apem. No ; You shall not make me welcome. I come to have thee thrust me out of doors. Tim. Fie, thou art a churl ; you have got a humour there Does not become a man ; 'tis much to blame. — They say, my lords, ira furor brevis est; But yond man is ever angry. Go, let him have a table by himself; For he does neither affect company Nor is he fit for 't, indeed. Apem. Let me stay at thine apparel, Timon : I come to observe ; I give thee warning on 't. Tim* I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian, therefore welcome: I myself would have no power; pr'ythee, let my meat make thee silent. Apem. I scorn thy meat ; 'twould choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee. — O you gods, what a number of men eat Timon, and he sees 'em not ! it grieves me to see So many dip their meat in one man's blood ; And all the madness is, he cheers them up too. I wonder men dare trust themselves with men : Methinks they should invite them without knives; Good for their meat and safer for their lives. There 's much example for 't ; the fellow that sits next him now, parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him : 't has been prov'd. If I were a huge man I should fear to drink at meals, Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes : [throats. Great men should drink with harness on their Tim. My lord, in heart ; and let the health go round. 2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord. Apem. Flow this way ! A brave fellow ! he keeps his tides well. — Those healths will make thee and

thy state look ill, Timon. Here 's that which is too weak to be a sinner, Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire : This and my food are equals ; there 's no odds : Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods. APEMANTUS' GRACE. Immortal gods, I crave no pelf; I pray for no man but myself: Grant I may never prove so fond, To trust man on his oath or bond ; Or a harlot for her weeping ; Or a dog that seems a -sleeping; Or a keeper with my ireedom ; Or my friends, if I should need 'em. Amen So fall to t : Rich men sin, and I eat root. [Eats and drinks. Much good dich thy good heart, Apemantus ! Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now. Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord. Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends. Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there 's no meat like them ; I could wish my best friend at such a feast. Apem. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies, then; that then thou might'st kill 'em, and bid me to 'em. i Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect. Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you : how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em ; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do

796 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT i. benefits : and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes ! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks : to forget their faults I drink to you. Apem. Thou weepest to make them drink, Timon. [eyes, 2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our And at that instant like a babe sprung up. Apem. Ho, ho ! I laugh to think that babe a bastard. [me much. 3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd Apem. Much ! [Tticket sounded. Tim. What means that trump? Enter a Servant. How now ! Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance. Tim. Ladies! what are their wills? Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures. Tim. I pray, let them be admitted. Enter CUPID. Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon ; — and to all That of his bounties taste ! — The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely To gratulate thy plenteous bosom : The ear, taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy table rise ; They only now come but to feast thine eyes. Tim. They are welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance. Music, make their welcome ! [Exit CUPID. I Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you 're belov'd. Music. Re-enter CUPID, with, a mask of Ladies as Amazons , with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing. Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way! They dance ! they are mad women. Like madness is the glory of this life, As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. We make ourselves fools to disport ourselves, And spend our flatteries to drink those men Upon whose age we void it up again, With poisonous spite and envy. Who lives that 's not depraved or depraves ? Who dies that bears not one spurn to their graves Of their friends' gift? I should fear those that dance before me now Would one day stamp upon me: 't has been done; Men shut their doors against a setting sun. The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of TIMON ; and, to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease. Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies, Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind ; You have added worth unto 't and lustre, And entertain'd me with mine own device ; I am to thank you for 't. [best. I Lady. My lord, you take us even at the Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me. [you : Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends Please you to dispose yourselves. All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord. [Exetint CUPID and Ladies. Tim. Flavius, — Flav. My lord ? Tim. The little casket bring me hither. Flav. Yes, my lord. — [Aside.'} More jewels yet! There is no crossing him in his humour, Else I should tell him,— well, i' faith, I should, When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could. 'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. [Exit, and returns with the casket. 1 Lord. Where be our men ? Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness. 2 Lord. Our horses ! Tim. O my friends, I have one word to say to you. Look you, my good lord, I must entreat you, honour me so much As to advance this jewel ; accept it, and wear it. Kind my lord. I Lord. I am so far already in your gifts, — All. So are we all. Enter a Servant. Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate Newly alighted, and come to visit you. Tim. They are fairly welcome. Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word ; it does concern you near. Tim. Near; why, then, another time I'll hear thee: [entertainment. I pr'ythee, let's be provided to show 'em Flav. I scarce know how.

SCENE II.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 797 Enter another Servant. 2 Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius, Out of his free love, hath presented to you Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver. Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents Be worthily entertained. Enter a third Servant. How now ! what news ? 3 Serv, Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him ; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds. Tim. I '11 hunt with him ; and let them be receiv'd, Not without fair reward. Flav. [Aside.'} What will this come to? He commands us to provide, and give great gifts, And all out of an empty coffer: Nor will he know his purse ; or yield me this, To show him what a beggar his heart is, Being of no power to make his wishes good : His promises fly so beyond his state That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes For every word : he is so kind that he now Pays interest for 't ; his land 's put to their books. Well, would I were gently put out of office Before I were forc'd out ! Happier is he that has no friend to feed Than such that do e'en enemies exceed. I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit. Tim. You do yourselves Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits : Here, my lord, a trifle of our love. 2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it 3 Lord. O, he is the very soul of bounty ! Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser I rode on : it is yours because you lik'd it. 3 Lord. O, I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that. [know no man Tim. You may take my word, my lord ; I Can justly praise but what he does affect: I weigh my friend's affection with mine own ; I '11 tell you true. I '11 call to you. All Lords. O, none so welcome. Tim. I take all and your several visitations So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give ; Methinks I could deal kingdoms to my friends And ne'er be weary. — Alcibiades, Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich ; It comes in charity to thee : for all thy living Is 'mongst the dead ; and all the lands thou hast Lie in a pitch'd field. Alctb. Ay, defil'd land, my lord. 1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound, — Tim. And so Am I to you. 2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd, — Tim. All to you. — Lights, more lights. I Lord. The best of happiness, Honour, and fortunes keep with you, Lord Timon ! Tim. Ready for his friends. [Exeunt ALCIBIADES, Lords, &*c. Apem.

What a coil 's here ! Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums ! I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs : [legs. Methinks false hearts should never have sound Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies. [sullen Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not I would be good to thee. Apem. No, I '11 nothing : for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee ; and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly : what need these feasts, pomps, and vain glories? Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell ; and come with better music. [Exit. Apem. So ; — thou 'It not hear me now, — thou shall not then, I '11 lock thy heaven from thee. O, that men's ears should be To counsel deaf, but not to flattery ! [Exit. ACT II. SCENE I. — ATHENS. A Room in a Senator's House. Enter a Senator, with papers in his hand. Sen. And late, five thousand ; — to Varro and to Isidore [sum, He owes nine thousand ; besides my former Which makes it five-and-twenty. — Still in motion Of raging \\aste ? It cannot hold ; it will not. If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold : If I would sell my horse and buy twenty more Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon, Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight, And able horses : no porter at his gate ; But rather one that smiles, and still invites All that pass by. It cannot hold ; no reason

798 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT II. Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho ! Caphis, I say ! Enter CAPHIS. Caph. Here, sir ; what is your pleasure ? Sen. Get on your cloak and haste you to Lord Timon ; Importune him for my moneys ; be not ceas'd With slight denial ; nor then silenc'd, when — Commend me to your master — and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus : but tell him My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn Out of mine own ; his days and times are past, And my reliances on his fracted dates Have smit my credit : I love and honour him ; But must not break my back to heal his finger : Immediate are my needs ; and my relief Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words, But find supply immediate. Get you gone : Put on a most importunate aspect, A visage of demand ; for, I do fear, When every feather sticks in his own wing Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone. Caph. I go, sir. Sen. Take the bonds along with you, And have the dates in compt. Caph. I will, sir. Sen. Go. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ATHENS. A Hall in TIMON'S House. Enter FLAVIUS, "with many bills in his hand. Flav. No care, no stop ! so senseless of expense That he will neither know how to maintain it Nor cease his flow of riot : takes no account How things go from him ; nor resumes no care Of what is to continue : never mind Was to be so unwise to be so kind. What shall be done ? he will not hear, till feel : I must be round with him now he comes from hunting. Fie, fie, fie, fie ! Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO. Caph. Good -even, Varro : what, You come for money ? Var. Serv. Is 't not your business too ? Caph. It is : — and yours too, Isidore ? Isid. Serv. It is so. Caph. Would we were all discharg'd ! Var. Serv. I fear it. Caph. Here comes the lord. Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, &e. Tim. So soon as dinner 's done we '11 forth again, My Alcibiades. — With me ? what is your will ? Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues. Tim. Dues ! whence are you ? Caph. Of Athens here, my lord. Tim. Go to my steward. [me off Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put To the succession of new days this month : My master is awak'd by great occasion To call upon his own ; and humbly prays you That, with your other noble parts, you '11 suit In giving him his right. Tim. Mine honest friend, I pr'ythee but repair to me next morning. Caph. Nay, good my lord, — Tim.

Contain thyself, good friend. Var* Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,— Isid. Serv. From Isidore ; He humbly prays your speedy payment, — Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants, — [six weeks Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, And past, — Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord; And I am sent expressly to your lordship. Tim. Give me breath. — I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on ; I '11 wait upon you instantly. — [Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords. Come hither : pray you, [To FLAVIUS. How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds, And the detention of long-since-due debts, Against my honour ? Flav. Please you, gentlemen, The time is unagreeable to this business : Your importunacy cease till after dinner ; That I may make his lordship understand Wherefore you are not paid. Tim. Do so, my friends. — See them well entertained. [Exit. Flav. Pray, draw near. [Exit. Enter APEMANTUS and Fool. Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus : let 's ha' some sport with 'em. Var. Serv. Hang him, he '11 abuse us. Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog ! Var. Serv. How dost, fool ? Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow ? Var. Serv. I speak not to thee. Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. — Come away. [To the Fool.

This is to Lord Timon ; this to Alcibiades. Go ; thou wast born a bastard, and thou 'It die a bawd. Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death. Answer not, I -3TH gone. [Exit Page. Apem. E'en so thou outrun'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's. Fool. Will you leave me there ? Apem. If Timon stay at home. — You three serve three usurers ? All Serv. Ay ; would they served us ! Apem. So would I, — as good a trick as ever hangman served thief. Fool. Are you three usurers' men ? All Serv. Ay, fool. Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant ; my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters they approach sadly and go away merry ; but they enter my mistress' house merrily and go away sadly : the reason of this? Van Serv. 1 could render one. Apem. Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave ; which, notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed. Var. Se)-v. What is a whoremaster, fool ? Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit : sometime it appears like a lord ; sometime like a lawyer ; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than 's artificial one. He is very often like a knight ; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen this spirit walks in. Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool. Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest. Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus. [Timon. Var. Serv. Aside, aside ; here comes Lord Re-enter TlMON and FLAVIUS. Apem. Come with me, fool, come. Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman ; sometime the philosopher. [Exeunt APEMANTUS and Fool. Flav. Pray you, walk near ; I '11 speak with you anon. [Exeunt Serv. Tim. You make me marvel : wherefore, ere this time, Had you not fully laid my state before me ; That I might so have rated my expense As I had leave of means ? Flav. You would not hear me At many leisures I propos'd. Tim- Go to : Perchance some single vantages you took When my indisposition put you back ; And that unaptness made you minister Thus to excuse yourself. Flav. O my good lord At many times I brought in my accounts, [off, Laid them before you ; you would throw them And say you found them in mine honesty. When, for some trifling present, you have bid me [wept ; Return so much, I have shook my head and Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you To hold your hand more close : I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate, And your great flow of debts. My loved lord, Though you hear now, — too late ! — yet now 's a time, The greatest of your having lacks a half To pay your present debts. Tim. Let all my land be sold. Flav. 'Tis all engaged, some forfeited and gone;

 And what remains will hardly stop the mouth Of present dues : the future comes apace : What shall defend the interim ? and at length How goes our reckoning ? Tim. To Lacedaemon did my land extend. Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word: Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone ! Tim. You tell me true. Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood, Call me before the exactest auditors And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me, When all our offices have been oppress'd With riotous feeders ; when our vaults have wept With drunken spilth of wine ; when every room Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy ; I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock, And set mine eyes at flow. Tim Pr'ythee, no more. Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord ! [ants How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasThis night englutted ! Who is not Timon's ? What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's ? Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon ! Ah ! when the means are gone that buy this praise The breath is gone whereof this praise is made : Feast-won, fast-lost ; one cloud of winter showers, These flies are couch'd. Tim. Come, sermon me no further : No villanous bounty yet hath passed my heart ; Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart ; If I would broach the vessels of my love, And try the argument of hearts by borrowing, Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use As I can bid thee speak. Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts ! Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown 'd That I account them blessings ; for by these Shall I try friends : you shall perceive how you Mistake my fortunes ; I am weal thy in my friends. Within there ! Flaminius ! Servilius ! Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants. Serv. My lord ? my lord ? — Tim. I will despatch you severally : — you to Lord Lucius ; — to Lord Lucullus you ; I hunted with his honour to-day ; — you to Sempronius : commend me to their loves ; and I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time 10 use 'em toward a supply of money : let the request be fifty talents. Flam. As you have said, my lord. Flav. Lord Lucius and Lucullus ? hum ! [Aside. Tim. Go you, sir, [to another Serv.] to the senators, — Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have

Deserv'd this hearing, bid 'em send o' the instant A thousand talents to me. Flav. I have been bold, — For that I knew it the most general way, — To them to use your signet and your name ; But they do shake their heads, and I am here No richer in return. Tim. Is 't true ? can 't be ? Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice, That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would ; are sorry — you are honourable, — [not — But yet they could have wish'd — they know Something hath been amiss — a noble nature May catch a wrench — would all were well — /tis pity ;— And so, intending other serious matters, After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions, With certain half- caps and cold-moving nods, They froze me into silence. Tim. You gods, reward them ? Pr'ythee, man, look cheerly These old fellows Have their ingratitude in them hereditary : Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cola, it seldom flows ; 'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind ; And nature, as it grows again toward earth, Is fashion'd for the journey dull and heavy. — Go to Ventidius [to a Serv] ; pr'ythee, [to FLAVIUS] be not sad, Thou art true and honest ; ingeniously I speak, No blame belongs to thee: — \To Serv.] Ventidius lately Buried his father ; by whose death he 's stepp'd Into a great estate : when he was poor, Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends, [me ; I clear'd him with five talents : greet him from Bid him suppose some good necessity [ber'd Touches his friend, which craves to be rememWith those five talents:— \To FLAV.]— That had, — give 't these fellows To whom 'tis instant due. SCENE II.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 801 Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe ; Being free itself it thinks all others so. {Exeunt. ,'fACT III. SCENE I. — ATHENS. A Room in LUCULLUS' House. FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him. Serv. I have told my lord of you ; he is coming down to you. Flam. I thank you, sir. Enter LUCULLUS Serv. Here 's my lord. LucuL {Aside.'} One of Lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right ; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. — Flaminius, honest Flaminius ; you are very respectively welcome, sir. — Fill me some wine. {Exit Servant.] — And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master ? Flam. His health is well, sir, Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir : and what hast thou Uere under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius? Flam. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir ; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply ; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein. Lucul. La, la, la, la, — nothing doubting, says he ? Alas, good lord ! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha'e dined with him and told him on 't ; and come again to supper to him of purpose tc have him spend less ; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his : I ha'e told him on 't, but I could ne'er get him from 't. Re-enter Servant, with wine. Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine. Liuul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here 's to thee. Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure. LucuL I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, — give thee thy due, — and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well : good parts in thee. — Get you gone, sirrah [to the Servant, who goes out.] — Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord 's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money ; especially upon bare friendship, without security. I lere 's three solidares for thee : good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well. Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ : And we alive that liv'd ! Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee. [Throwing the money back. Lucul. Ha ! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. {Exit. Flam* May these add to the number that may scald thee ! Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turns in less than two nights? O you gods, I feel my master's passion ! This slave Unto his honour has my lord's meat in him : Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment When he is turn'd to poison? O, may diseases only work upon 't ! And when he 's sick to death, let not that part of nature Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour ! {Exit. SCENE II. — ATHENS. A public Place. Enter Lucius, with Three Strangers. Luc Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman. 1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours, — now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him. Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money. 2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for 't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied. Luc. How? 2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord. Luc. What a strange case was that ! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must 2 C

 needs confess I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his ; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents. Enter SERVILIUS. Ser. See, by good hap, yonder 's my lord ; I have sweat to see his honour. — My honoured lord, — [To Lucius. Luc. Servilius ! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourablevirtuous lord, my very exquisite friend. Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent,— -B j7i: Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord ; he 's ever sending : how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now? Ser. Has only sent his present occasion now, my lord ; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents. Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me; He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents. Ser. But in the meantime he wants less, my lord. If his occasion were not virtuous I should not urge it half so faithfully. Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius? Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir. Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable ! how unluckily it happened that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour ! — Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do 't, — the more beast, I say. I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness ; but I would not for the wealth of Athens I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship ; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind : and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him ? Ser. Yes, sir, I shall. Luc. I '11 look you out a good turn, Servilius. [Exit SERVILIUS. True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed ; And he that 's once denied will hardly speed. [Exit. 1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius? 2 Stran. Ay, too well. I Stran. Why, this is the world's soul ; and just of the same piece Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father, And kept his credit with his purse

; Supported his estate ; nay, Timon's money Has paid his men their wages : he ne'er drinks But Timon's silver treads upon his lip ; And yet, — O see the monstrousness of man When he looks out in an ungrateful shape ! — He does deny him, in respect of his, What charitable men afford to beggars. 3 Stran. Religion groans at it I Stran. For mine own part, I never tasted Timon in my life, Nor came any of his bounties over me To mark me for his friend ; yet I protest, For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue, And honourable carriage, Had his necessity made use of me, I would have put my wealth into donation, And the best half should have return'd to him, So much I love his heart : but, I perceive, Men must learn now with pity to dispense : For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — ATHENS. A Room in SEMPRONIUS' House. Enter SEMPRONIUS and a Servant of TIMON'S. Sem. Must he needs trouble me in 't, — hum ! — 'bove all others? He might have tried Lord Lucius or Lucullus ; And now Ventidius is wealthy too, Whom he redeem'd from prison : all these Owe their estates unto him. Serv. My lord, They have all been touch'd and found base metal; for They have all denied him. Sem. How ! have they denied him ? Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him? And does he send to me? Three? hum ! — It shows but little love or judgment in him : Must I be his last refuge J His friends, like physicians, Thrive, give him over: must I take the cure upon me? £him, Has much disgrac'd me in't; I am angry at That might have known my place : I see no sense for 't, But his occasions might have woo'd me first ; For, in my conscience, I was the first man That e'er received gift from him : And does he think so backwardly of me now

SCENE IV.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 803 That I '11 requite it last? No: So it may prove an argument of laughter To the rest, and 'mongst the lords I be thought a fool. I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum Had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake ; I had such a courage to do him good. But now return, And with their faint reply this answer join ; Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit. Serv. Excellent! Your lordship 's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic, — he cross'd himself by 't : and I cannot think but, in the end, the villanies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul ! takes virtuous copies to be wicked ; like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire : Of such a nature is his politic love. This was my lord's best hope ; now all are fled, Save only the gods: now his friends are dead, Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd Now to guard sure their master. And this is all a liberal course allows ; Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit. SCENE IV. — ATHENS. A Hall in TIMON'S House. Welcome, good brother. What do you think the hour? Phi. Labouring for nine. Luc. Serv. So much? Phi. Is not my lord seen yet? Luc. Serv. Not yet. Phi. I wonder on 't : he was wont to shine at seven. Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him : You must consider that a prodigal course Is like the sun's ; but not, like his, recoverable. I fear 'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse ; That is, one may reach deep enough and yet Find little. Phi. I am of your fear for that. [event. Tit. I '11 show you how to observe a strange Your lord sends now for money. Hor. Most true, he does. Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift, For which I wait for money. Hor. It is against my heart. Luc. Serv. Mark how strange it shows, Timon in this should pay more than he owes :

And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels And send for money for 'em. Hor. I am weary of this charge, the gods can witness : I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth, And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth. I Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns : what 's yours ? Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine. I Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep : and it should seem by the sum Your master's confidence was above mine ; Else, surely, his had equall'd. Enter FLAMINIUS. Tit. One of Lord Timon's men. Luc. Serv. Flaminius ! sir, a word : pray, is my lord ready to come forth ? Flam. No, indeed, he'is not. Tit. We attend his lordship ; pray, signify so much. Flam. I need not tell him that ; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit. Enter FLAVIUS, in a cloak , muffled. Luc. Serv. Ha ! is not that his steward muffled so ? He goes away in a cloud : call him, call him. Tit. Do you hear, sir ? Both Var. Serv. By your leave, sir, — Flav. What do you ask of me, my friends ? Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir. Flav. Ay, If money were as certain as your waiting 'Twere sure enough. Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills When your false masters eat of my lord's meat? Then they could smile, and fawn upon his debts, [maws. And take down th' interest into their gluttonous

No matter what ; he 's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in ? such may rail against great buildings. Enter SERVILIUS. Tit. O, here 's Servilius ; now we shall know some answer. Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should much derive from 't ; for, take 't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent : his comfortable temper has forsook him ; he is much out ot health, and keeps his chamber, [not sick : Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are And, if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods. Ser. Good gods ! Tit. Most true ; the law shall bruise him. Enter ALCIBIADES, attended. Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate ! I Sen. Now, captain ? Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues ; For pity is the virtue of the law, And none but tyrants use it cruelly. It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy: Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood, I lath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth To those that without heed do plunge into 't. He is a man, setting his fate aside, Of comely virtues : Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice, — An honour in him which buys out his fault, — But with a noble fury and fair spirit, Seeing his reputation touch'd to death, He did oppose his foe : And with such sober and unnoted passion He did behove his anger ere 'twas spent, As if he had but prov'd an argument. I Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,

SCENE V.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 805 Striving to make an ugly deed look fair : Your words have took such pains, as if they laboured [quarrelling To bring manslaughter into form, and set Upon the head of valour ; which, indeed, Is valour misbegot, and came into the world When sects and factions were newly born : He 's truly valiant that can wisely suffer The worst that man can breathe ; and make •> his wrongs [carelessly ; His outsides, — to wear them like his raiment, And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart, To bring it into danger. If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill, What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill ! Alcib. My lord, — [clear : 1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look To revenge is no valour, but to bear. [me, Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon If I speak like a captain : — Why do fond men expose themselves to battle, And not endure all threats ? sleep upon 't, And let the foes quietly cut their throats, Without repugnancy ? but if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad ? why, then, women are more valiant, That stay at home, if bearing carry it ; And th' ass more captain than the lion ; the fellow Loaden with irons wiser than the judge, If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords, As you are great, be pitifully good : Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood ? To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust ; But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just To be in anger is impiety ; But who is man that is not angry ? Weigh but the crime with this. 2 Sen. You breathe in vain. Alcib. In vain ! his service done At Lacedsemon and Byzantium Were a sufficient briber for his life. 1 Sen. What's that? Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, h'as done fair service, And slain in fight many of your enemies : How full of valour did he bear himself In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds ! 2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em, he Is a sworn rioter : he has a sin that often Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner : If there were no foes, that were enough To overcome him : in that beastly fury He has been known to commit outrages And cherish factions : 'tis inferr'd to us His days are foul and his drink dangerous. I Sen. He dies. Alcib. Hard fate ! he might have died in war. My lords, if not for any parts in him, — ^ Though his right arm might purchase his own time, And be in debt to none, — yet, more to move you, Take my deserts to his, and join them both : And, for I know your reverend ages love

Security, I '11 pawn my victories, all My honours to you, upon his good returns. If by this crime he owes the law his life, Why, let the war receiv 't in valiant gore ; For law is strict, and war is nothing more. 1 Sen. We are for law, — he dies ; urge it no more, On height of our displeasure : friend or brother, He forfeits his own blood that spills another. Alcib. Must it be so ? it must not be. My lords, I do beseech you, know me. 2 Sen. How I Alcib. Call me to your remembrances. 3 Sen. What I Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me ; It could not else be I should prove so base To sue, and be denied such common grace : My wounds ache at you. I Sen. Do you dare our anger? 'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect ; We banish thee for ever. Alcib. Banish me ! Banish your dotage ; banish usury, That makes the senate ugly, i Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit, He shall be executed presently. [Exeunt Senators. Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough ; that you may live Only in bone, that none may look on you ! I am worse than mad : I have kept back their foes, While they have told their money, and let out Their coin upon large interest ; I myself Rich only in large hurts ; — all those for this ? Is this the balsam that the usuring senate Pours into captains' wounds? Ha ! banishment ? It comes not ill ; I hate not to be banish'd ; It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury, That I may strike at Athens. I '11 cheer up My discontented troops, and lay for hearts. 'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds ; Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. {Exit.

The good time of day to you, sir. 2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day. 1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered : I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends. 2 Lord. It should not be by the persuasion of his new feasting. 1 Lord. I should think so : he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear. 2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out. 1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go. 2 Lord. Every man here 's so. What would he have borrowed of you ? 1 Lord. A thousand pieces. 2 Lord. A thousand pieces ! I Lord. What of you ? 3 Lord. He sent to me, sir, — Here he comes. Enter TIMON and Attendants. Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both. — And how fare you ? 1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship. 2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship. Tim. Nor more willingly leaves winter ; such summer -birds are men. [Aside.'} — Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay : feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound ; we shall to 't presently. 1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger. Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you. 2 Lord. My noble lord, — Tim. Ah, my good friend ! what cheer ? 2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar. Tim. Think not on 't, sir. t 2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before, — Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.— Come, bring in all together. [The banquet brought in. 2 Lord. All covered dishes ! I Lord. Enter TIMON. Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth And fence not Athens ! Matrons, turn incontinent ! Obedience fail in children! slaves and fools, Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench And minister in their steads! to general filths Convert, o' the instant, green virginity, — Do't in your parent's eyes ! bankrupts, hold fast ; Rather than render back, out with your knives And cut your trusters' throats ! bound servants, steal ! Large-handed robbers your grave masters are, And pill by law ! maid, to thy master's bed, — Thy mistress is o' the brothel ! son of sixteen, Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire, With it beat out his brains ! piety and fear, Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth, Domestic awe, night- rest, and neighbourhood, Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades, Degrees, observances, customs and laws, Decline to your confounding contraries, [men, And let confusion live! — Plagues incident to Your potent and infectious fevers heap On Athens, ripe for stroke ! thou cold sciatica, Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt As lamely as their manners ! lust and liberty Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth, That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive And drown themselves in riot ! itches, blains, Sow all the Athenian bosoms ; and their crop Be general leprosy ! breath infect breath ; That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely poison ! Nothing I '11 bear from thee But nakedness, thou detestable town! Take thou that too, with multiplying banns! Timon will to the woods ; where he shall find The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. The gods confound, — hear me, ye good gods all, — The Athenians both within and out that wall ! And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow To the whole race of mankind, high and low ! Amen. [Exit. c< oi.agR iw :.. • • i eu/tp! •-TUV ::J oiiV SCENE II. — ATHENS. A Room in TIMON'S House. Enter FLAVIUS, with Two or Three Servants. i Serv. Here you, master steward, where 's our master? Are we undone ? cast off? nothing remaining ? Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you ? Let me be recorded by the righteous gods, I am as poor as you. 1 Serv. Such a house broke ! So noble a master fall'n ! All gone ! and not One friend to take his fortune by the arm And go along with him ! 2 Serv. As we do turn our backs To our companion thrown into his grave, So his familiars from his buried fortunes Slink all away ; leave their false vows with him, Like empty purses pick'd ; and his poor self, A dedicated beggar to the air, With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty, Walks, like contempt, alone. — More of our fellows. Enter other Servants. Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house. [livery, 3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's That see I by our faces ; we are fellows still, Serving alike in sorrow : kak'd is our bark ;

8o8 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT iv. And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck Hearing the surges threat : we must all part Into this sea of air. Flav. Good fellows all, The latest of my wealth I '11 share amongst you. Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake, Let 's yet be fellows ; let 's shake our heads, and say, As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortune, We have seen better days. Let each take some. [Giving them money. Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more : Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor. [Servants embrace, and part several ways. O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us ! Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt Since riches point to misery and contempt ? Who would be so mock'd with glory ? or to live But in a dream of friendship ? [pounds, To have his pomp, and all what state cornBut only painted, like his varnish'd friends? Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart, Undone by goodness ! strange, unusual blood, When man's worst sin is, he does too much good ! Who then -dares to be half so kind again ? For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men. My dearest lord, — bless'd to be most accurs'd, Rich only to be wretched, — thy great fortunes Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord ! He 's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat Of monstrous friends ; nor has he with him to Supply his life, or that which can command it. I '11 follow and enquire him out : I '11 ever serve his mind with my best will ; Whilst I have gold, I '11 be his steward still. [Exit. SCENE III. — The Woods. Before TIMON'S Cave. Enter TIMON. Tint. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth Rotten humidity ; below thy sister's orb Infect the air ! Twinn'd brothers of one womb, — Whose procreation, residence, and birth Scarce is dividant, — touch them with several fortunes ; The greater scorns the lesser : not nature, To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune But by contempt of nature. Raise me this beggar and deny 't that lord ; The senator shall bear contempt hereditary The beggar native honour. It is the pasture lards the other's sides, The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares, In purity of manhood stand upright, And say, This man 's a flatterer ? if one be, So are they all ; for every grise of fortune Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate Ducks to the golden fool : all is oblique ; There 's nothing level in our cursed natures But direct villany. Therefore, be abhorred All feasts, societies, and throngs of men ! His semblable, yea, himself Timon disdains : Destruction fang mankind ! — Earth, yield me roots ! [Digging. Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate With thy most operant poison ! What is here? Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods, I am no idle votarist. Roots, you clear heavens ! Thus much of this will make black, white ; foul, fair ; [valiant. Wrong, right ; base, noble ; old, young ; coward, Ha, you gods ! why this ? what this, you gods ? why, this [sides ; Will lug your priests and servants from your Pluck stout men's pillows from below their beads: This yellow slave Will knit and break religions ; bless the accurs'd; Make the hoar leprosy ador'd ; place thieves, And give them title, knee, and approbation, With senators on the bench : this is it That makes the wappen'd widow wed again ; She whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices To the April day again. Come, damned earth, Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds Among the rout of nations, I will make thee Do thy right nature. — [March afar off.] Ha ! a drum ? — Thou 'rt quick, But yet I '11 bury thee : thou It go, strong thief, When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand : — Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold. Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA. Alcib. What art thou there ? speak. Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart For showing me again the eyes of man ! Alcib. What is thy name ? Is man so hateful to thee, That art thyself a man ? Tim. I am misanthropost and hate mankind.

SCENE III.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 809 For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog, That I might love thee something. Alcib. I know thee well ; But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange. Tim. I know thee too ; and more than that I know thee I not desire to know. Follow thy drum ; With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules : Religious canons, civil laws are cruel ; Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine Hath in her more destruction than thy sword, For all her cherubin look. Phry. Thy lips rot off ! Tim. I will not kiss thee ; then the rot returns To thine own lips again. [change ? Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give: But then renew I could not, like the moon ; There were no suns to borrow of. Alcib. Noble Timon, What friendship may I do thee ? Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion. Alcib. What is it, Timon? Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none : if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man ! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man ! Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries. [perity. Tim. Thou saw'st them when I had prosAlcib. I see them now ; then was a blessed time. [harlots. Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of Timan. Be a whore still ! they love thee not that use thee ; Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust. Make use of thy salt hours : season the slaves For tubs and baths ; bring down rose-cheek'd youth to The tub-fast and the diet. Timan. Hang thee, monster ! Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra ; for his wits Are drown'd and lost in his calamities. — I have but little gold of late, brave Timon, The want whereof doth daily make revolt In my penurious band : I have heard and griev'd, How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighboul states, But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them, — Tim. I pr'ythee, beat thy drum, and get thee fne. [Timon. am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble ? I had rather be alone. Alcib. Why, fare thee well : Here is some gold for thee. Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it. Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,— Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens ? Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause. Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest ;

And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd 1 Alcib. Why me, Timon ? Tim. That by killing of villains, Thou wast born to conquer my country. There 's gold to pay thy soldiers : Make large confusion ; and, thy fury spent, Confounded be thyself! Speak not, be gone. Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me, Not all thy counsel. Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee ! Phr. dr* Timan. Give us some gold, good Timon : hast thou more ?

Farewell, Timon : If I thrive well I '11 visit thee again. Tim. If I hope well I '11 never see thee more. Alcib. I never did thee harm. Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me. Alcib. Call'st thou that harm ? Tim, Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take 'Thy beagles with thee. Alcib. We but offend him. — Strike. [Drum beats. Exeunt ALCIBIADES, PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA. Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness, Should yet be hungry ! — Common mother, thou, \Digging. Whose womb unmeasurable and infinite breast Teems and feeds all ; whose self-same mettle, Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd, Engenders the black toad and adder blue, The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm, With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine ; Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate, From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root ! Ensear thy fertile and conceptious womb, Let it no more bring out ingrateful man ! Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears ; [face Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward Hath to the marbled mansion all above Never presented !— O, a root, — dear thanks ! Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas; Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind, That from it all consideration slips ! ss/j Enter APEMANTUS. More man ? plague, plague ! Apem. I was directed hither : men reporr Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them. [a dog Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep Whom I would imitate : consumption catch thee ! Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected ; A poor unmanly melancholy sprung From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place ? This slave-like habit ? and these looks of care ? Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft ; Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods By putting on the cunning of a carper. Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive By that which has undone thee : hinge thy knee, And let his very breath whom thou 'It observe Blow off thy cap ; praise his most vicious strain, And call it excellent : thou wast told thus ; Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bid welcome, To knaves and all approachers : 'tis most just That thou turn rascal ; hadst thou wealth again Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

SCENE III.] TIMON OF ATHENS. Sn Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself. [like thyself ; Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain, Will put thy shirt on warm ? Will these moss'd trees, That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels, And skip when thou point'st out? Will the cold brook, Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste To cure thy o'ernight's surfeit ? call the creatures,— Whose naked natures live in all the spite Of wreckful heaven; whose bare unhoused trunks, To the conflicting elements expos'd, Answer mere nature, — bid them flatter thee ; O, thou shall find, — Tim. A fool of thee : depart. Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did. Tim. I hate thee worse. Apem. Why? Tim. Thou flatter'st misery. Apem. I flatter not ; but say thou art a caitiff. Tim. Why dost thou seek me out ? Apem. To vex thee. Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's. Dost please thyself in 't? Apem. Ay. Tim. What ! a knave too ? Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on To castigate thy pride, 'twere well : but thou Dost it enforcedly ; thou 'dst courtier be again Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before : The one is filling still, never complete ; The other, at high wish : best state, contentless, Hath a distracted and most wretched being, Worse than the worst, content. Thou should'st desire to die, being miserable. Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable. Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm With favour never clasp'd ; but bred a dog. Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded The sweet degrees that this brief world affords To such as may the passive drugs of it [thyself Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd In general riot ; melted down thfy youth In different beds of lust ; and never learn'd The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd The sugar'd game before thee. But myself, Who had the world as my confectionary ; The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men At duty, more than I could frame employment; That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare For every storm that blows ; — I, to bear this, That never knew but better, is some burden : Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time Hath made thee hard in 't, Why shouldst thou hate men ?

[given ? They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag, Must be thy subject ; who, in spite, put stuff To some she beggar, and compounded thee Poor rogue hereditary. Hence ! be gone ! — If thou hadst not been born the worst of men, Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer. Apem. Art thou proud yet ? Tim. Ay, that I am not thee. Apem. I, that I was No prodigal. Tim. I, that I am one now : Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee, I 'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone. — That the whole life of Athens were in this ! Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root. Apem. Here ; I will mend thy feast. [Offering1 him something. Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself. Apem. So I shall mend mine own by the lack of thine. [botch'd ; Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but If not, I would it were. Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens ? Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, Tell them there I have gold ; look, so I have. Apem. Here is no use for gold. Tim. The best and truest : For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm. Apem. Where ly'st o* nights, Timon ? Tim. Under that 's above me. Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus ? Apem. Where my stomach finds meat ; or, rather, where I eat it. Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind ? Apem. Where wouldst thou send it ? Tim. To sauce thy dishes. Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends : when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume they mocked thee for too much curiosity ; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.

812 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT iv. Tim. On what I hate I feed not. Apem. Dost hate a medlar ? Tim. Ay, though it look like thee. Apem. An thou hadst hated medlars sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift that was beloved after his means ? Tim. Who \vithout those means thou talkest of didst thou ever know beloved ? Apem. Myself. Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog. Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers ? Tim. Women nearest ; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power ? Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men. Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts ? Apem. Ay, Timon. Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t' attain to ! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee : if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee : if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass : if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee ; and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner : wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury : wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse ; wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard ; wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life : all thy safety were remotion ; and thy defence absence. What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast ? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation! Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou might'st have hit upon it here : the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts. Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city ? Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter : the plague of company light upon thee ! I will fear to catch it, and give way : when I know not what else to do, I '11 see thee again. Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus. Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive. Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon! Apem. A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse. Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure. Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st. Tim. If I name thee. — I '11 beat thee, but I should infect my hands. Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off ! Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog ! Choler does kill me that thou art alive ; I swoon to see thee. Apem. Would thou wouldst burst ! Tim. Away, Thou tedious rogue ! I am sorry I shall lose A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him. Apem. Beast ! Tim. Slave ! Apem. Toad ! Tim, Rogue, rogue, rogue ! [APEM. retreats backward, as going. I am sick of this false world; and will love naught But even the mere necessities upon 't. Ther Timon, presently prepare thy grave ; Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat Thy grave-stone daily : make thine epitaph, That death in me at others' lives may laugh. O thou sweet king-killer and dear divorce [Looking on the gold. 'Twixt natural son and sire ! thou bright defiler Of Hymen's purest bed ! thou valiant Mars ! Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd and delicate wooer, Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow That lies on Dian's lap ! thou visible god, That solder'st close impossibilities, And mak'st them kiss ! that speak'st with every tongue To every purpose ! O thou touch of hearts ! Think, thy slave, man, rebels; and by thy virtue Set them into confounding odds, that beasts May have the world in empire ! Apem. Would 'twere so ! — But not till I am dead. — I '11 say thou 'st gold : Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly. Tim. Throng'd to? Apem. Ay. Tim. Thy back, I pr'ythee. Apem. Live, and love thy misery 1

SCENE HI.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 813 Tim. Long live so, and so die ! [Exit APKMANTUS.] I am quit. More things like men? — Eat, Timon, and abhor them. Enter Thieves. 1 Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder : the mere want of gold and the falling-from of his friends drove him into this melancholy. 2 Thief. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure. 3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him : if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall 's get it ? 2 Thief. True ; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid. 1 Thief. Is not this he ? Thieves. Where? 2 Thief. 'Tis his description. 3 Thief. He ; I know him. Thieves. Save thee, Timon. Tim. Now, thieves? Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves. Tim. Both too ; and women's sons. Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want. Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat. Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots ; Within this mile break forth a hundred springs : The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips ! The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush Lays her full mess before you. Want ! why want ? [water, I Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, As beasts and birds and fishes. Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes ; You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con, That you are thieves profess'd ; that you work not In holier shapes : for there is boundless theft In limited professions. Rascal thieves, Here 's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth, And so 'scape hanging : trust not the physician ; His antidotes are poison, and he slays More than you rob : take wealth and lives together ; Do villany, do, since you protest to do 't, Like workmen. I '11 example you with thievery: The sun 's a thief, and wilh his great attraction Robs the vast sea : the moon 's an arrant thief, And her pale fire she snatches from the sun : 1 he sea 's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves The moon into salt tears : the earth 's a thief, That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen From general excrement : each thing 's a thief: The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power [away, Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves ; Rob one another ; — there 's more gold ; — cut throats ; All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go, Break open shops ; nothing can you steal But thieves do lose it : steal not less for this I give you ; and gold

confound you howsoe'er ! Amen. [TiMON retires to his cave. 3 Thief. Has almost charmed me from my profession by persuading me to it. 1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us ; not to have us thrive in our mystery. 2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade. I Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens : there is no time so miserable but a man may be true. {Exeunt Thieves. Enter FLAVIUS. Flav. O you gods ! Is yon despis'd and ruinous man my lord ? Full of decay and failing? O monument And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd ! What an alteration of honour Has desperate want made 1 What viler thing upon the earth than friends Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends ! How rarely does it meet with this time's guise, When man was wish'd to love his enemies ! Grant I may ever love, and rather woo Those that would mischief me than those that do!— Has caught me in his eye : I will present My honest grief unto him ; and, as my lord, Still serve him with my life. — My dearest master ! TIMON comes forward from his cave. Tim. Away! what art thou? Flav. Have you forgot me, sir? Tim. Why dost ask that ? I have forgot all men ; Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee. Flav. An honest poor servant of yours. 7im. Then I know thee not : I ne'er had honest man about me, I ; all I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains. Flav. The gods are witness,

8i4 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACT v. Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief For his undone lord than mine eyes for you. Tim. What, dost thou weep? — come nearer ; • — then I love thee Because thou art a woman, and disclaim 'st Flinty mankind ; whose eyes do never give But thorough lust and laughter. Pity 's sleeping : Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping ! Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord, [wealth lasts, To accept my grief, and, whilst this poor To entertain me as your steward still. Tim. Had I a steward So true, so just, and now so comfortable? It almost turns my dangerous nature mild. Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man Was born of woman. — Forgive my general and exceptless rashness, You perpetual-sober gods I I do proclaim One honest man, — mistake me not, — but one; No more, I pray, — and he 's a steward. — How fain would I have hated all mankind ! And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee, I fell with curses. Methinks thou art more honest now than wise ; For by oppressing and betraying me Thou might'st have sooner got another service : For many so arrive at second masters [true, — Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure, — Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous, If not a usuring kindness, and, as rich men deal gifts, Expecting in return twenty for one? [breast Flav. No, my most worthy master ; in whose Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late : You should have fear'd false times when you did feast : Suspect still comes where an estate is least. That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love, Duty, and zeal to your unmatched mind, Care of your food and living ; and, believe it, My most honour'd lord, For any benefit that points to me, Either in hope or present, I 'd exchange For this one wish, — that you had power and wealth To requite me, by making rich yourself. Tim. Look thee, 'tis so ! — Thou singly honest man, Here, take : — the gods, out of my misery, Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy ; [men ; But thus condition'd: — thou shalt build from Hate all, curse all ; show charity to none ; But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone Ere thou relieve the beggar : give to dogs What thou deny'st to men ; let prisons swallow 'em, [blasted woods, Debts wither 'em to nothing: be men like And may diseases lick up their false bloods ! And so, farewell and thrive. Flav. O, let me stay, And comfort you, my master. Tim. If thou hat'st curses, Stay not ; but fly whilst thou'rt bless'd and free : Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee. [Exeunt severally. ACT V. SCENE I.— The Woods. Before TIMON'S Cave. Enter Poet and Painter ; TIMON watching them from his cave. Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides. Poet. What 's to be thought of him ? Does the rumour hold for true that he's so full of gold? Pain. Certain : Alcibiades reports it ; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity : 'tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum Port, Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends. Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his : it will show honestly in us ; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having. Poet. What have you now to present unto him? Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece. Poet. I must serve him so too, — tell him of an intent that 's coming toward him. Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time: it opens the eyes of expectation : performance is ever the duller for his act; and but in the plainer and simpler kind of people the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable : performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it. -4ˆ fc.it« Ti

8i6 TIMON OF ATHENS. [ACTV. Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators. Flew. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon; For he is set so only to himself That nothing but himself, which looks like man, Is friendly with him. 1 Sen. Bring us to his cave : It is our part and promise to the Athenians To speak with Timon. 2 Sen. At all times alike Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs [hand, That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer Offering the fortunes of his former days, The former man may make him. Bring us to him, And chance it as it may. Flav. Here is his cave. — Peace and content be here ! Lord Timon ! Timon ! Look out, and speak to friends ; the Athenians, By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee : Speak to them, noble Timon. TIMON comes from his Cave. Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! — Speak and be hang'd : For each true word a blister ! and each false Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue, Consuming it with speaking ! I Sen. Worthy Timon, — Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon. [Timon. I Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Tim. I thank them ; and would send them back the plague, Could I but catch it for them. 1 Sen. O, forget What we are sorry for ourselves in thee. The senators with one consent of love Entreat thee back to Athens ; who have thought On special dignities, which vacant lie For thy best use and wearing. 2 Sen. They confess Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross: Which now the public body, — which doth seldom Play the recanter, — feeling in itself A lack of Timon's aid, haih sense withal Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon ; And send forth us to make their sorrow'd render, Together with a recompense more fruitful Than their offence can weigh down by the dram; Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs, And write in thee the figures of their love, Ever to read them thine. Tim. You witch me in it ; Surprise me to the very brink of tears: Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes, And I '11 beweepthese comforts, worthy senators. 1 Sen. Therefore so please thee to return with us, And of our Athens, — thine and ours, — to take The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks, Allow' d with absolute power, and thy good name Live with authority :— so soon we shall drive back Of Alcibiades the approaches wild ; Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up His country's peace. 2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword Against the walls of Athens. I Sen. Therefore, Timon, — Tim. Well, sir, I will ; therefore, I will, sir; thus, — If Alcibiades kill my countrymen, Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, [Athens, That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair And take our goodly aged men by the beards, Giving our holy virgins to the stain Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war; Then let him know, — and tell him Timon speaks it, In pity of our aged and our youth, — I cannot choose but tell him that I care not, And let him tak't at worst; for their knives care not, While you have throats to answer ; for myself, There 's not a whittle in the unruly camp But I do prize it at my love, before [you The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave To the protection of the prosperous gods, As thieves to keepers. Flav. Stay not, all 's in vain. Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph ; It will be seen to-morrow : my long sickness Of health and living now begins to mend, And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still ; Be Alcibiades your plague, you his, And last so long enough ! I Sen. We speak in vain. Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not One that rejoices in the common wreck, As common bruit doth put it. I Sen. That 's well spoke. Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen,— 1 Sen. These words become your lipr as they pass thorough them. [triumphers 2 Sen. And enter in our ears like great In their applauding gates. Tim. Commend me to them ; And tell them that, to ease them of their griefs,

SCENE II.] TIMON OF ATHENS. 817 Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, 1 Their pangs of love, with other incident throes That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them, — [wrath. I '11 teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades* I Sen. I like this well ; he will return again. Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close, That mine own use invites me to cut down, And shortly must I fell it : tell my friends, Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree, From high to low throughout, that whoso please To stop affliction, let him take his halter, Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe, And hang himself. — I pray you, do my greeting. Flav. Trouble him no further ; thus you still shall find him. [Athens, Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Timon hath made his everlasting mansion Upon the beached verge of the salt flood; Who once a day with his embossed froth The turbulent surge shall cover : thither come, And let my grave-stone be your oracle. — Lips, let sour words go by and language end : What is amiss, plague and infection mend I Graves only be men's works and death their gain ! Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. [Retires to his cave. 1 Sen. His discontents are unremovably Coupled to nature. 2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead : let us return, And strain what other means is left unto us In our dear peril. I Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt. SCENE \ \.-The Walls of Athens. Enter two Senators and a Messenger. 1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files As full as thy report? Mess. I have spoke the least : Besides, his expedition promises Present approach. [not Timon. 2 Sen. We stand much hazard if they bring Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend; Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd, Yet our old love had a particular force, And made us speak like friends : — this man was riding From Alcibiades to Timon's cave With letters of entreaty, which imported His fellowship i' the cause against your city, In part for his sake mov'd. I Sen. Here come our brothers. Enter Senators from TlMON. 3 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect. — The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring Doth choke the air with dust : in, and prepare : Ours is the fall, I fear ; our foes the snare. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — The Woods. TIMON'S Ca and a rude Tomb seen. '* oinl Enter a Soldier seeking TIMON. _b \ti Sold. By all description

this should be the place. [is this? Who's here? speak, ho! — No answer? — What Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span: Some beast rear'd this ; there does not live a man. [tomb Dead, sure ; and this his grave, — what *s on this I cannot read ; the character I '11 take with wax: Our captain hath in every figure skill, An ag*d interpreter, though young in daj Before proud Athens he 's set down by tl Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. SCENE IV.— Before the Walls of Athens. Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES and Forces. Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town Our terrible approach. [A parley sounded. Enter Senators on the Walls. Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time With all licentious measure, making your wills The scope of justice ; till now, myself, and such As slept within the shadow of your power, Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush, When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong, Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease ; And pursy insolence shall break his wind With fear and horrid flight. 1 Sen. Noble and young, When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit, Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear, We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm, To wipe out our ingratitude with loves Above their quantity. 2 Sen. So did we woo Transformed Timon to our city's love, By humble message and by promis'd means : We were not all unkind, nor all deserve The common stroke of war.

 1 Sen. These walls of ours Were not erected by their hands from whom You have receiv'd your griefs : nor are they such That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall For private faults in them. 2 Sen. Nor are they living Who were the motives that you first went out ; Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess, Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord, Into our city with thy banners spread : By decimation and a tithed death, — If thy revenges hunger for that food [tenth ; Which nature loathes, — take thou the destin'd And by the hazard of the spotted die Let die the spotted. 1 Sen. All have not offended ; For those that were, it is not square to take, On those that are, revenges : crimes, like lands, Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman, Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage : Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall With those that have offended : like a shepherd Approach the fold and cull the infected forth, But kill not all together. 2 Sen. What thou wilt, Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile Than hew to 't with thy sword. 1 Sen. Set but thy foot Against our rampir'd gates and they shall ope ; So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before To say thou 'It enter friendly. 2 Sen. Throw thy glove, Or any token of thine honour else, That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress, And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town till we Have seal'd thy full desire. Alcib. Then there 's my glove ; Descend, and open your uncharged ports; Those enemies of Timon's and mine own, Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof, Fall, and no more : and, — to atone your fears With my more noble meaning, — not a man Shall pass his quarter or offend the stream Of regular justice in your city's bounds, But shall be render'd to your public laws At heaviest answer. Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken. Alcib. Descend, and keep your words. \The Senators descend and open the gates. Enter a Soldier. Sol. My noble general, Timon is dead; Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea; And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which With wax I brought away, whose soft impression Interprets for my poor ignorance. Alcib. [Reads.] Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft : Seek not my name, a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left! Here lie I, Timon ; who, alive, all living men did hate: Pass by, and curse thy Jill; but pass, and stay not here thy gait. These well express in thee thy latter spirits : Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefsj Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our droplets which From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead Is noble Timon : of whose memory Hereafter more. — Bring me into your city, And I will use the olive with my sword : Make war breed peace ; make peace stint war ; make each Prescribe to other, as each other's leech. Let our drums strike. \Exeunt. • i rdT oil.: i qmawoiijH ;: 11

First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people* Citizens. We know 't, we know 't. 1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we '11 have corn at our own price. Is 't a verdict ? Citizens. No more talking on 't ; let it be done : away, away ! 2 Cit. One word, good citizens. 1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens ; the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us : if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear : the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is an inventory to particularize their abundance ; our sufferance is a gain to them. — Let us revenge this with our pikes ere we become rakes : for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge. 2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius? 1 Cit. Against him first : he 's a very dog to the commonalty. 2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country ? 1 Cit. Very well ; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud. 2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously. 1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously he did it to that end : though softconscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud ; which he is, even to the altitude of his

virtue. 2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous. i Cit. 820 CORIOLANUS. [ACT 1," I Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate ; they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we '11 show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths ; they shall know we have strong arms too. Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours, Will you undo yourselves ? I Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone already. Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them Against the Roman state ; whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder than can ever Appear in your impediment : for the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it ; and Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack, You are transported by calamity [slander Thither where more attends you; and you The helms o' the state, who care for you Uke fathers, When you curse them as enemies. I Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They ne'er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will ; and there 's all the love they bear us. Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you A pretty tale: it may be you have heard it ; But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture To stale 't a little more. I Cit. Well, I '11 hear it, sir : yet you must not think to fob-off our disgrace with a tale : but, an 't please you, deliver. Men. There was a time when all the body's members Rebell'd against the belly ; thus accus'd it:— That only like a gulf it did remain I' the midst o' the body, idle and unactive, Still cupboarding the viand, never l>earing Like labour with the rest; where the other instruments Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, And, mutually participate, did minister Unto the appetite and affection common Of the whole body. The belly answered, — I Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly? Men. Sir, I shall tell you.-— With a kind of smile, [thus, — Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even For, look you, I may rqake the belly smile As well as speak, — it tauntingly replied To the discontented members, the mutinous parts That envied his receipt ; even so most fitly As you malign our senators for that They are not such as you. I Cit. Your belly's answer? What! Note me this, good friend ; Your most grave belly was deliberate, Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd : True is it, my incorporate friends, quoth he, That I receive the general food at first Which you do live upon; and fit it is, Because I am the storehouse and the shop Of the -whole body: but, if you do remember, I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court ', the heart, — to the seat the brain ; And, through the cranks and offices of man, The strongest nerves and small inferior veins Front me receive that natural competency Whereby they live: and though that all at ona Yout my good friends, — this says the belly, — mark me, — I Cit. Ay, sir; well, well. Men. Though all at once cannot See "what I do deliver out to each, Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all, And leave me but the bran. What say you to't ? I Cit. It was an answer : how apply you this ? Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly, And you the mutinous members : for, examine

He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead, And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye ! Trust ye ! With every minute you do change a mind ; And call him noble that was now your hate, Him vile that was your garland. What 's the matter, That in these several places of the city You cry against the noble senate, who, Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feed on one another? — What's their seeking ? [they say, Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof, The city is well stor'd. Mar. ^ Hang 'em! They say! They '11 s>t by the fire and presume to know What 's done i' the Capitol ; who 'a like to rise, Who thrives and who declines ; side factions, and give out Conjectural marriages; making parties strong, And feebling such as stand not in their liking Below their cobbled shoes. They say there 's grain enough! Would the nobility lay aside their ruth And let me use my sword, I 'd make a quarry With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high As I could pick my lance. Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded ; For though abundantly they lack discretion, Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you, What says the other troop? Mar. They are dissolved : hang 'em ! They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs, — [eat, That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not Corn for the rich men only : — with these shreds They vented their complainings ; which being answer'd, And a petition granted them, — a strange one, To break the heart of generosity, And make bold power look pale, — they threw their caps [moon, As they would hang them on the horns o' the Shouting their emulation. Men. What is granted them? Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms, Of their own choice : one 's Junius Brutus, Sicinius Velutus, and I know not. — 'Sdeath ! The rabble should have hrst unroof'd the city Ere so prevail'd with me : it will in time Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes For insurrection's arguing. Men. This is strange. Mar. this present action. Bru. Let 's along. [Exeunt. SCENE II.— CORIOLI. The Senate House. Enterluiˆvs AUFIDIUS and certain Senators. I Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels, And know how we proceed. Auf. Is it not yours? What ever hath been thought on in this state, That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome Had circumvention ! 'Tis not four days gone Since I heard thence ; these are the words : I think I have the letter here ; yes, here it is : [Reads. Our army 's in the field : We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready To answer us. Auf. Nor did you think it folly To keep your great pretences veil'd till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching, It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery We shall be shorten'd in our aim ; which was, To take in many towns ere, almost, Rome Should know we were afoot. 2 Sen. • Noble Aufidius, Take your commission; hie you to your bands: Let us alone to guard Corioli :

Nay, more, Some parcels of their power are forth already, And only hitherward. I leave your honours. If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet, 'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike Till one can do no more. All. The gods assist you ! Auf. And keep your honours safe ! 1 Sen. Farewell. 2 Sen. Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing, or express yourself in a more comfortable sort : if my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tenderbodied, and the only son of my womb ; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of king's entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding ; I, — considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall if renown made it not stir, — was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him ; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man. Vir. But had he died in the business, madam ? how then? Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely, — had I a dozen Sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action. Enter a Gentlewoman. Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you. [myself. Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire Vol. Indeed you shall not. Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum ; See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair ; As children from a bear, the Volsces shunning him: Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus, — Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear Though you were born in Rome: his bloody brow With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes, Like to a harvest-man that 's task'd to mow Or all, or lose his hire. Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood! Vol. Away, you fool ! it more becomes a man Than gilt his trophy : the breasts of Hecuba, When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood At Grecian swords contending. — Tell Valeria We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent. Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius! Vol. He '11 beat Aufidius' head below his knee, And tread upon his neck. Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and her Usher. Val. My ladies both, good-day to you. Vol. Sweet madam. Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship. Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. — How does your little son? Vir. I thank your ladyship: well, good madam. Vol. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum than look upon his schoolmaster. Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together : has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it he let it go again ; and after it again ; and over and over he comes, and up again; catched it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it ; O, I warrant, how he mammocked it ! Vol. One on 's father's moods. Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child. Vir. A crack, madam. Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery ; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon. Vir. No, good madam ; I will not out of doors. Val. Not out of doors ! Vol. She shall, she shall. Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience ; I '11 not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars. .Vv\l Val. Fie, you confine yourself most un reasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in. Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers ; but I cannot go thither. Vol. Why, I pray you? Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love. Val. You would be another Penelope: yet they say all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come ; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. — Come, you shall go with us. Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed I will not forth. Val. In truth, la, go with me ; and I '11 tell you excellent news of your husband. Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet. Val. Verily, I do not jest with you ; there came news from him last night. Vir. Indeed, madam? Val. In earnest, it 's true ; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: — The Volsces have an army forth ; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli ; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour ; and so, I pray, go with us. Vir. Give me excuse, good madam ; I will obey you in everything hereafter. Vol. Let her alone, lady ; as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth. Val. In troth, I think she would. — Fare you well, then. — Come, good sweet lady. — Pr'ythee, Virgil ia, turn thy solemness out o' door, and go along with us. Vir. No, at a word, madam ; indeed I must not. I wish you much mirth. Val. Well, then, farewell. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — Before Corioli. Enter, with drums and colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers. Mar. Yonder comes news: — a wager they have met. Lart. My horse to yours, no. Mar. 'Tis done. Lart. Agreed. Enter a Messenger. Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy? Mess. They lie in view ; but have not spoke as yet. Lart. So, the good horse is mine. Mar. I '11 buy him of you. Lart. No, I '11 nor sell nor give him : lend you him I will For half a hundred years. — Summon the town. Mar. How far off lie these armies? Mess. Within this mile and half. Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.— Now, Mars, I pr'ythee, make us quick in work, That we with smoking swords may march from hence [blast. walls? [he, I Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than That 's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums [Drums afar off. Are bringing forth our youth ! we '11 break our walls, Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes ; They '11 open of themselves. Hark you far off ! [Alarum afar off. There is Aufidius; list what work he makes Amongst your cloven army. Mar. ' O, they are at it ! Lart. Their noise be our instruction.— Ladders, ho! The Volsces enter and pass over. Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city. [fight Now put your shields before your hearts, and With hearts more proof than shields. — Advance, brave Titus: They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath. — Come on, my fellows : He that retires I '11 take him for a Volsce, And he shall feel mine edge. SCENE V.] CORIOLANUS. 825 Or, by the fires of heaven, I '11 leave the foe And make my wars on you : look to 't : come on ; If you '11 standfast we'll beat them to their wives, As they us to our trenches followed. Another alarum. The Volsces and Romans re-enter, and the fight is renewed. The Volsces retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the gates. So, now the gates are ope : — now prove good seconds : 'Tis for the followers fortune widens them, Not for the fliers : mark me, and do the like. [He enters the gates. 1 Sol. Fool -hardiness : not I. 2 Sol. Nor I. [MARCIUS is shut in. i Sol. See, they have shut him in. All. To the pot, I warrant him. [Alarum continues. Re-enter TITUS LARTIUS. Lart. What is become of Marcius? All. Slain, sir, doubtless. I Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, With them he enters ; who, upon the sudden, Clapp'd-to their gates : he is himself alone, To answer all the city. Lart. O noble fellow ! Who, sensible, outdares his senseless sword, And when it bows stands up ! Thou art left, Marcius : A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art, Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible Only in strokes ; but with thy grim looks and The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world Were feverous and did tremble. Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy. i Sol. Look, sir. Lart. O, 'tis Marcius ! Let 's fetch him off, or make remain alike. [They fight, and all enter the city. SCENE V.— Within CORIOLI. A Street. Enter certain Romans, with spoils. 1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome. 2 Rom. And I this. 3 Rom. A murrain on 't ! I took this for silver. [Alarum continues still afar off. Enter MARCIUS and TITUS LARTIUS with a trumpet. Mar. Seeˆhere these movers that do prize their hours At a crack'd drachm ! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves, [with them ! — Ere yet the fight be done, pack up: — down And hark, what noise the general makes ! — To him! — There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans : then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city ; Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste To help Cominius. Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st; Thy exercise hath been too violent for A second course of fight. Mar. Sir, praise me not ; My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you well: The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me : to Aufidius thus I will appear, and fight. Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms [man, Misguide thy opposers' swords ! Bold gentleProsperity be thy page ! Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest ! — So farewell. Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius! — [Exit MARCIUS. Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place ; Call thither all the officers o' the town, Where they shall know our mind : away ! [Exeunt. SCENE VI. — Near the Camp of COMINIUS. Enter COMINIUS and Forces, retreating. Com. Breathe you, my friends : well fought ; we are come off Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands Nor cowardly in retire : believe me, sirs, We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck, By interims and conveying gusts we have heard The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods, Lead their successes as we wish our own, That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering, May give you thankful sacrifice ! — Enter a Messenger. Thy news? Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued, And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle : I saw our party to their trenches driven, And then I came away.

826 CORIOLANUS. [ACT i. Com. Though them speak'st truth, Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since? Mess. Above an hour, my lord. Com. 'Tis not a mile ; briefly we heard their drums: How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour, And bring thy news so late? Mess. Spies of the Volsces Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my report. Com. Who 's yonder, That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods ! He has the stamp of Marcius ; and I have Before-time seen him thus. Mar. {Within.} Come I too late? Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue From every meaner man. Enter MARCIUS. Mar. Come I too late? Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others, But mantled in your own. Mar, O ! let me clip you In arms as sound as when I woo'd ; in heart As merry as when our nuptial day was done, And tapers burn'd to bedward ! Com. Flower of warriors, How is't with Titus Lartius? Mar. As with a man busied about decrees : Condemning some to death and some to exile ; Ransoming him or pitying, threat'ning the other; Holding Corioli in the name of Rome, Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash, To let him slip at will. Com. Where is that slave Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? Where 's he? call him hither. Mar. Let him alone ; He did inform the truth : but for our gentlemen, The common file, — a plague! — tribunes for them ! — [budge The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did From rascals worse than they. Com. But how prevail'd you? Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think. Where is the enemy? are you lords o' the field? If not, why cease you till you are so? Com. Marcius, We have at disadvantage fought, and did Retire, to win our purpose. Mar. How lies their battle? know you on which side They have placed their men of trust? Com. As I guess, Marcius, Their bands in the vaward are the Antiates, Of their best trust ; o'er them Aufidius, Their very heart of hope. Mar. I do beseech you, By all the battles wherein we have fought, By the blood we have shed together, by the vows [directly We have made to endure friends, that you Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates ; And that you not delay the present, but, Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts, We prove this very hour. Com. Though I could wish You were conducted to a gentle bath, And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking : take your choice of those That best can aid your action. Mar. Those are they That most are willing. — If any such be here, — As it were sin to doubt, — that love this painting Wherein you see me smear'd ; if any fear Lesser his person than an ill report ; If any think brave death outweighs bad Iife5 And that his country 's dearer than himself; Let him alone, or so many so minded, Wave thus [waving his hand\ to express his disposition, And follow Marcius. [They all shout, and wave their swords ; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps. O, me alone ! make you a sword of me ? If these shows be not outward, which of you But is four Volsces ? none of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius A shield as hard as his. A certain number, Though thanks to all, must I select from all : the rest Shall bear the business in some other fight, As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march ; And four shall quickly draw out my command, Which men are best inclin'd. Com. March on, my fellows: Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt. I '11 fight with none but thee ; for I do hate thee Worse than a promise-breaker. Auf. We hate alike : Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot. Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave, And the gods doom him after ! Auf. Iflfly, Marcius, Halloo me like a hare. Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus, Alone I fought in your Corioli walls, [blood And made what work I pleas'd: 'tis not my Wherein thou seest me mask'd ; for thy revenge Wrench up thy power to the highest. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work, Thou 'It not believe thy deeds : but I '11 report it Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles ; Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug, I' the end admire; where ladies shall be frighted, And, gladly quak'd, hear more ; where the dull tribunes, That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours, Shall say, against their hearts, We thank the gods Our Rome hath such a soldier ! Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this feast, Having fully dined before. Enter TITUS LARTIUS, with his power, from the pursuit. Lart. O general. Here is the steed, we the caparison : Hadst thou beheld, — Mar. Pray now, no more ; my mother, Who has a charter to extol her blood, [done When she does praise me grieves me. I have As you have done, — that 's what I can ; induc'd As you have been, — that 's for my country : He that has but effected his good will Hath overta'en mine act. Com. You shall not be The grave of your deserving ; Rome must know The value of her own : 'twere a concealment Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement, To hide your doings ; and to silence that Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd, Would seem but modest : therefore, I beseech you, — In sign of what you are, not to reward What you have done, — before our army hear me. Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart To hear themselves remember'd. Com. Should they not, Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude, And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses, — [of all Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store, — The treasure in this field achiev'd and city, We render you the tenth ; to be ta'en forth Before the common distribution at Your only choice. Mar. I thank you, general ; But cannot make my heart consent to take A bribe to pay my sword : I do refuse it ; And stand upon my common part with those That have beheld the doing. [A long flourish. They all cry," Marcius ! Marcius !" cast up their, caps and lances: COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare. Mar. May these same instruments which you profane [shall Never sound more ! When drums and trumpets I' the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fac'd soothing ! When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk, Let him be made a coverture for the wars ! So, to our tent; Where, ere we do repose us, we will write To Rome of our success. — You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back : send us to Rome The best, with whom we may articulate, For their own good and ours. I sometime lay here in Corioli At a poor man's house ; he us'd me kindly : He cried to me ; I saw him prisoner ; But then Aufidius was within my view, And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity : I request you To give my poor host freedom. Com. O, well begg'd ! Were he the butcher of my son he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus. Lart. Marcius, his name? Cor. SCENE I.j CORIOLANUS. 820 Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends. Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love ? Sic. The lamb. Men. Ay, to devour him ; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius. Bru. He 's a lamb indeed, that baas like a bear. Men. He 's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men : tell me one thing that I shall ask you. Both Trib. Well, sir. Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance? Brit. He 's poor in no one fault, but stored with all. Sic. Especially in pride. Bru. And topping all others in boasting. Men. This is strange now : do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you? Both Trib. Why, how are we censured? Men. Because you talk of pride now, — will you not be angry? Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well. Men. Why, 'tis no great matter ; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud? Bru. We do it not alone, sir. Men. I know you can do very little alone ; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride : O that you could turn you eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves ! O that you could ! Bru. What then, sir ? Men. Why, then you should discover a brace ofunmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, — alias, fools, — as any in Rome. Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too. Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in 't : said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint, hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion ; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in tny breath. Meeting two such wealsmen as you are, — I cannot call you Lycurguses, — if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables ; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly

that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too ? What harm can your bisson conspectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too ? Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough. Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor anything. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs : you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orangewife and a fosset-seller ; and then rejourn the controversy of threepence to a second day of audience. — When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers; set up the bloody flag against all patience; and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing : all the peace you make in their cause is calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones. Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol. Men, Our very priests must become mockers if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose it is not worth the wagging of your beards ; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion ; though peradventure some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. God-den to your worships : more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you. CBRUTUS and SICINIUS retire. Enter VoLUMNlA, VIRGILIA, VALERIA, &c. How now, my as fair as noble ladies, — and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler, — whither do you follow your eyes so fast ? Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches ; for the love of Juno let 's go. Men. Ha ! Marcius coming home ! Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

 Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. —Hop ! Marcius coming home ! Vol. Vir. Nay, 'tis true. Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and I think there 's one at home for you. Men. I will make my very house reel tonight.— A letter frr me? Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it. Men. A letter for me ! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician : the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricutic, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded. Vir. O, no, no, no. Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't. Men. So do I too, if it be not too much. — Brings a victory in his pocket ? — The wounds become him. Vol. On's brows: Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland. Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly ? Vol. Titus Lartius writes, — they fought together, but Aufidius got off. Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that : an he had stayed by him, I would not have been so fidiused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this ? Vol. Good ladies, let's go. — Yes, yes, yes; ihe senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war : he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly. Val. In troth, there 's wondrous things spoke of him. Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing. Vir. The gods grant them true ! Vol. True ! pow, wow. Men. True ! I '11 be sworn they are true. — Where is he wounded ? — [To the Tribunes, who come forward.] God save your good worships ! Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. — Where is he wounded ? Vol. F the shoulder and i' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body. Men. One i' the neck and two i' the thigh, — there 's nine that I know. Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him, Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.} Hark ! the trumpets. Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius : before him ^ [tears; He carries noise, and behind him he leaves Death, that dark spirit, in's nervy arm doth lie ; [die. Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men A sennet. Trumpets sotmd. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken garland ; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald. Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight Within Corioli gates : where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcius ; these In honour follows Coriolanus : — Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus ! [Flourish. All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus ! [heart ; Cor. No more of this, it does offend my Pray now, no more. Com. Look, sir, your mother ! Cor. O, You have, I know, petition'd all the gods (For my prosperity I [Kneels. Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up; My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd, — What is it ? — Coriolanus must I call thee ? But, O, thy wife ! Cor. My gracious silence, hail ! Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home, That weep'st to see me triumph ? Ah, my dear, Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear, And mothers that lack sons. Men. Now the gods crown thee ! Cor. And live you yet ? — O my sweet lady, pardon. \To VALERIA. Vol. I know not where to turn. — O, welcome home ; — [all. And welcome, general ; — and you are welcome Men. A hundred thousand welcomes. — I could weep [Welcome : And I could laugh; I am light and heavy.— A curse begin at very root on 's heart That is not glad to see thee ! — You are three That Rome should dote on : yet, by the faith of men, [will not We have some old crab trees here at home that Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors; We call a nettle but a nettle ; and The faults of fools but folly.

SCENE I.J CORIOLANUS. 831 Com. Ever right Cor. Menenius ever, ever. Her. Give way there, and go on ! Cor. Your hand, and yours : L To his wife and mother. Ere in our own house I do shade my head, The good patricians must be visited ; From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings, But with them change of honours. Vol. I have lived To see inherited my very wishes, And the buildings of my fancy: only [but There 's one thing wanting, which I doubt not Our Rome will cast upon thee. Cor. Know, good mother, I had rather be their servant in my way Than sway with them in theirs. Com. On, to the Capitol. _Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. The Tribunes remain. Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights Are spectacled to see him : your prattling nurse Into a rapture lets her baby cry While she chats him : the kitchen malkin pins Her richest lockram 'bout her reechy neck, Clambering the walls to eye him : stalls, bulks, windows, Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd With variable complexions; all agreeing In earnestness to see him : seld-shown flamens Do press among the popular throngs, and puff To win a vulgar station : our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask, in Their nicely gawded cheeks, to the wanton spoil Of Phoebus' burning kisses : such a pother, As if that whatsoever god who leads him Were slily crept into his human powers, And gave him graceful posture. Sic. On the sudden, I warrant him consul. Bru. Then our office may, During his power, go sleep. [honours Sic. He cannot temperately transport his From where he should begin and end ; but will Lose those that he hath won. Bru. In that there 's comfort. Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand, But they, upon their ancient malice, will forget, With the least cause, these his ne whonours; which That he '11 give them make as little question As he is proud to do 't. Bru. I heard him swear, Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put The napless vesture of humility ; Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds To the people, beg their stinking breaths. Sic. 'Tis right. Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it rather [him, Than carry it but by the suit of the gentry to And the desire of the nobles. Sic. I wish no better Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it In execution. Bru. 'Tis most like he will. Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills,

A sure destruction. Bru. So it must fall out To him or our authorities. For an end, We must suggest the people in what hatred He still hath held them; that to's power he would [and Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, Dispropertied their freedoms : holding them, In human action and capacity, Of no more soul nor fitness for the world Than camels in their war ; who have their provand Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows For sinking under them. Sic. This, as you say, suggested At some time when his soaring insolence Shall touch the people, — which time shall not want, If it be put upon 't ; and that 's as easy As to set dogs on sheep, — will be his fire To kindle their dry stubble ; and their blaze Shall darken him for ever. Enter a Messenger. Bru. What 's the matter ? Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought That Marcius shall be consul : [and I have seen the dumb men throng to see him, The blind to hear him speak : matrons flung gloves, Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers, Upon him as he pass'd : the nobles bended As to Jove's statue ; and the commons made A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts: I never saw the like. Bru. Let 's to the Capitol ; And carry with us ears and eyes for the time, But hearts for the event. Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt. SCENE II.— ROME. The Capitol. Enter two Officers, to lay czishions. i Off. Come, come; they are almost here. How many stand for consulships ?

CORIOLANUS. [ACT H. 2 Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it. 1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people. 2 Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them ; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground : therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition ; and, out of his noble carelessness, lets them plainly see 't. 1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him ; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, — to flatter them for their love. 2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country: and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonnetted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report : but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury ; to report otherwise were a malice that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it. I Off. No more of him ; he is a worthy man : make way, they are coming. A Sennet. Enter, with Lictors before them, COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, Senators, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS. The Senators take their places ; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves. Men. Having determin'd of the Volsces, and To send for Titus Lartius, it remains, As the main point of this our after-meeting, To gratify his noble service that Hath thus stood for his country: therefore please you, Most reverend and grave elders, to desire The present consul, and last general In our well-found successes, to report A little of that worthy work perform'd By Caius Marcius Coriolanus ; whom We meet here, both to thank and to remember With honours like himself. I Sen. Speak, good Cominius: Leave nothing out for length, and make us think Rather our state 's defective for requital Than we to stretch it out. — Masters o' the people, We do request your kindest ears ; and, after, Your loving motion toward the common body, To yield what passes here. Sic. We are convented Upon a pleasing treaty ; and have hearts Inclinable to honour and advance The theme of our assembly. Bru. Which the rather We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember A kinder value of the people than He hath hereto priz'd them at. Men. That 's off, that 's off ; I would you rather had been silent. Please you To hear Cominius speak ? Bru. Most willingly : But yet my caution was more psrtinent Than the rebuke you give it. Men. He Iov2s your people ; But tie him not to be their bedtellow. — Worthy Cominius, speak. [CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away. Nay, keep your place. I Sen. Sit, Coriolanus ; never shame to hear What you have nobly done. Cor. Your honours' pardon : I had rather have my wounds to heal again Than hear say how I got them. Bru. Sir, I hope My words disbench'd you not. Cor. No, sir ; yet oft, When blows have made me stay, I fled from words. [people, You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not : but your I love them as they weigh. Men. Pray now, sit down. Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' the sun When the alarum were struck, than idly sit To hear my nothings monster' d. _Exit. Men. Masters o' the people, Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter, — That 's thousand to one good one, — when you now see He had rather venture all his limbs for honour Than one on's ears to hear it? — Proceed, Cominius. [lanus Com. I shall lack voice : the deeds of CorioShould not be utterM feebly. — It is held That valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifies the haver : if it be,.

SCENE II.] CORIOLANUS. 833 The man I speak of cannot in the world Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years, When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought Beyond the mark of others : our then dictator, Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight, When with his Amazonian chin he drove The bristled lips before him : he bestrid An o'erpress'd Roman, and i' the consul's view Slew three opposers : Tarquin's self he met, And struck him on his knee : in that day's feats, When he might act the woman in the scene, He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea; And in the brunt of seventeen battles since He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last, Before and in Corioli, let me say, I cannot speak him home : he stopp'd the fliers ; And by his rare example made the coward Turn terror into sport : as weeds before A vessel under sail, so men obey'd, And fell below his stem: his sword,— death's stamp, — 7 • , ', Where it did mark, it took ; from face to foot He was a thing of blood, whose every motion Was timed with dying cries : alone he enter'd The mortal gate of the city, which he painted With shunless destiny ; aidless came off, And with a sudden re-enforcement struck Corioli like a planet. Now all 's his : When, by and by, the din of war 'gan pierce His ready sense; then straight his doubled spirit Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigate, And to the battle came he ; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men as if 'Twere a perpetual spoil : and till we call'd Both field and city ours he never stood To ease his breast with panting. Men. Worthy man ! i Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours Which we devise him. Com. Our spoils he kick'd at ; And look'd upon things precious as they were The common muck of the world : he covets less Than misery itself would give ; rewards His deeds with doing them ; and is content To spend the time to end it. Men. He 's right noble : Let him be call'd for. i Sen. Call Coriolanus. Off. He doth appear. Re-enter CORIOLANUS.^ Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd To make thee consul. Cor. I do owe them still My life and services. Men. It then remains That you do speak to the people. Cor. I do beseech you Let me o'erleap that custom ; for I cannot Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them, For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage : please you That I may pass this doing. Sic. Sir, the people Must have their voices ; neither will they bate One jot of ceremony. Men. Put them not to 't : — Pray you, go fit you to the custom ; and Take to you, as your predecessors have, Your honour with your form. Cor. It is a part That I shall blush in acting, and might well Be taken from the people. Bru. Mark you that ? Cor. To brag unto them, — thus I did, and thus ; — [hide Show them the unaching scars which I should As if I had receiv'd them for the hire Of their breath only! — Men. Do not stand upon 't. — We recommend to you, tribunes of the people, Our purpose to them ; — and to our noble consul Wish we all joy and honour. Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour ! {Flourish. Exeunt all but Sic. and BRU. Bru. You see how he intends to use the people. Sic. May they perceive 's intent! He will requite them As if he did contemn what he requested Should be in them to give. Bru. Come, we '11 inform them Of our proceedings here : on the market-place I know they do attend us. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — ROME. The Forum. Enter several Citizens. 1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him. 2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will. 3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them ; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous : and for the multitude to be ingrateful,

834 CORIOLANUS. [ACT ii. ˆ were to make a monster of the multitude ; of the which we, being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members. 1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve ; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude. 3 Cit. We have been called so of many ; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured; and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass. 2 Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly ? 3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will, — 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head ; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward. 2 Cit. Why that way? 3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog ; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return, for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife. 2 Cit. You are never without your tricks : — you may, you may. 3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices ? But that 's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man. Here he comes, and in the gown of humility : mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars ; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues : therefore follow me, and I '11 direct you how you shall go by him. All. Content, content. {Exeunt. Enter CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS. Men. O sir, you are not right ; have you not known The worthiest men have done 't ! Cor. What must I say? — 1 pray ', sir, — Plague upon 't ! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace. — Look, sir; — my wounds; — 1 got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roared, and ran From the noise of our own drums. Men. O me, the gods ! You must not speak of that : you must desire them To think upon you. Cor. Think upon me ! hang 'em! I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by 'em. Men. You '11 mar all : I '11 leave you. Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you, In wholesome manner. Cor. Bid them wash their faces And keep their teeth clean. {Exit MENENIUS. So, here comes a brace : Re-enter two Citizens. You know the cause, sirs, of my standing here. 1 Cit. We do, sir ; tell us what hath brought you to 't. Cor. Mine own desert 2 Cit. Your own desert ! Cor. Ay, not mine own desire. I Cit. How ! not your own desire ! Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging. I Cit. You must think, if we give you anything, we hope to gain by you. Cor. Well then, I pray, your price o' the consulship ? 1 Cit. The price is to ask it kindly. Cor. Kindly ! sir, I pray, let me ha 't : I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. — Your good voice, sir; what say you ? 2 Cit. You shall ha' it, worthy sir. Cor. A match, sir. — There is in all two worthy voices begg'd. — I have your alms: adieu. 1 Cit. But this is something odd. 2 Cit. An 'twere to give again, — but 'tis no matter. [Exeunt two Citizens. Re-enter oilier two Citizens. Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary govvn. 3 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly. Cor. Your enigma? 3 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not, indeed, loved the common people. Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them ; 'tis a condition they account gentle : and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitly ; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully

SCENE III.] CORIOLANUS. 835 to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul. 4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend ; and therefore give you our voices heartily. 3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country. Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no further. Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt. Cor. Most sweet voices ! — Better it is to die, better to starve, Than crave the hire which first we do deserve. Why in this wolfish toge should I stand here, To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear, Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to't: — What custom wills, in all things should we do 't, The dust on antique time would lie unswept, And mountainous error be too highly heap'd For truth to o'erpeer. Rather than fool it so, Let the high office and the honour go To one that would do thus. — I am half through ; The one part suffer'd, the other will I do. Here come more voices. Re-enter other three Citizens. Your voices : for your voices I have fought ; Watch'd for your voices ; for your voices bear Of wounds two dozen odd ; battles thrice six I have seen and heard of ; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more : your voices : Indeed, I would be consul. 5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice. 6 Cit. Therefore let him be consul : the gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people ! All 3 Citizens. Amen, amen. — God save thee, noble consul ! [Exeunt. Cor. Worthy voices ! Re-inter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SICINIUS. Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes Endue you with the people's voice : — remains That, in the official marks invested, you Anon do meet the senate. Cor. Is this done ? Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd : The people do admit you ; and are summoned To meet anon, upon your approbation. Cor. Where? at the senate-house? Sic. There, Coriolanus. Cor. May I change these garments ? Sic. You may, sir. Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again, Repair to the senate -house. [along ? Men. I'll keep you company. — Will you Bru. We stay here for the people. Sic. Fare you well. [Exeunt COR. and MEN. He has it now ; and by his looks methinks 'Tis warm at his heart. [weeds. Bru. With a proud heart he wore his humble Will you dismiss the people ? Re-enter Citizens. Sic. How now, my masters ! have you chose this man ? 1 Cit. He has our voices, sir. [loves. Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your 2 Cit. Amen, sir : — to my poor unworthy notice, He mocked us when he begg'd our voices. 3 Cit. Certainly, He flouted us downright. 1 Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech, — he did not mock us. 2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for's country. Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure. Citizens. No, no ; no man saw 'em. 3 Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private ; And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn, / would be consul, says he ; aged custom, But by your voices, will not so permit me ; Your voices therefore : when we granted that, Here was, I thank you for your voices, — thank you,— Your most sweet voices: — now you have left your voices I have no further with you: — was not this mockery ? Sic. Why, either were you ignorant to see ;t? Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness To yield your voices ? Brtt. Could you not have told him, As you were lesson'd, — when he had no power, But was a petty servant to the state, He was your enemy ; ever spake against Your liberties, and the charters that you bear I' the body of the weal : and now, arriving A place of potency and sway o' the state, If he should still malignantly remain Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves ? You should have said,

 That as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love, Standing your friendly lord. Sic. Thus to have said, As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit And tried his inclination ; from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you might, As cause had call'd you up, have held him to ; Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature, Which easily endures not article Tying him to aught ; so, putting him to rage, You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler, And pass'd him unelected. Bru. Did you perceive He did solicit you in free contempt When he did need your loves ; and do you think That his contempt shall not be bruising to you When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies [cry No heart among you? Or had you tongues to Against the rectorship of judgment ? Sic. Have you Ere now denied the asker ? and now again, On him that did not ask but mock, bestow Your su'd-for tongues ? [him yet. 3 Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny 2 Cit. And will deny him : I '11 have five hundred voices of that sound. I Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em. [friends Bru. Get you hence instantly; and tell those They have chose a consul that will from them take Their liberties ; make them of no more voice Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking As therefore kept to do so. Sic. Let them assemble ; And, on a safer judgment, all revoke Your ignorant election : enforce his pride And his old hate unto you : besides, forget not With what contempt he wore the humble weed ; How in his suit he scorn'd you : but your loves, Thinking upon his services, took from you The apprehension of his present portance, Which, most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion After the inveterate hate he bears you. Bru. Lay A fault on us, your tribunes ; that we labour'd, — No impediment between, — but that you must Cast your election on him. Sic. Say you chose him More after our commandment than as guided By your own true affections; and that your minds, Pre-occupied with what you rather must do Than what you should, made you against the grain To voice him consul. Lay the fault on us. Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures to you, How youngly he began to serve his country, How long continued : and what stock he springs of — [came The noble house o' the Marcians ; from whence That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son, Who, after great Hostilius, here was king ; Of the same house Publius and Quintus were, That our best water brought by conduits hither ; And Censorinus, darling of the people, And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor, Was his great ancestor. Sic. One thus descended, That hath beside well in his person wrought To be set high in place, we did commend To your remembrances : but you have found, Scaling his present bearing with his past, That he 's your fixed enemy, and revoke Your sudden approbation. Bru. Say you ne'er had done 't, — Harp on that still, — but by our putting on: And presently when you have drawn your number, Rep to the Capitol. Citizens. We will so ; almost all Repent in their election. {Exeunt. Bru. Let them go on ; This mutiny were better put in hazard Than stay, past doubt, for greater: If, as his nature is, he fall in rage With their refusal, both observe and answer The vantage of his anger. Sic. To the Capitol, Come: we will be there before the stream o* the people ; And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own, Which we have goaded onward. [Exeunt. ACT III. SCENE I. — ROME. A Street. Cor. How? what? Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword ; That of all things upon the earth he hated Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher. Cor. At Antium lives he ? Lart. At Antium. Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there, To oppose his hatred fully. — Welcome home. [To LARTIUS. Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS. Behold ! these are the tribunes of the people, The tongues o' the common mouth. I do despise them; For they do prank them in authority, Against all noble sufferance. Sic. Pass no further. Cor. Ha ! what is that ? Brti. It will be dangerous to go on : no further. Cor. What makes this change ? Men. The matter ? [commons ? Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles and the Bni. Cominius, no. Cor. Are these your herd ? — Must these have voices, that can yield them now, [your offices ? And straight disclaim their tongues ? — What are You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth? Have you not set them on ? Men. Be calm, be calm. Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot, To curb the will of the nobility : Suffer 't, and live with such as cannot Nor ever will be rul'd. Bru. Call 't not a plot : The people cry you mock'd them ; and of !»._, When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd ; Scandal'd the suppliants for the people, — call'd them Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness. Cor. Why, this was known before. Bru. Not to them all. Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence ? Bru. How ! I inform them ! Cor. You are like to do such business. Bru. Not unlike, Each way, to better yours. Cor. Why, then, should I be consul? By yon clouds, Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me Your fellow tribune. Sic. You show too much of that For which the people stir : if you will pass To where you are bound, you must inquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit ; Or never be so noble as a consul, Nor yoke with him for tribune. Men. Let 's be calm. Com. The people are abus'd ; set on. This palt'ring Becomes not Rome ; nor has Coriolanus Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely I' the plain way of his merit. Cor. Tell me of corn ! This was my speech, and I will speak 't again, — Alen. Not now, not now. I Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now. Cor. Now, as I live, I will. — My nobler friends, I crave their pardons : For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves : I say again, In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd, By mingling them with us, the honour'd number; Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that Which they have given to beggars. Men. Well, no more. I Sen. No more words, we beseech you. Cor. How ! no more ! As for my country I have shed my blood, Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs Coin words till their decay against those measles Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought The very way to catch them.

§3$ CORIOLANUS. [ACT III. Bru. You speak o' the people As if you were a god to punish, not A man of their infirmity. Sic. 'Twere well We let the people know 't. Men. What, what ? his choler ? Cor. Choler! Were I as patient as the midnight sleep, By Jove, 'twould be my mind ! Sic. It is a mind That shall remain a poison where it is, Not poison any further. Cor. Shall remain ! — Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you His absolute shall? Com. 'Twas from the canon. Cor. Shall! 0 good, but most unwise patricians ! why, You grave, but reckless senators, have you thus Given Hydra leave to choose an officer, That with his peremptory shall, being but The horn and noise o' the monster, wants not spirit To say he '11 turn your current in a ditch, And make your channel his ? If he have power, Then vail your ignorance : if none, awake Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd Be not as common fools ; if you are not, Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians If they be senators : and they are no less When, both your voices blended, the great' st taste [trate; Most palates theirs. ' They choose their magisAnd such a one as he, wh puts his shall, His popular shall, against a graver bench Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself, It makes the consuls base : and my soul aches To know, when two authorities are up, Neither supreme, how soon confusion May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take The one by the other. Com. Well, on to the market-place. Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as 'twas us'd Sometime in Greece, — Men. Well, well, no more of that. Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power, — 1 say, they nourished disobedience, fed The ruin of the state. Bru. Why, shall the people give One that speaks thus their voice? Cor. I '11 give my reasons, More worthier than their voices. They know the corn Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd They ne'er did service for 't : being press'd to the war, Even when the navel of the state was touch'd, They would not thread the gates, — this kind of service Did not deserve corn gratis : being i' the war, Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd Most valour, spoke not for them. The accusation Which they have often made against the senate, All cause unborn, could never be the motive Of our so frank donation. Well, what then? How shall this bisson multitude digest The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express What 's like to be their words : — We did request it; We are the greater poll \ and in true fear They gave us our demands: — thus we debase The nature of our seats, and make the rabble Call our cares fears : which will in time Break ope the locks o' the senate, and bring in The crows to peck the eagles. — Men. Come, enough. Bru. Enough, with over-measure. Cor. No, take more : What may be sworn by, both divine and human, Seal what I end withal ! — This double worship, — Where one part does disdain with cause, the other [wisdom, Insult without all reason ; where gentry, title, Cannot conclude but by the yea and no Of general ignorance. — it must omit Real necessities, and give way the while To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows, [youj — Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech You that will be less fearful than discreet; That love the fundamental part of state More than you doubt the change on't; that prefer A noble life before a long, and wish To vamp a body with a dangerous physic That 's sure of death without it, — at once pluck out Vhe multitudinous tongue ; let them not lick The sweet which is their poison : your dishonour Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state Of that integrity which should become 't ; Not having the power to do the good it would, For the ill which doth control 't. Bru. Has said enough. Sic. Has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer As traitors do. Cor. Thou wretch despite o'erwhelm thee ! — What should the people do with these bald tribunes? On whom depending, their obedience fails

SCENE I.] CORIOLANUS. 839 To the greater bench : in a rebellion, [law, When what 's not meet, but what must be, was Then were they chosen ; in a better hour Let what is meet be said it must be meet, And throw their power i' the dust. Bru. Manifest treason. Sic. This a consul? no. Bru. The sediles, ho! — Let him be apprehended, [whose name myself Sic. Go, call the people [Exit BRUTUS]; — in Attach thee as a traitorous innovator, A foe to the public weal. Obey, I charge thee, And follow to thine answer. Cor. Hence, old goat ! Sen. and Pat. We '11 surety him. Com. Aged sir, hands off. Cor. Hence, rotten thing ! or I shall shake thy bones Out of thy garments. Sic. Help, ye citizens 1 Re-enter BRUTUS, with, the ˆEdiles and a rabble 0/ Citizens. Men. On both sides more respect. Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power. Bni. Seize him, sediles. Citizens. Down with him ! down with him ! 2 Sen. Weapons, weapons, weapons ! [They all bustle about CORIOLANUS. Tribunes, patricians, citizens ! — what, ho ! — Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens ! Citizens. Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace ! Men. What is about to be? — I am out of breath ; [bunes Confusion 's near ; I cannot speak. — You triTo the people, — Coriolanus, patience : — Speak, good Sicinius. Sic. Hear me, people ; peace ! Citizens. Let's hear our tribune": peace! — Speak, speak, speak. Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties: Marcius would have all from you ; Marcius, Whom late you have nam'd for consul. Men. Fie, fie, fie ! This is the way to kindle, not to quench. I Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat. Sic. What is the city but the people ? Citizens. True, The people are the city. Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd The people's magistrates. Cit. You so remain. Men. And so are like to do. Cor. That is the way to lay the city flat; To bring the roof to the foundation, And bury all which yet distinctly ranges, In heaps and piles of ruin. Sic. This deserves death. Bru. Or let us stand to our authority, Or let us lose it. — We do here pronounce, Upon the part o' the people, in whose power We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy Of present death. Sic. Therefore lay hold of him ; Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence Into destruction cast him. Bru. ˆEdiles, seize him ! Citizens. Yield, Marcius, yield ! Men. Hear me one word ; Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word. sEd. Peace, peace ! [friends, Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's And temperately proceed to what you would Thus violently redress. Bru. Sir, those cold ways, That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous Where the disease is violent. — Lay hands upon him, And bear him to the rock. Cor. No; I '11 die here. [Draws his sword. There's some among you have beheld me fighting : [seen me. Come, try upon yourselves what you have Men. Down with that sword! — Tribunes, withdraw awhile. Bru. Lay hands upon him. Men. Help Marcius, help, You that be noble ; help him, young and old ! Citizens. Down with him, down with him ! [In this mutiny the Tribunes, the ˆEdiles, and the People are beat in. Men. Go, get you to your house ; be gone, away! All will be naught else. 2 Sen. Get you gone. Cor. Stand fast ; We have as many friends as enemies. Men. Shall it be put to that ? I Sen. The gods forbid ! I pr'ythee, noble friend, home to thy house ; Leave us to cure this cause. Men. For 'tis a sore upon us, You cannot tent yourself: be gone, beseech you. Com. Come, sir, along with us. [are, Cor. I would they were barbarians, — as they Though in Rome litter'd, — not Romans, — as they are not, Though calv'd i' the porch o' the Capitol, — Men. Be gone ; Put not your worthy rage into your tongue ; One time will owe another.

840 CORIOLANUS. [ACT in. Cor. On fair ground I could beat forty of them. Men. I could myself Take up a brace o' the best of them ; yea, the two tribunes. Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic ; And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands Against a falling fabric. — Will you hence, Before the tag return ? whose rage doth rend Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear What they are used to bear. Men. Pray you, be gone : I '11 try whether my old wit be in request With those that have but little : this must be patch'd With cloth of any colour. Com, -i luey ˆ Nay, come away. [Exeunt COR. , COM. , and others. 1 Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune. Men. His nature is too noble for the world : He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, Or Jove for 's power to thunder. His heart 's his mouth : What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent ; And, being angry, does forget that ever He heard the name of death. [A noise within. Here 's goodly work ! 2 Pat. I would they were a-bed ! Men. I would they were in Tiber ! What, the vengeance, Could he not speak 'em fair ? Re-enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the rabble. Sic. Where is this viper That would depopulate the city and Be every man himself? Men. You worthy tribunes, — Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock With rigorous hands : he hath resisted law, And therefore law shall scorn him further trial Than the severity of the public power, Which he so sets at naught. i Cit. He shall well know The noble tribunes are the people's mouths, And we their hands. Citizens. He shall, sure on 't. Men. Sir, sir, — Sic. Peace ! Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt With modest warrant. Sic. Sir, how comes 't that you Have holp to make this rescue ? Men. Hear me speak : — As I do know the consul's worthiness, So can I name his faults, — Sic. Consul ! — what consul ? Men. The consul Coriolanus. Bru. He consul ! Citizens. No, no, no, no, no. Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people, I may be heard, I would crave a word or two; The which shall turn you to no further harm Than so much loss of time. Sic. Speak briefly, then ; For we are peremptory to despatch This viperous traitor : to eject him hence Were but one danger ; and to keep him here Our certain death : therefore it is decreed He di-es to-night. Men. Now the good gods forbid That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude Towards her deserved children is enroll'd In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam Should now eat up her own ! Sic. He 's a disease that must be cut away. Men. O, he 's a limb that has but a disease j Mortal, to cut it off ; to cure it, easy. What has he done to Rome that 's worthy death ? Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost, — Which I dare vouch is more than that he hath By many an ounce, — he dropt it for his country ; And what is left, to lose it by his country Were to us all, that do't and suffer it, A brand to the end o' the world. Sic. This is clean kam. Bru. Merely awry: when he did love his country, It honour'd him. Men. The service of the foot, Being once gangren'd, is not then respected For what before it was. Bru. We'll hear no more. — Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence ; Lest his infection, being of catching nature, Spread further. Men. One word more, one word. This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late, Tie leaden pounds to's heels. Proceed by process ; Lest parties, — as he is belov'd, — -break out, And sack great Rome with Romans. Bru. If it were so, — Sic. What do you talk? Have we not had a taste of his obedience ? Our sediles smote? ourselves resisted ? — come, — Men. Consider this : — he has been bred i' the wars Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd

SCENE II.] CORIOLANUS. 841 In bolted language ; meal and bran together He throws without distinction. Give me leave, I '11 go to him, and undertake to bring him Where he shall answer, by a lawful form, In peace, to his utmost peril. I Sen. Noble tribunes, It is the humane way: the other course Will prove too bloody ; and the end of it Unknown to the beginning. Sic. Noble Menenius, Be you then as the people's officer. — Masters, lay down your weapons. Bru. Go not home. Sic. Meet on the market-place. — We'll attend you there : Where, if you bring not Marcius, we '11 proceed In our first way. Men. I '11 bring him to you. — [To the Senators.] Let me desire your company : he must come, Or what is worst will follow. I Sen. Pray you, let 's to him. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ROME. A Room in CORIOLANUS'S House. Enter CORIOLANUS and Patricians. Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels ; Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock, That the precipitation might down stretch Below the beam of sight ; yet will I still Be thus to them. I Pat. You do the nobler. Cor. I muse my mother Does not approve me further, who was wont To call them woollen vassals, things created To buy and sell with groats ; to show bare heads In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder, When one but of my ordinance stood up To speak of peace or war. Enter VOLUMNIA. I talk of you : [To VOLUMNI A. Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me False to my nature? Rather say, I play The man I am. Vol. O, sir, sir, sir, I would have had you put your power well on Before you had worn it out. Cor. Let go. [you are Vol. You might have been enough the man With striving less to be so : lesser had been The thwartings of your dispositions if You had not show'd them how ye were dispos'd Ere they lack'd power to cross you. Cor. Let them hang. Vol. Ay, and burn too. Enter MENENIUS and Senators. Men. Come, come, you have been too rough, something too rough ; You must return and mend it. i Sen. There 's no remedy ; Unless, by not so doing, our good city Cleave in the midst, and perish. Vol. Pray, be counseled ; I have a heart as little apt as yours, But yet a brain that leads my use of anger To better vantage. Men. Well said, noble woman ! Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,

Which I can scarcely bear. Cor. What must I do? Men. Return to the tribunes. Cor. Well, what then? what then? Men. Repent what you have spoke. Cor. For them? — I cannot do it to the gods ; Must I then do't to them? Vol. You are too absolute; Though therein you can never be too noble But when extremities speak. I have heard you say, Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends, I' the war do grow together : grant that, and tell me In peace what each of them by th* other lose That they combine not there. Cor. Tush, tush ! Men. A good demand. Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem The same you are not, — which for your best ends You adopt your policy, — how is it less or worse That it shall hold companionship in peace With honour as in war ; since that to both It stands in like request? Cor. Why force you this? Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak To the people ; not by your own instruction, Nor by the matter which yourheart prompts you, But with such words that are but rooted in Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth, Now, this no more dishonours you at all Than to take in a town with gentle words, Which else would put you to your fortune and The hazard of much blood. I would dissemble with my nature where My fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd

 I should do so in honour : I am in this Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles ; And you will rather show our general louts How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard Of what that want might ruin. Men. Noble lady ! — Come, go with us ; speak fair : you may salve so, Not what is dangerous present, but the loss Of what is past. Vol. I pr'ythee now, my son, Go to them with this bonnet in thy hand ; And thus far having stretch'd it, — here be with them, — [business Thy knee bussing the stones, — for in such Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant More learned than the ears, — waving thy head, Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart, Now humble as the ripest mulberry That will not hold the handling : or say to them Thou art their soldier, and, being bred in broils, Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess, Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim, In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far AS thou hast power and person. Men. This but done, Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours : For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free As words to little purpose. Vol. Pr'ythee now, Go, and be rul'd : although I know thou had'st rather Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius. Enter COMINIUS. Com. I have been i' the market-place ; and, sir, 'tis fit You make strong party, or defend yourself By calmness or by absence : all 's in anger. Men. Only fair speech. Com. I think 'twill serve, if he Can thereto frame his spirit. Vol. He must, and will.— Pr'ythee now, say you will, and go about it. Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd sconce? must I, With my base tongue, give to my noble heart A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't: Yet, were there but this single plot to lose, This mould of Marcius, they to dust should grind it, [place : — And throw 't against the wind. — To the marketYou have put me now to such a part which never I shall discharge to the life. Com. Come, come, we '11 prompt you. Vol. I pr'ythee now, sweet son, — as thou hast said My praises made thee first a soldier, so, To have my praise for this, perform a part Thou hast not done before. Cor. Well, I must do 't : Away, my disposition, and possess me Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd, Which quired with my drum, into a pipe Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice That babies lulls asleep ! the smiles of knaves Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up The glasses of my sight ! a beggar's tongue Make motion through my lips ; and my arm'd knees, Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his That hath receiv'd an alms ! — I will not do 't ; Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth, And by my body's action teach my mind A most inherent baseness. Vol. At thy choice, then: To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour Than thou of them. Come all to ruin : let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear Thy dangerous stoutness ; for I mock at death With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list. Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me ; But owe thy pride thyself. Cor. Pray, be content: Mother, I am going to the market-place ; Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, [belov'd Cog their hearts from them, and come home Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going: Commend me to my wife. I '11 return consul ; Or never trust to what my tongue can do I' the way of flattery further. Vol. Do your will. [Exit. Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself To answer mildly ; for they are prepar'd With accusations, as I hear, more strong Than are upon you yet. Cor. The word is, mildly. — Pray you, let us go: Let them accuse me by invention, I Will answer in mine honour. Men. Ay, but mildly. Cor. Well, mildly be it then ; mildly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.] CORIOLANUS. 843 SCENE III. — ROME. Tht. Forum. Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS. Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannical power : if he evade us there, Enforce him with his envy to the people; And that the spoil got on the Antiates Was ne'er distributed. Enter an ˆEdile. What, will he come? A£d* He 's coming. Bru. How accompanied? &d. With old Menenius, and those senators That always favour'd him. Sic. Have you a catalogue Of all the voices that we have procur'd, Set down by the poll? jEd. I have ; 'tis ready. Sic. Have you collected them by tribes? sEd. I have. Sic. Assemble presently the people hither : And when they hear me say, // shall be so r the right and strength a' the commons, be it either [them, For death, for fine, or banishment, then let If I say fine, cry Fine, — if death, cry Death; Insisting on the old prerogative And power i' the truth o' the cause. j*Ed. I shall inform them. Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry, Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd Enforce the present execution Of what we chance to sentence. ;3Ld. Very well. Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint, When we shall hap to give 't them. Bru. Go about it — [Exit ˆEdile. Put him to choler straight : he hath been us'd Ever to conquer, and to have his worth Of contradiction: being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance ; then he speaks What 's in his heart ; and that is there which looks With us to break his neck. Sic. Well, here he comes. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, Senators, and Patricians. Men. Calmly, I do beseech you. Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece [honour'd gods Will bear the knave by the volume. — The Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice Supplied with worthy men ! plant love among 's! Throng our large temples with the shows of peace, And not our streets with war ! i Sen. Amen, amen! Men. A noble wish. Re-enter yEdile, with Citizens. Sic. Draw near, ye people. [I say ! s£d. List to your tribunes ; audience : peace, Cor. First, hear me speak. Both. Tri. Well, say. — Peace, ho! Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present ? Must all determine here? Sic. I do demand, If you submit you to the people's voices, Allow their officers, and are content To suffer lawful censure for such faults As shall be proved upon you? Cor. I am content. Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content : The warlike service he has done, consider; think [like Upon the wounds his body bears, which show Graves i' the holy churchyard. Cor. Scratches with briers, Scars to move laughter only. Men. Consider further, That when he speaks not like a citizen, You find him like a soldier : do not take His rougher accents for malicious sounds, But, as I say, such as become a soldier. Rather than envy you. Com. Well, well, no more. Cor. What is the matter, That being pass'd for consul with full voice, I am so dishonour'd that the very hour You take it off again? Sic. Answer to us. Cor. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so. Sic. We charge you that you h sve contrived to take From Rome all season'd office, and to wind Yourself into a power tyrannical ; For which you are a traitor to the people. Cor. How! traitor! Men. Nay, temperately; your promise. Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold in the Call me their traitor ! — Thou injurious tribune ! Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths, In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say, Thou liest unto thee, with a voice as free As I do pray the gods.

 Sic. Mark you this, people? Citizens. To the rock, to the rock with him ! Sic. Peace! We need not put new matter to his charge : What you have seen him do and heard him speak, Beating your officers, cursing yourselves, Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying Those whose great power must try him ; even this, So criminal, and in such capital kind, Deserves the extremest death. Bru. But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome, — Cor. What do you prate of service ? Bru. I talk of that, that know it. Cor. You? [mother? Men. Is this the promise that you made your Com. Sic. For that he has, — As much as in him lies, — from time to time Envied against the people, seeking means To pluck away their power ; as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers That do distribute it; — in the name o' the people, And in the power of us the tribunes, we, Even from this instant, banish him our city; In peril of precipitation From off the rock Tarpeian, never more To enter our Rome gates : i' the people's name, I say it shall be so. Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so; let him away : He 's banished, and it shall be so. Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends, — Sic. He 's sentenc'd ; no more hearing. Com. Let me speak : I have been consul, and can show for Rome Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love My country's good with a respect more tender, More holy and profound, than mine own life, My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase, And treasure of my loins; then if I would Speak that,— Sic. We know your drift. Speak what ? JBru. There 's no more to be said, but he is banish'd, As enemy to the people and his country : It shall be so. Citizens. It shall be so, it shall be so. Cor. You common cry of curs ! whose breath I hate As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize As the dead carcasses of unburied men That do corrupt my air, — I banish you ; And here remain with your uncertainty ! Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts! Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes, Fan you into despair ! Have the power still To banish your defenders ; till at length Your ignorance, — which finds not till it feels, — Making not reservation of yourselves, — Still your own foes, — deliver you, as most Abated captives, to some nation That won you without blows ! SCENE I.] CORIOLANU9. 845 Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome, And occupations perish ! Cor. What, what, what! I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother, Resume that spirit when you were wont to say, If you had been the wife of Hercules, Six of his labours you 'd have done, and sav'd Your husband so much sweat. — Cominius, Droop not; adieu. — Farewell, my wife, — my mother : I '11 do well yet. — Thou old and true Menenius, Thy tears are salter than a younger man's, And venomous to thine eyes. — My sometime general, I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld Heart-hard'ning spectacles; tell these sad women 'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes, As 'tis to laugh at 'em. — My mother, you wot well My hazards still have been your solace : and Believe 't not lightly, — though I go alone, Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen [your son Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen, — Will or exceed the common or be caught With cautelous baits and practice. Vol. My first son, Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius With thee awhile : determine on some course More than a wild exposture to each chance That starts i' the way before thee. Cor. O the gods ! Com. I '11 follow thee a month, devise with thee [of us, Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear And we of thee : so, if the time thrust forth A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man ; And lose advantage, which doth ever cool I' the absence of the needer. Cor. Fare ye well : Thou hast years upon thee ; and thou art too full Of the wars' surfeits to go rove with one That 's yet unbruis'd: bring me but out at gate. — Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and My friends of noble touch; when I am forth, Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come. While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still ; and never of me aught But what is like me formerly. Men. That's worthily As any ear can hear. — Come, let 's not weep. — If I could shake off but one seven years From these old arms and legs, by the good gods, I 'd with thee every foot. Cor. Give me thy hand : — Come. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ROME. A Street near the Gate. Enter SiciNius, BRUTUS, and an ˆEdile. Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we '11 no further. — The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided In his behalf. Bru. Now we have shown our power, Let us seem humbler after it is done Than when it was a-

doing. Sic. Bid them home : Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength. Bru. Dismiss them home. [Exit ˆEdile. Here comes his mother. Sic. Let 's not meet her. Bru. Why? Sic. They say she 's mad. [your way. Bru. They have ta'en note of us : keep on and MENENIUS. Vol. O, you're well met : the hoarded plague o' the gods Requite your love ! Men. Peace, peace, be not so loud. Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear, — [gone ? Nay, and you shall hear some. — Will you be [To BRUTUS. Vir. You shall stay too [To SiciNius]: I would I had the power To say so to my husband. Sic. Are you mankind ? Vol. Ay, fool ; is that a shame ? — Note but this fool. — Was not a man my father ? Hadst thou foxship To banish him that struck more blows for Rome Than thou hast spoken words ? — Sic. O blessed heavens ! Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise words; [yet go;— And for Rome's good. — I'll tell thee what; — Nay, but thou shalt stay too : — I would my son Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, His good sword in his hand. Sic. What then? Vir. What then ! He 'd make an end of thy posterity. Vol. Bastards and all. — [Rome ! Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Men. Come, come, peace. Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country As he began, and not unknit himself The noble knot he made. Bru. I would he had.

846 CORIOLANUS. [ACT IV. Vol. I would he had! 'Twas you incens'd the rabble; — Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth As I can of those mysteries which heaven Will not have earth to know. Bru. Pray, let us go. VoL Now, pray, sir, get you gone : [this, — You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear As far as doth the Capitol exceed The meanest house in Rome, so far my son, — This lady's husband here ; this, do you see ? — Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all. Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you. Sic. Why stay we to be baited With one that wants her wits? Vol. Take my prayers with you. — I would the gods had nothing else to do [Exeunt Tribunes. But to confirm my curses ! Could I meet 'em But once a day, it would unclog my heart Of what lies heavy to 't. Men. You have told them home, And, by my troth, you have cause. You '11 sup with me ? Vol. Anger 's my meat ; I sup upon myself, And so shall starve with feeding. — Come, let's go: Leave this faint puling, and lament as I do, In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come. Men. Fie, fie, fie! [Exeunt. SCENE III. — A Highway between Rome and Antium. Enter a Roman and a Volsce, meeting. Rom. I know you well, sir ; and you know me : your name, I think, is Adrian. Vols. It is so, sir : truly, I have forgot you. Rom. I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em : know you me yet ? Vols. Nicanor? no. Rom. The same, sir. Vols. You had more beard when I last saw you ; but your favour is well approved by your tongue. What 's the news in Rome ? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there : you have well saved me a day's journey. Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection; the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles. Vols. Hath been! is it ended, then? Our state thinks not so ; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon "them in the heat of their division. Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again : for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out. Vols. Coriolanus banished ! Rom. Banished, sir. Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor. Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country. Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate thus accidentally to encounter you : you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home. Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome ; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you ? Vols. A most royal one ; the centurions and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning. Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company. Vols. You take my part from me, sir ; I have the most cause to be glad of yours. Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — ANTIUM. Before AUFIDIUS'S House. Enter CORIOLANUS, in mean apparel, disguised and mu-ffled. Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. — City, 'Tis I that made thy widows : many an heir Of these fa;r edifices 'fore my wars Have I heard groan and drop : then know me not, [stones Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with In puny battle slay me. Enter a Citizen. Save you, sir. Cit. And you. Cor. Direct me, if it be your will, Where great Aufidius lies : is he in Antium? Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state At his house this night. Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?

SCENE V.] CORIOLANUS. 847 Cit. This, here, before you. Cor. Thank you, sir: farewell. [Exit Citizen. 0 world, thy slippery turns ! Friends now fast sworn, Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose house, whose bed, whose meal and exercise Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissension of a doit, break out To bitterest enmity ; so fellest foes, [sleep Whose passions and whose plots have broke their To take the one the other, by some chance, Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends, And interjoin their issues. So with me : — My birthplace hate I, and my love 's upon This enemy town. — I '11 enter: if he slay me, He does fair justice ; if he give me way, 1 '11 do his country service. [Exit. SCENE V.— ANTIUM. A Hall in AUFIDIUS'S House. Music within. Enter a Servant. 1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine ! What service is here ! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit. Enter a second Servant. 2 Serv. Where 's Cotus ? my master calls for him. — Cotus! [Exit. Enter CORIOLANUS. Cor. A goodly house : the feast smells well ; but I Appear not like a guest Re-enter the first Servant. 1 Serv. What would you have, friend? whence are you? Here 's no place for you : pray, go to the door. Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment In being Coriolanus. Re-enter second Servant. 2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out. Cor. Away! 2 Serv. Away ! Get you away. Cor. Now thou art troublesome. 2 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon. Enter a third Servant. The first meets him. ZStrv. What fellow's this? I Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on : I cannot get him out o' the house : pr'ythee, call my master to him. 3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house. Cor. Let me but stand ; I will not hurt your hearth. 3 Serv. What are you? Cor. A gentleman. 3 Serv. A marvellous poor one. Cor. True, so I am. 3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station ; here 's no place for you ; pray you, avoid: come. Cor. Follow your function, go, And batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away. 3 Serv. What, you will not? — Pr'ythee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here. 2 Serv. And I shall. [Exit, 3 Serv. Where dwellest thou? Cor. Under the canopy. 3 Serv. Under the canopy ! Cor. Ay. ^Serv. Where's that? Cor. r the city of kites and crows. 3

Serv. I' the city of kites and crows ! — What an ass it is ! — Then thou dwellest with daws too? Cor. No, I serve not thy master. 3 Serv. How, sir ! Do you meddle with my master? Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress : Thou prat'st and prat'st ; serve with thy trencher, hence ! [Beats him in. Enter AUFIDIUS and the second Servant Auf. Where is this fellow? 2 Serv. Here, sir : I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within. Auf. Whence comest thou? what wouldst thou? thy name? [name? Why speak'st not? speak, man: what's thy Cor. If, Tullus, [Unmuffling. Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity Commands me name myself. Auf. What is thy name? [Servants retire. Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears, And harsh in sound to thine. Auf. Say, what's thy name? Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face Bears a'command in 't ; though thy tackle 's torn, Thou show'st a noble vessel : what 's thy name? Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown :— know'st thou me yet? Auf. I know thee not : — thy name?

848 CORIOLANUS. [ACT iv. Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces, Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may My surname, Coriolanus : the painful service, The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood Shed for my thankless country, are requited But with that surname ; a good memory, And witness of the malice and displeasure Which thou shouldst bear me : only that name remains ; The cruelty and envy of the people, Permitted by our dastard nobles, who Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest, And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity Hath brought me to thy hearth : not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life ; for if I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world I would have 'voided thee ; but in mere spite, To be full quit of those iny banishers, Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast A heart of wreak in thee, that wilt revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those maims [straight, Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee And make my misery serve thy turn : so use it That my revengeful services may prove As benefits to thee ; for I will fight Against my canker'd country with the spleen Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes Thou 'rt tir'd, then, in a word, I also am Longer to live most weary, and present My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice ; Which not to cut would thee show but a fool, Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast, And cannot live but to thy shame, unless It be to do thee service. Auf. O Marcius, Marcius ! Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter Should from yond cloud speak divine things, And say 'Tis true, I'd not believe them more Than thee, all noble Marcius. — Let me twine Mine arms about that body, where against My grained ash an hundred times hath broke And scar'd the moon with splinters : here I clip The anvil of my sword, and do contest As hotly and as nobly with thy love As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first, I lov'd the maid I married ; never man Sighed truer breath; but that I see thee here, Thou noble thing ! more dances my rapt heart Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! 1 tell thee, We have a power on foot ; and I had purpose Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn, Or lose mine arm for't : thou hast beat me out Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me ; We have been down together in my sleep, Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat, And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius, Had we no other quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all From twelve to seventy ; and, pouring war Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, Like a bold flood o'erbear. O, come, go in, And take our friendly senators by the hands ; Who now are here, taking their leaves of me, Who am prepar'd against your territories, Though not for Rome itself. Cor. You bless me, gods ! Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have The leading of thine own revenges, take The one half of my commission ; and set down, — As best thou art experience'd, since thou know'st Thy country's strength and weakness, — thine own ways ; Whether to knock against the gates of Rome, Or rudely visit them in parts remote, To fright them, ere destroy. But come in : Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes ! And more a friend than e'er an enemy ; Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand : most welcome ! [Exeunt COR. and AUF. 1 Serv. [Advancing.'} Here's a strange alteration! 2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel ; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of him. 1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one ould set up a top. 2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him : he had, sir, a kind of face, methought, — I cannot tell how to term it. 1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were, — would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think. 2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn : he is simply the rarest man i' the world. i Serv. I think he is : but a greater soldier than he you wot on.

.] CORIOLANUS. 849 2 Serv. Who, my master? 1 Serv. Nay, it 's no matter for that. 2 Serv. Worth six on him. 1 Serv. Nay, not so neither : but I take him to be the greater soldier. 2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that : for the defence of a town our general is excellent. I Serv. Ay, and for an assault too. Re-enter third Servant. 3 Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news, — news, you rascals ! [take. I and 2 Serv. What, what, what ? let 's par3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations ; I had as lieve be a condemned man. i and 2 Serv. Wherefore? wherefore? 3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to .thwack our general, — Caius Marcius. 1 Serv. Why do you say, thwack our general? 3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him. 2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends : he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself. 1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the troth on 't : before Corioli he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado. 2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him to. 1 Serv. But more of thy news? 3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within as if he were son and heir to Mars ; set at upper end o' the table ; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him : our general himself makes a mistress of him ; sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday ; for the other haˆ half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole '.able. He '11 go, he says, and sowl the portev of Rome gates by the ears : he will mow all down before him, and leave his passage polJ.ed. 2 Serv. An'd he 's as like to do 't as any man I can imagir,e. 3 Serv, "Do't! he will do't; for, look you, sir, he b'as as many friends as enemies ; which friend?., sir, as it were, durst not, look you, sir, show themselves, as we term it, his friends, whilst he 's in dejectitude. i Serv. Dejectitude! what's that? 3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him. 1 Serv. But when goes this forward ? 3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently; you shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis as it were a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips. 2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is good for nothing but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers. 1 Serv. Let me have war, say I ; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy ; mulled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than wars a destroyer of men. 2 Serv. 'Tis so : and as wars, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds. I Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another. 3 Serv. Reason ; because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising. All. In, in, in, in ! [Exeunt. SCENE VI.— ROME. A public Place. Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS. Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him ; His remedies are tame i' the present peace And quietness of the people, which before Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends Blush that the world goes well ; who rather had, Though they themselves did suffer by 't, behold Dissentious numbers pestering streets than see Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going About their functions friendly. Bru. We stood to't in good time.— Is this Menenius ? Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he : O, he is grown most kind Of late. Enter MENENIUS. Bru. Hail, sir ! Men. Hail to you both ! Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd But with his friends : the commonwealth doth stand ; And so would do, were he more angry at it. Men. All 's well ; and might have been much better if He could have temporiz'd. Sic. Where is he, hear you ? Men. Nay, I hear nothing : his mother and his wife Hear nothing from him.

OUrselves, our wives, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both. Sic. Live and thrive ! Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours; we wish'd Coriolanus Had lov'd you as we did. Citizens. Now the gods keep you ! Both Tri. Farewell, ferewell. [Exeunt Citizens. Sic. This is a happier and more comely time Than when these fellows ran about the streets Crying confusion. Bru. Caius Marcius was A worthy officer i' the war ; but insolent, O'ercomewith pride, ambitious past all thinking, Self-loving, — Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance. Men. I think not so. [tion, Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentaIf he had gone forth consul, found it so. Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still without him. Enter an ˆEdile, ˆd. Worthy tribunes, There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, Reports, — the Volsces with two several powers Are enter'd in the Roman territories ; And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before 'em. Men. »Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world ; Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome, And durst not once peep out. Sic. Come, what talk you Of Marcius? Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd.—It cannot be The Volsces dare break with us, M- Cannot be ! We hav« record that very well it can; And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow, Before you punish him, where he heard this ; Lest you shall chance to whip your information, And beat the messenger who bids beware Of what is to be dreaded. Sic. Tell not me : I know this cannot be. Bru. Not possible. Enter a Messenger. Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going All to the senate-house : some news is come That turns their countenances. Sic. 'Tis this slave, — Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes : — his raising; Nothing but his report. Mess. Yes, worthy sir, The slave's report is seconded ; and more, More fearful, is deliver'd. Sic. What more fearful? Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths, — How probable I do not know, — that Marcius, Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome, And vows revenge as spacious as between The young'st and oldest thing,

Sic. This is most likely ! Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish God Marcius home again. Sic. The very trick on 't, Men. This is unlikely : He and Aufidius can no more atone Than violentest contrariety. Enter a second Messenger. 2 Mess. You are sent for to the senate: A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius Associated with Aufidius, rages Upon our territories ; and have already [took Overborne their way, consurn'd with fire, and What lay before them. Enter COMINIUS. Com. O, you have made good work ! Men. Whsvit news ? what news ? Com. You have holp tO > ravish your own daughters, and To melt the city leads upon your pates ; To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,— Men. What's the news? what 's the news? Com. Your temples burned in their cement; and Your franchises, whereon you stood, ctˆnfin d Into an auger's bore. Men. Pray now, your news »*— • You have made fair work, I fear me.— Pr&T, your news ? As Hercules Did shake down mellow fruit. — You have made fair work ! Brti. But is this true, sir ? Com. Ay ; and you '11 look pale Before you find it other. All the regions Do smilingly revolt ; and who resist Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance, And perish constant fools. Who is 't can blame him? Your enemies and his find something in him. Men. We are all undone unless The noble man have mercy. Com. Who shall ask it ? The tribunes cannot do 't for shame ; the people Deserve such pity of him as the wolf [they Does of the shepherds : for his best friends, if Should say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him even As those should do that had deserv'd his hate, And therein show'd like enemies. Men. 'Tis true : If he were putting to my house the brand That should consume it, I have not the face To say, Beseech you, cease. — You have made fair hands, You and your crafts ! you have crafted fair ! Com. You have brought A trembling upon Rome, such as was never So incapable of help. Both Tri. Say not, we brought it. Men. How ! Was it we ? we lov'd him ; but, like beasts, [clusters, And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your Who did hoot him out o' the city. Com. But I fear They '11 roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius, The second name of men, obeys his points As if he were his officer: — desperation Is all the policy, strength, and defence, That Rome can make against them. Enter a troop 0/" Citizens. Men. Here comes the clusters. — And is Aufidius with him ? — You are they That made the air unwholesome, when you cast Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he 's coming ; And not a hair upon a soldier's head [combs Which will not prove a whip : as many coxAs you threw caps up will he tumble down, And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter ; If he could burn us all into one coal, We have deserv'd it Citizens. Faith, we hear fearful news. 1 Cit. For mine own part, When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity. 2 Cit. I understand thee well; and be thou When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems, And so he thinks, and is no less apparent To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state, Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon As draw his sword : yet he hath left undone That which shall break his neck or hazard mine Whene'er we come to our account. [Rome ? Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down ; And the nobility of Rome are his : The senators and patricians love him too : The tribunes are no soldiers ; and their people Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them ; but he could not Carry his honours even : whether 'twas pride, Which out of daily fortune ever taints The happy man; whether defect of judgment, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was lord of; or whether nature, Not to be other than one thing, not moving From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace Even with the same austerity and garb As he controll'd the war ; but one of these, — As he hath spices of them all, not all, For I dare so far free him, — made him fear'd, So hated, and so banish'd : but he has a merit To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues Lie in the interpretation of the time : And power, unto itself most commendable, Hath not a tomb so evident as a cheer To extol what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire ; one nail, one nail ; Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail. Come , let's away. When , Caius , Rome is thine , Thou art poor'st of all ; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt. ACT V. SCENE I.— ROME. A public Plate. Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and others. Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him In a most dear particular. He call'd me father : But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him; A mile before his tent fall down, and knee The way into his mercy : nay, if he coy'd To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home. Com. He would not seem to know me. Men. Do you hear? Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name: I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer to : forbad all names ; He was a kind of nothing, titleless, Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire Of burning Rome. Men. Why, so, — you have made good work ! A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome, To make coals cheap, — a noble memory ! Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon When it was less expected : he replied, It was a bare petition of a state To one whom they had punish'd. Men. Very well : Could he say less ? Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For 's private friends : his answer to me was, He could not stay to pick them in a pile Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly For one poor grain or two to leave unburnt, And still to nose the offence. Men. For one poor grain Or two ! I am one of those ; his mother, wife, His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains : You are the musty chaff; and you are smelt Above the moon : we must be burnt for you. Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid In this so never-heeded help, yet do not Upbraid 's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader; your good tongue, More than the instant army we can make, Might stop our countryman. Men. No; I '11 not meddle. Sic. Pray you, go to him. Men. What should I do ? Bru. Only make trial what your love can do For Rome, towards Marcius. Men. Well, and say that Marcius Return me, as Cominius is return'd, Unheard ; what then ? But as a discontented friend, grief-shot With his unkindness ? Say 't be so ? Sic. Yet your good-will

SCENE II.] CORIOLANUS. 853 Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure As you intended well. Men. I'll undertake 't: I think he '11 hear me. Yet to bite his lip And hum at good Cominius much unhearts me. He was not taken well: he had not din'd: The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then We pout upon the morning, are unapt To give or to forgive ; but when we have stuff 'd These pipes and these conveyances of our blood With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls Than in our priest-like fasts : therefore I '11 watch him Till he be dieted to my request, And then I '11 set upon him. [ness, Brti. You know the very road into his kindAnd cannot lose your way. Men. Good faith, I '11 prove him, Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge Of my success. [Exit. Com. He '11 never hear him. Sic. Not? Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye Red as 'twould burn Rome ; and his injury The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him ; 'Twas very faintly he said Rise ; dismiss'd me Thus, with his speechless hand : what he would do, [not, He sent in writing after me; what he would Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions : So that all hope is vain, Unless in 's noble mother and his wife ; Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him [hence, For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's And with our fair entreaties haste them on. /. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — An advanced Post of the Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guard at their stations. Enter to them MENENIUS. 1 G. Stay : whence are you ? 2 G. Stand, and go back. Men. You guard like men ; 'tis well : but, by your leave, I am an officer of state, and come To speak with Coriolanus. i G. From whence ? Men. From Rome. 1 G. You may not pass, you must return: our general Will no more hear from thence. [before 2 G. You '11 see your Rome embrac'd with fire You '11 speak with Coriolanus. Men. Good my friends, If you have heard your general talk of Rome, And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks My name hath touch'd your ears : it is Menenius. i G. Be it so ; go back : the virtue of your name Is not here passable. Men. I tell thee, fellow, Thy general is my lover : I have been [read The book of his good acts, whence men have His fame unparallel'd, haply amplified; For I have ever verified my friends, — Of whom he's chief, — with all the size that verity Would without lapsing suffer : nay, sometimes, Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, [praise I have tumbled past the throw: and in his Have almost stamp'd the leasing: therefore, fellow, I must have leave to pass. 1 G. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have utter'd words in your own, you should not pass here : no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore, go back. Men. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general. 2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar, — as you say you have, — I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back. Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner. I G. You are a Roman, are you ? Men. I am as thy general is. 1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be ? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution : you are condemned ; our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon. Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here he would use me with estimation. 2 G. Come, my captain knows you not. Men. I mean thy general. I G. My general cares not for you. Back, I say ; go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood; — back; that's the utmost of your having : — back. Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow, —

854 CORIOLANUS. [ACT v. Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS. Cor. What 's the matter ? Men. Now, you companion, I '11 say an errand for you ; you shall know now that I am in estimation ; you shall perceive that a jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus : guess but by my entertainment with him if thou standest not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorshipand crueller in suffering ; behold now presently, and swoon for what 's to come upon thee. — The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does ! O my son ! my son ! thou art preparing fire for us ; look thee, here 's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee ; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs ; and conjure thee to pardon Rome and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here ; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee. Cor. Away! Men. How ! away ! [affairs Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My Are servanted to others : though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much. — Therefore, be gone. Mine ears against your suits are stronger than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee, Take this along ; I writ it for thy sake, [Gives a letter. And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius, I will not hear thee speak. — This man, Aufidius, Was my beloved in Rome : yet thou behold'st ! Auf. You keep a constant temper. [Exeunt COR. and AUF. 1 G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius ? 2 G. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power : you know the way home again. 1 G. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back ? 2 G. What cause,do you think, I ha veto swoon? Men. I neither care for the world nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, ye 're so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that, you are, long; and your misery increase with your age ! I say to you, as I was said to, away ! [Exit. 1 G. A noble fellow, I warrant him. 2 G. The worthy fellow is our general : he is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt. SCENE III.—

The Tent of CORIOLANUS. Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and others. Cor. We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow Set down our host. — My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords how plainly I have borne this business. Auf. Only their ends You have respected ; stopp'd your ears against The general suit of Rome ; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you. Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome, Lov'd me above the measure of a father ; Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him ; for whose old love I have, — Though I show'd sourly to him, — once more offer'd The first conditions, which they did refuse, • And cannot now accept, to grace him only, That thought he could do more, a very little I have yielded to : fresh embassies and suits, Nor from the state nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. — Ha! what shout is this? [Shout within. Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time 'tis made? I will not. Enter, in mourning habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants. • My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand The grandchild to her blood. But, out, affection ! All bond and privilege of nature, break ! Let it be virtuous to be obstinate. — [eyes, What is that curt'sy worth? or those doves' Which can make gods forsworn? — I melt, and am not [bows, Of stronger earth than others. — My mother As if Olympus to a molehill should In supplication nod : and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession which Great nature cries, Deny not. — Let the Volsces Plough Rome and harrow Italy : I '11 never Be such a gosling to obey instinct ; but stand, As if a man were author of himself, And knew no other kin.

SCENE III.] CORIOLANUS. 8S5 Vir. My lord and husband ! Cor, These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome. „ Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so. 'Cor. Like a dull actor now, I have forgot my part, and I am out, Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny ; but do not say, For that, Forgive our Romans. — O, a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge ; Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee, dear ; and my true lip Hath virgin'd it e'er since. — You gods ! I prate, And the most noble mother of the world Leave unsaluted : sink, my knee, i' the earth ; {Kneels. Of thy deep duty more impression show Than that of common sons. Vol. O, stand up bless'd ! Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint, I kneei before thee; and unproperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while Between the child and parent. _Kneels. Cor. What is this? Your knees to me? to your corrected son? Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun ; Murdering impossibility, to make What cannot be, slight work. Vol. Thou art my warrior ; I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady? Cor. The noble sister of Publicola, The moon of Rome ; chaste as the icicle That 's curded by the frost from purest snow, And hangs on Dian's temple : — dear Valeria ! Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours, Which, by the interpretation of full time, May show like all yourself. Cor. The god of soldiers, With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw, And saving those that eye thee ! Vol. Your knee, sirrah. Cor. That 's my brave boy. [self, Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myAre suitor.; to you. . Cor. I beseech you, peace : Or, if you'd ask, remember this before, — The things I have forsworn to grant may never Be held by you denials. Do not bid me Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate Again with Rome's mechanics. — Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons. Vol. O, no more, no more ! You have said you will not grant us anything; For we have nothing else to ask but that Which you deny already : yet we will ask ; That, if you fail in our request, the blame May hang upon your hardness; therefore hear us.

[we '11 Cor. Aufidius, and you Volsces, mark : for Hear naught from Rome in private. — Your request? [raiment Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our And state of bodies would bewray what life We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself, How more unfortunate than all living women Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should [comforts, Make our yes flow with joy, hearts dance with Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow ; Making the mother, wife, and child to see The son, the husband, and the father tearing His country's bowels out. And to poor we, Thine enmity's most capital : thou barr'st us Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort That all but we enjoy ; for how can we, Alas, how can we for our country pray, Whereto we are bound, — together with thy victory, Whereto we are bound? alack, or we must lose The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person, Our comfort in the country. We must find An evident calamity, though we had [thou Our wish, which side should win; for either Must, as a foreign recreant, be led With manacles thorough our streets, or else Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin, And bear the palm for having bravely shed Thy wife and children's blood. P'or myself, son, I purpose not to wait on fortune till [thee These war,s determine: if I cannot persuade Rather to show a noble grace to both parts Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner March to assault thy country than to tread, — Trust to't, thou shalt not, — on thy mother's womb, That brought thee to this world. Vir. Ay, and mine, That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name Living to time. Boy. 'A shall not tread on me ; I '11 run away till I am bigger ; but then 1 11 fight.

 Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be, Requires nor child nor woman's face to see. I have sat too long. [Rising. Vol. Nay, go not from us thus. If it were so that our request did tend To save the Romans, thereby to destroy The Volsces whom you serve, you might condemn us, As poisonous of your honour : no ; our suit Is, that you reconcile them : while the Volsces May say, This mercy we have showed; the Romans, This we received ; and each in either side Give thee all-hail to thee, and cry, Be blessed For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great son, The end of war 's uncertain ; but this certain, That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit Which thou shall thereby reap is such a name, Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses ; Whose chronicle thus writ, — The manwas noble, But with his last attempt he wifid it out; Destroyed his country ; and his name remains To the ensuing age abhorr'd. Speak to me, son : Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour, To imitate the graces of the gods, To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air, And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak? Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man Still to remember wrongs? — Daughter, speak you : [boy : He cares not for your weeping. — Speak thou, Perhaps thy childishness will move him more Than can our reasons. — There is no man in the world [prate More bound to his mother ; yet here he lets me Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy ; Whenshe, — poor hen, — fond of no second brood, Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home, Loaden with honour. Say my request 's unjust, And spurn me back: but if it be not so, Thou art not honest ; and the gods will plague thee, That thou restrain'st from me the duty which To a mother's part belongs. — He turns away: Down, ladies ; let us shame him with our knees. To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride Than pity to our prayers. Down : an end ; This is the last. — So we will home to Rome, And die among our neighbours. — Nay, behold's: This boy, that cannot tell what he would have, But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship, Does reason our petition with more strength Than thou hast to deny't. — Come, let us go: This fellow had a Volscian to his mother ; His wife is in Corioli, and his child Like him by chance. — Yet give us our despatch : I am hush'd until our city be afire, And then I '11 speak a little. Cor. [After holding VOLUMNIA by the hands in silence.'} O mother, mother! What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope, The gods look down, and this unnatural scene They laugh at. O my mother, mother ! O ! You have won a happy victory to Rome ; But for your son, — believe it, O, believe it, Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd, If not most mortal to him. But let it come. — Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars, I'll frame convenient peace. Now,good Aufidius, If you were in my stead, would you have heard A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius? Auf. I was mov'd withal. Cor. I dare be sworn you were: And, sir, it is no little thing to make Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir, What peace you '11 make, advise me: for my part, I '11 not to Rome, I '11 back with you ; and, pray you, Stand to me in this cause. — O mother ! wife ! Auf. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour At difference in thee : out of that I '11 work Myself a former fortune. [Aside. [The Ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS. Cor. Ay, by and by ; [To VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, &

SCENE IV.] CORIOLANUS. 857 Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon : he has wings ; he 's more than a creeping thing. Sic. He loved his mother dearly. Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-yearold horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corslet with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in. Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly. Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him : there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger ; that shall our poor city find : and all this is 'long of you. Sic. The gods be good unto us ! Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him we respected not them : and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Sir, if you 'd save your life, fly to your house : The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, And hale him up and down ; all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They '11 give him death by inches. Enter a second Messenger. Sic. What 's the news? 2 Mess. Good news, good news ; — the ladies have prevail'd, The Volscians are dislodg'd and Marcius gone : A merrier day did never yet greet Rome, No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins. Sic. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain? 2 Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire : Where have you hirk'd, that you make doubt of it? [tide Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you ! [Trumpets and hautboys sounded, drums beat 'en , and shouting •within. The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, Tabors and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you ! [Shouting again. Men. This is good news. I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians, A city full : of tribunes such as you, [to-day: A sea and land full. You have pray'd well This morning, for ten thousand of your throats I 'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy 1 [Shouting- and music.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings ; next, Accept my thankfulness. 2 Mess. Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks. Sic. They are near the city? Mess. Almost at point to enter. Sic. We will meet them, And help the joy. {Exeunt. SCENE V. — ROME. A Street near the Gate. Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGII.IA, VALERIA, &Y., accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and Citizens. i Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome! Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them : Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius, Repeal him with the welcome of his mother; Cry, Welcome , ladies , welcome! — All. Welcome, ladies, Welcome ! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. [Exeunt. SCENE VI.— ANTITJM. A public Place. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants. Auf. Go tell the lords of the city I am here : Deliver them this paper ; having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place: where I, Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words : despatch. [Exeunt Attendants. Enter three or four Conspirators of AUFIDIUS'S faction. Most welcome ! 1 Con. How is it with our general ? Auf. Even so As with a man by his own alms empoison'd, And with his charity slain. 2 Con. Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us parties, we '11 deliver you Of your great danger.

CORIOLANUS. [ACT v. Auf. Sir, I cannot tell: We must proceed as we do find the people. 3 Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst [either 'Twixt you there 's difference : but the fall of Makes the survivor heir of all. Auf. I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd [heighten'd, Mine honour for his truth: who being so He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing so my friends ; and to this end He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable, and free. 3 Con. Sir, his stoutness, When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping, — Auf. That I would have spoke of: Being banish'd for 't, he came unto my hearth ; Presented to my knife his throat : I took him ; Made him joint-servant with me ; gave him way In all his own desires; nay, let him choose Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men ; serv'd his designments In mine own person ; holp to reap the fame Which he made all his ; and took some pride To do myself this wrong : till, at the last, I seem'd his follower, not partner; and He wagfd me with his countenance as if I had been mercenary. I Con. So he did, my lord : The army marvell'd at it ; and, in the last, When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd For no less spoil than glory, — Auf. There was it ; — For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him. At a few drops of women's rheum, which are As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour Of our great action : therefore shall he die, And I '11 renew me in his fall. But, hark ! [Drums and trumpets sotmd, with great shouts of the people. 1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post, And had no welcomes home ; but he returns Splitting the air with noise. 2 Con. And patient fools, Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear With giving him glory. 3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage, Ere he express himself, or move the people With what he would say, let him feel your sword, Which we will second. When he lies along, After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury His reasons with his body. Auf. Say no more : Here come the lords. Enter the Lords of the City. Lords. You are most welcome home. Auf. I have not deserv'd it. But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd What I have written to you? Lords. We have. I Lord. And grieve to hear 't. What faults he made before the last, I think Might have found easy fines : but there to end Where he was to begin, and give away The benefit of our levies, answering us With our own charge : making a treaty where There was a yielding. — This admits no excuse. Auf. He approaches : you shall hear him. Enter CORIOLANUS, with drums and colours ; a crowd of Citizens with him. Cor. Hail, lords ! I am return'd your soldier ; No more infected with my country's love Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting Under your great command. You are to know That prosperously I have attempted, and With bloody passage led your wars even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home Do more than counterpoise a full third part The charges of the action. We have made pe; With no less honour to the Antiates Than shame to the Romans: and we here deliver, Subscribed by the consuls and patricians, Together with the seal o' the senate, what We have compounded on. Auf. Read it not, noble lords ; But tell the traitor, in the highest degree He hath abus'd your powers. Cor. Traitor ! — How now ! Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius. Cor. Marcius ! Auf. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius. Dost thou think I'll grace thee with that r6bbery, thy stol'n name Coriolanus in Corioli ? — You lords and heads o' the state, perfidiously He has betray'd your business, and given up, For certain drops of salt, your city Rome, — I say your city, — to his wife and mother; Breaking his oath and resolution, like A twist of rotten silk ; never admitting Counsel o' the war ; but at his nurse's tears He whin'd and roar'd away your victory; peace

SCENE VI.] CORIOLANTJS. 859 That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart Look'd wondering each at other. Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars? Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears, — Cor. Ha ! Atif. No more. Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart [slave ! — Too great for what contains it. Boy ! O Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords, Must give this cur the lie : and his own notion, — Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him; that must bear My beating to his grave, — shall join to thrust The lie unto him. 1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak. Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads, Stain all your edges on me. — Boy ! False hound ! If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there, That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I Flutter' d your Volscians in Corioli : Alone I did it. — Boy ! Auf. Why, noble lords, Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune, Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart, 'Fore your own eyes and ears? Conspirators. Let him die for 't. Citizens. Tear him to pieces, do it presently: — he killed my son ; — my daughter ; — he killed my cousin Marcus ; — he killed my father, — 2 Lord. Peace, ho ! — no outrage ; — peace ! The man is noble, and his fame folds in This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us Shall have judicious hearing. — Stand, Aufidius, And trouble not the peace. Cor. O that I had him,, With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe, To use my lawful sword ! Auf. Insolent villain ! Conspirators. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him! [AUF. and the Conspirators draw, and kill COR., who falls: AUF. stands on him. Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold ! Atif. My noble masters, hear me speak. 1 Lord. O Tullus,— 2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep. [quiet ; 3 Lord. Tread not upon him. — Masters all, be Put up your swords. [this rage, Auf. My lords, when you shall know, — as in Provok'd by him, you cannot, — the great danger Which this man's life did owe you, you '11 rejoice That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours To call me to your senate, I '11 deliver Myself your loyal servant, or endure Your heaviest censure. 1 Lord. Bear from hence his body, And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded As the most noble corse that ever herald Did follow to his urn. 2 Lord. His own impatience Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame. Let 's make the best of it Auf. My rage is gone; And I am struck with sorrow. — Take him up: —

Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers ; I '11 be one. — Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully: Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one, Which to this hour bewail the injury, Yet he shall have a noble memory. — Assist. [Exeunt, bearing the A dead march sounded. W .tiftk

862 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT i. And groaning underneath this age's yoke, Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes. Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius, That you would have me seek into myself For that which is not in me ? [hear : Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to And, since you know you cannot see yourself So well as by reflection, I, your glass, Will modestly discover to yourself That of yourself v/hich you yet know not of. And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus: Were I a common laugher, or did use To stale with ordinary oaths my love To every new protester ; if you know That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard, And after scandal them ; or if you know That I profess myself in banqueting To all the rout, then hold me dangerous. [Flourish and shout. Bru. What means this shouting ? I do fear the people Choose Caesar for their king. Cas. Ay, do you fear it ? Then must I think you would not have it so. Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well.— But wherefore do you hold me here so long ? What is it that you would impart to me ? If it be aught toward the general good, Set honour in one eye and death r the other, And I will look on both indifferently; For, let the gods so speed me as I love The name of honour more than I fear death. Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus, As well as I do know your outward favour. Well, honour is the subject of my story. — I cannot tell what you and other men Think of this life ; but, for my single self, I had as lief not be as live to be In awe of such a thing as I myself. I was born free as Caesar ; so were you : We both have fed as well ; and we can both Endure the winter's cold as well as he. For once, upon a raw and gusty day, The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores, Caesar said to me, Dar > st thou, Cassius, now Leap in with me into this angry flood, And swim to yonder point ? — Upon the word, Accoutred as I was, I plunged in, And bade him follow : so indeed he did. The torrent roar'd ; and we did buffet it With lusty sinews, throwing it aside And stemming it with hearts of controversy : But ere we could arrive the point propos'd, Caesar cried, Help me, Cassius, or f sink! I, as ˆneas, our great ancestor, Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber Did I the tired Caesar : and this man Is now become a god ; and Cassius is A wretched creature, and must bend his body If Caesar carelessly but nod on him. He had a fever when he was in Spain, And, when the fit was on him, I did mark How he did shake : 'tis true, this god did shake : His coward lips did from their colour fly; And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world, Did lose his lustre : I did hear him groan : Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans Mark him, and write his speeches in their books, Alas ! it cried, Give me some drink, Titinius, As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me, A man of such a feeble temper should So get the start of the majestic world, And bear the palm alone. [Shout : flourish. Bru. Another general shout ! I do believe that these applauses are For some new honours that are heap'd on Caesar. Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world Like a Colossus ; and we petty men Walk under his huge legs, and peep about To find ourselves dishonourable graves. Men at some time are masters of their fates: The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings. Brutus and Caesar: what should be in that Caesar ? [yours ? Why should that name be sounded more than Write them together, yours is as fair a name ; Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well ; Weigh them, it is as heavy ; conjure with 'em, Brutus will starta spirit as soon as Caesar. [Shout. Now, in the names of all the gods at once, Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed, That he has grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd ! Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods ! When went there by an age, since the great flood, But it was fam'd with more than with one man ? When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome, That her wide walls encompass'd but one man ? Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough, When there is in it but one only man. O ! you and I have heard our fathers say, There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome As easily as a king. [jealous ; Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing What you would work me to, I have some aim :

SCENE II.] JULIUS CESAR. 863 How I have thought of this, and of these times, I shall recount hereafter; for this present, I would not, so with love I might entreat you, Be any further mov'd. What you have said I will consider ; what you have to say I will with patience hear : and find a time Both meet to hear and answer such high things. Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this ; Brutus had rather be a villager Than to repute himself a son of Rome Under these hard conditions as this time Is like to lay upon us. Cas. I am glad that my weak words Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus. Bru. The games are done, and Caesar is returning. Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve ; And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you What hath proceeded worthy note to-day. Re-enter CAESAR and his Train. Bru. I will do so. — But, look you, Cassius, The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow, And all the rest look like a chidden train: Calphurnia's cheek is pale ; and Cicero » Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes As we have seen him in the Capitol, Being crossed in conference by some senators. Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is. Cces. Antonius. Ant. Caesar? Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat ; Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights: Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look ; He thinks too much : such men are dangerous. Ant. Fear him not, Caesar, he 's not dangerous; He is a noble Roman, and well given. Cces. Would he were fatter ! — But I fear him not: Yet if my name were liable to fear, I do not know the man I should avoid So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much ; He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men : he loves no plays, As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music: Seldom he smiles ; and smiles in such a sort As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit That could be mov'd to smile at anything. Such men as he be never at heart's ease Whiles they behold a greater than themselves; And therefore are they very dangerous. I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd Than what I fear, — for always I am Caesar. Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf, And tell me truly what thou think'st of him. [Exeunt CJESKK and STRAIN. CASCA stays behind. Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak ; would you speak with me? [to-day, Bru. Ay, Casca ; tell us what hath chanc'd That Caesar looks so sad? [not? Casca. Why, you were with him, were you Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd. Casca. Why, there was a crown offered him: and being offered him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus ; and then the people fell a-shouting. Bru. What was the second noise for? Casca. Why, for that too. [cry for? Cas. They shouted thrice : what was the last Casca. Why, for that too. Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice? Casca. Ay, marry, was 't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted. Cas. Who offered him the crown? Casca, Why, Antony. Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca. Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it : it was mere foolery ; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown ; — yet 'twas not a crown neither, 'twas one of these coronets; — and, as I told you, he put it by once : but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loth to lay his fingers off it. And then he offered it the third time ; he put it the third time by : and still, as he refused it, the rabblement hooted, and clapped their chapped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Caesar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned, and fell down at it : and for mine own part I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air. Cas. But, soft, I pray you : what, did Caesar swoon? Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless. Bru. 'Tis very like, — he hath the falling sickness. Cas. No, Caesar hath it not ; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling sickness. Casca. I know not what you mean by that ; but I am sure Caesar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according

 as he pleased and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man. [self? Bru. What said he when he came unto himCasca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet, and offered them his throat to cut. — An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done or said anything amiss, he desired their worships to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul! — and forgave him with all their hearts : but there 's no heed to be taken of them ; if Caesar had stabbed their mothers they would have done no less. Brzi. And after that he came, thus sad, away? Casca. Ay. Cas. Did Cicero say anything? Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek. Cas. To what effect? Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another, and shook their heads ; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too : Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it. Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca? Casca. No, I am promised forth. Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow? Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating. Cas. Good ; I will expect you. Casca. Do so : farewell, both. [Exit. Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be ! He was quick mettle when he went to school. Cas. So is he now, in execution Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form. This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words With better appetite. [you : ' Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave To-morrow, if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you ; or, if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you. Cas. I will do so : till then, think of the world. [Exit BRUTUS. Well, Brutus, thou art noble ; yet, I see, Thy honourable metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd : therefore it is meet That noble minds keep ever with their likes ; For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd? Caesar doth bear me hard ; but he loves Brutus: If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius, He should not humour me. I will this night, In several hands, in at his windows throw, As if they came from several citizens, Writings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at : And, after this, let Caesar seat him sure ; For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit. SCENE III.— ROME. A Street. Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, CASCA, with his sword drawn, and CICERO. Cic. Good-even, Casca : brought you Caesar home? Why are you breathless? and why stare you so? Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks ; and I have seen The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam, To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds : But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. Either there is a civil strife in heaven ; Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, Incenses them to send destruction. Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonderful ? Casca. A common slave, — you know him well by sight, — his left Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn Like twenty torches join'd ; and yet his hand, Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd. Besides, — I ha' not since put up my sword, — Against the Capitol I met a lion, Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by, Without annoying me : and there were drawn Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear ; who swore they saw Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets. And yesterday the bird of night did sit, Even at noon-day, upon the market-place, Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies Do so conjointly meet, let not men say, These are their reasons, — they are natural; For I believe they are portentous things • Unto the climate that they point upon. Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:

SCENE III.] JULIUS CESAR. 865 But men may construe things after their fashion, Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. Comes Caesar to the Capitol to-morrow? Casca. He doth ; for he did bid Antonius Send word to you he would be there to-morrow. Cic. Good-night, then, Casca : this disturbed sky Is not to walk in. Casca, Farewell, Cicero. [Exit CICERO. Enter CASSIUS. Cas. Who's there? Casca. A Roman. Cas. Casca, by your voice. Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this ! Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men. Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so? [of faults. Cas. Those that have known the earth so full For my part, I have walk'd about the streets, Submitting me unto the perilous night ; And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see, Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone : And when the cross-blue lightning seem'd to open The breast of heaven, I did present myself Even in the aim and very flash of it. Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens? It is the part of men to fear and tremble When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send Such dreadful heralds to astonish us. Cas. You are dull, Casca ; and those sparks of life That should be in a Roman you do want, Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze, And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder, To see the strange impatience of the heavens : But if you would consider the true cause Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts, Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind ; Why old men fools, and children calculate ; Why all these things change, from their ordinance, Their natures, and pre-formed faculties, To monstrous quality ; — why, you shall find That heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits, To make them instruments of fear and warning Unto some monstrous state. Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man Most like this dreadful night That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars As doth the lion in the Capitol, — A man no mightier than thyself or me In personal action ; yet prodigious grown, And fearful, as these strange eruptions are. Casca. 'Tis Caesar that you mean ; is it not, Cassius? Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors ; But, woe the while ! our fathers' minds are dead, And we are govern'd with our mothers' spi i:s; Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish. Casca. Indeed they say the senators to-morrow Mean to establish Caesar as a king;

And he shall wear his crown by sea and land, In every place, save here in Italy. Cas. I know where I will wear this ('rigger then; Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius : Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong ; Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat: Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass, Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron, Can be retentive to the strength of spirit ; But life, being weary of these worldly bars, Never lacks power to dismiss itself. If I know this, know all the world besides, That part of tyranny that I do bear, I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still. Casca. So can I : So every bondman in his own hand bears The power to cancel his captivity. Cas. And why should Csesar be a tyrant, then? Poor man ! I know he would not be a wolf, But that he sees the Romans are but sheep : He were no lion, were not Romans hinds. Those that with haste will make a mighty fire Begin it with weak straws : what trash is Rome, What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves For the base matter to illuminate So vile a thing as Caesar I But, O grief, Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak this Before a willing bondman ; then I know My answer must be made : but I am arm'd, And dangers are to me indifferent. [man Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand : Be factious for redress of all these griefs ; And I will set this foot of mine as far As who goes farthest. Cas. There 's a bargain made. Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans To undergo with me an enterprise Of honourable-dangerous consequence ; And I do know by this they stay for me In Pompey's porch : for now, this fearful night, There is no stir or walking in the streets ; And the complexion of the element In favour 's like the work we have in hand, Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible. 2E

866 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT ii. Casca. Stand close a while, for here comes one in haste. Cas. 'Tis Cinna, — I do know him by his gait ; He is a friend. Enter CINNA. Cinna, where haste you so? Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber? Cas. No, it is Casca ; one incorporate To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna ? Cin. I am glad on 't. What a fearful night is this 1 [sights. There 's two or three of us have seen strange Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me. Cin. Yes, you are. 0 Cassius, if you could But win the noble Brutus to our party, — Cas. Be you content : good Cinna, take this paper, And look you lay it in the praetor's chair, Where Brutus may but find it ; and throw this In at his window ; set this up with wax Upon old Brutus' statue : all this done, [us. Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there? Cin. All but Metellus Cimber ; and he 's gone To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie, And so bestow these papers as you bade me. Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre. {Exit CINNA. Come, Casca, you and I will yet, ere day, See Brutus at his house : three parts of him Is ours already ; and the man entire, Upon the next encounter, yields him ours. Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts : And that which would appear offence in us, His countenance, like richest alchemy, Will change to virtue and to worthiness. Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him, You have right well conceited. Let us go, For it is after midnight ; and ere day We will awake him, and be sure of him. [Exeunt. ACT II. SCENE I. — ROME. BRUTUS'S Orchard. Enter BRUTUS. Brtt. What, Lucius, ho! — 1 cannot, by the progress of the stars, Give guess how near to day. — Lucius, I say ! — I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly. — When, Lucius, when? awake, I say! what, Lucius! Enter Lucius. Luc. Call'd you, my lord ? Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius: When it is lighted, come and call me here. Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit. Bru. It must be by his death : and, for my part, I know no personal cause to spurn at him, But for the general. He would be crown'd : How that might change his nature, there 's the question : It is the bright day that brings forth the adder; And that craves wary walking. Crown him? — that— And then, I grant, we put a sting in him, That at his will he may do danger with. The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins Remorse from power : and, to speak truth of Caesar, I have not known when his affections sway'd More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof That lowliness is young ambition's ladder, Whereto the climber-upward turns his face ; But when he once attains the utmost round, He then unto the ladder turns his back, Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees By which he did ascend. So Caesar may ; Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel Will bear no colour for the thing he is, Fashion it thus ; that what he is, augmented, Would run to these and these extremities : And therefore think him as a serpent's egg, Which, hatch'd, would as his kind grow mischievous ; And kill him in the shell. Re-enter Lucius. Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir. Searching the window for a flint, I found [Giving him a letter, This paper, thus seal'd up ; and I am sure It did not lie there when I went to bed. Bru. Get you to bed again, it is not day. Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March? Luc. I know not, sir. [word. Bru. Look in the calender, and bring me Luc. I will, sir. [Exit. Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air, Give so much light that I may read by them. [Opens the letter and reads. Brutus, thou sleep' st: awake, and see thyself. Shall Rome, &>c. Speak, strike, redress! Brutus, thou sleefst: awake. — Such instigations have been often dropp'd Where I have took them up.

SCENE I.] JULIUS CESAR. Shall Rome, &c. Thus must I piece it out, — Shall Rome stand under one man's awe ? What, Rome? My ancestors did from the streets of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king. Speak, strike, redress! — Am I entreated then To speak and strike ! O Rome ! I make thee promise, If the redress will follow, thou receivest Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus ! Re-enter Lucius. Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days. [Knocking1 within. Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate ; somebody knocks. [Exit Lucius. Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar, I have not slept. Between the acting of a dreadful thing And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma or a hideous dream : The genius and the mortal instruments Are then in council ; and the state of man, Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection. Re-enter Lucius. Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door Who doth desire to see you. Bru. Is he alone? Luc. No, sir, there are more with him. Bru. Do you know them? Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears, And half their faces buried in their cloaks, That by no means I may discover them By any mark of favour. Bru. Let 'em enter. [Exit Lucius. They are the /action. O conspiracy, [night, Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by When evils are most free? O, then, by day Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy ; Hide it in smiles and affability: For if thou hath thy native semblance on, Not Erebus itself were dim enough To hide thee from prevention. Enter CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, a Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest : Good-morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you? Bru. I have been up this hour; awake all night. Know I these men that come along with you? Cas. Yes, every man of them ; and no man here But honours you ; and every one doth wish You had but that opinion of yourself Which every noble Roman bears of you. This is Trebonius. Bru. He is welcome hither. Cas. This, Decius Brutus. Bru. He is welcome too, Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; And this, Metellus Cimber. Bru. They are all welcome. What watchful cares do interpose themselves Betwixt your eyes and night ? Cas. Shall I entreat a word? [BRUTUS and CASSIUS -whisper. Dec. Here lies the east ; doth not the day break here? Casca. No. Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth ; and yon grey lines That fret the clouds are messengers of day. Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd. Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises ; Which is a great way growing on the south, Weighing the youthful season of the year. Some two months hence up higher toward the north He first presents his fire ; and the high east Stands, as the Capitol, directly here. Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one. Cas. And let us swear our resolution. Bru. No, not an oath : if not the face of men, The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse, — If these be motives weak, break off betimes, And every man hence to his idle bed ; So let high -sighted tyranny range on, Till each man drop by lottery. But if these, As I am sure they do, bear fire enough To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour The melting spirits of women ; then, countrymen, What need we any spur, but our own cause, To prick us to redress? what other bond Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word And will not palter? and what other oath Than honesty to honesty engag'd That this shall be, or we will fall for it? Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautelous, Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls That welcome wrongs ; unto bad causes swear Such creatures as men doubt : but do not stain The even virtue of our enterprise, Nor the insuppressive mettle of our spirits, To think that or our cause or our performance

 Did need an oath ; when every drop of blood That every Roman bears, and nobly bears, Is guilty of a several bastardy If he do break the smallest particle Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. Cas. But what of Cicero? shall we sound him? I think he will stand very strong with us. Casca. Let us not leave him out. Cin. No, by no means. Met. O, let us have him ; for his silver hairs Will purchase us a good opinion, And buy men's voices to commend our deeds : It shall be said his judgment rul'd our hands ; Our youths and Wildness shall no whit appear, But all be buried in his gravity. Bru. O, name him not: let us not break with him ; For he will never follow anything That other men begin. Cas. Then leave him out. Casca. Indeed he is not fit. Dec. Shall no man else be touch 'd but only Caesar? Cas. Decius, well urg*d.— I think it is not meet Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Caesar, Should outlive Caesar : we shall find of him A shrewd contriver ; and, you know, his means, If he improve them, may well stretch so far As to annoy us all : which to prevent, Let Antony and Caesar fall together. Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius, To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,— Like wrath in death and envy afterwards ; For Antony is but a limb of Caesar: Let 's be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius. We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar ; And in the spirit of men there is no blood: O that we, then, could come by Caesar's spirit, And not dismember Caesar ! But, alas, Caesar must bleed for it ! And, gentle friends, Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully; Let 's carve him as a dish fit for the gods, Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds : And let our hearts, as subtle masters do, Stir up their servants to an act of rage, And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make Our purpose necessary, and not envious: Which so appearing to the common eyes, We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. And for Mark Antony, think not of him ; For he can do no more than Caesar's arm When Caesar's head is off. Cas. Yet I fear him ; For in the engrafted love he bears to Caesar, — Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him : If he love Caesar, all that he can do Is to himself, — take thought and die for Caesar: And that were much he should ; for he is given To sports, to wildness, and much company. Treb. There is no fear in him ; let him not die; For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter. [Clock strikes. Bru. Peace, count the clock. Cas. The clock hath stricken three. Treb. 'Tis time to part. Cas. But it is doubtful yet Whether Caesar will come forth to-day or no : For he is superstitious grown of late ; Quite from the main opinion he held once Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies : It may be these apparent prodigies, The unaccustom'd terror of this night, And the persuasion of his augurers, May hold him from the Capitol to-day. Dec. Never fear that : if he be so resolv'd I can o'ersway him ; for he loves to hear That unicorns may be betray'd with trees, And bears with glasses, elephants with holes, Lions with toils, and men with flatterers: But when I tell him he hates flatterers, He says he does, — being then most flatter'd. Let me work ; For I can give his humour the true bent, And I will bring him to the Capitol. Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him. [most? Bru. By the eighth hour : is that the utterCin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then. Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Caesar hard, Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey : I wonder none of you have thought of him. Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him : He loves me well, and I have given him reasons ; Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him. Cas. The morning comes upon 's : we '11 leave you, Brutus: [member And, friends, disperse yourselves: but all reWhat you have said, and show yourselves true Romans. Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily; Let not our looks put on our purposes ; But bear it as our Roman actors do, With untir'd spirits and formal constancy; And so, good-morrow to you every one. [Exeunt all but BRUTUS. Boy ! Lucius ! — Fast asleep? it is no matter ; Enjoy the heavy honey-dew of slumber : Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies Which busy care draws in the brains of men ; Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

SCENE I.] JULIUS CESAR. 869 Enter PORTIA. Par. Brutus, my lord ! Bru. Portia, what mean you? wherefore rise you now? It is not for your health thus to commit Your weak condition to the raw cold morning. For. Nor for yours neither. You have ungently, Brutus, Stole from my bed : and yesternight, at supper, You suddenly arose, and walk'd about, Musing and sighing, with your arms across; And when I ask'd you what the matter was, You star'd upon me with ungentle looks : I urg'd you further ; then you scratch'd your head, And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot: Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not ; But with an angry wafture of your hand Gave sign for me to leave you : so I did ; Fearing to strengthen that impatience Which seem'd too much enkindled ; and withal Hoping it was but an effect of humour, Which sometime hath his hour with every man. It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep ; And, could it work so much upon your shape As it hath much prevail'd on your condition, I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord, Make me acquainted with your cause of grief. Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all. For. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health, He would embrace the means to come by it. Bru. Why, so I do. — Good Portia, go to bed. For. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical To walk unbraced, and suck up the humours Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick, — And will he steal out of his wholesome bed, To dare the vile contagion of the night, And tempt the rheumy and unpurg'd air To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus; You have some sick offence within your mind, Which by the right and virtue of my place I ought to know of: and upon my knees I charm you, by my once -commended beauty, By all your vows of love, and that great vow Which did incorporate and make us one, That you unfold to me, yourself, your half, Why you are heavy ; and what men to-night Have had resort to you, — for here have been Some six or seven, who did hide their faces Even from darkness. Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia. For. I should not need if you were gentle Brutus. Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus, Is it excepted I should know no secrets That appertain to you? Am I yourself But as it were in sort or limitation, — To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed, And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs Of your good pleasure? If it be no more, Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife. Bru. You are my true and honourable wife ; As dear to me as are the ruddy drops That visit my sad heart. For. If this were true, then should I know this secret. I grant 1 am a woman ; but withal A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife: I grant I am a woman ; but withal A woman well-reputed, — Cato's daughter. Think you I am no stronger than my sex, Being so father 'd and so husbanded? Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em : I have made strong proof of my constancy, Giving myself a voluntary wound Here in the thigh : can I bear that with patience. And not my husband's secrets? Bru. O ye gods, Render me worthy of this noble wife ! {Knocking within. Hark, hark ! one knocks : Portia, go in awhile ; And by and by thy bosom shall partake The secrets of my heart: All my engagements I will construe to thee, All the charactery of my sad brows. Leave me with haste. [Exit PORTIA. Lucius, who's that knocks? Enter Lucius with LiGARius. Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you. Bru. CaiusLigarius, that Metellus spake of. — Boy, stand aside. — Caius Ligarius, — how ! Lig. Vouchsafe good -morrow from a feeble tongue. Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave Caius, To wear a kerchief ! Would you were not sick ! Lig. I am not sick if Brutus have in hand Any exploit worthy the name of honour. Bru. Suchan exploit have I in hand, Ligarius, Had you a healthful ear lo hear of it. Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before, I here discard my sickness ! Soul of Rome ! Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins ! Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjurM up My mortified spirit. Now bid me run, And I will strive with things impossible ; Yea, get the better of them. What's to do? Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

 Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick? [Caius, Brti. That must we also. What it is, my I shall unfold to thee, as we are going To whom it must be done. Lig. Set on your foot ; And with a heart new fir'd I follow you To do I know not what : but it sufficeth That Brutus leads me on. Bru. Follow me, then. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ROME. A Room in CAESAR'S Palace. Thunder and lightning. Enter OESAR in his night-gown. Cats. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night : Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out, Help, ho! They murder Ccesar !— Who's within? Enter a Servant. Serv. My lord ? Cces. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice, And bring me their opinions of success. Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit. Enter CALPHURNIA. Cal. What mean you, Caesar? Think you to walk forth? You shall not stir out of your house to-day. Cces. Caesar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me [see Ne'er look'd but on my back ; when they shall The face of Caesar they are vanished. Cal. Caesar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one within, Besides the things that we have heard and seen, Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch. A lioness hath whelped in the streets; And graves have yawn'd and yielded up their dead; Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds, In ranks and squadrons and right form of war, Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol ; The noise of battle hurtled in the air, Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan ; And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets. O Caesar, these things are beyond all use, And I do fear them ! Cces. What can be avoided, Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods? Yet Caesar shall go forth ; for these predictions Are to the world in general as to Caesar. Cal. When beggars die there are no comets seen ; [of princes. The heavens themselves blaze forth the death Cces. Cowards die many times before their deaths ; The valiant never taste of death but once. Of all the wonders that I yet have heard, It seems to me most strange that men should fear; Seeing that death, a necessary end, Will come when it will come. Re-enter Servant. What say the augurers? Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day. Plucking the entrails of an offering forth, They could not find a heart within the beast. Cces. The gods do this in shame of cowardice : Caesar should be a beast without a heart If he should stay at home to-day for fear. No, Caesar shall not : danger knows full well That Caesar is more dangerous than he : We are two lions litter'd in one day, And I the elder and more terrible : — And Caesar shall go forth. Cal. Alas, my lord, Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence. Do not go forth to-day : call it my fear That keeps you in the house, and not your own We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house ; And he shall say you are not well to-day: Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this. Cces. Mark Antony shall say I am not well : And for thy humour I will stay at home. Enter DECIUS. Here 's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so. Dec. Caesar, all hail ! Good-morrow, worthy Caesar: I come to fetch you to the senate-house. Cces. And you are come in very happy time, To bear my greeting to the senators, And tell them that I will not come to-day: Cannot, is false; and that I dare not, falser: I will not come to-day, — tell them so, Decius. Cal. Say he is sick. Cces. Shall Caesar send a lie ? Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far, To be afeard to tell graybeards the truth? Decius, go tell them Caesar will not come. Dec. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some cause, Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so. Cces. The cause is in my will, — I will not come; That is enough to satisfy the senate.

SCENE II.] JULIUS CESAR. 871 But for your private satisfaction, Because I love you, I will let you know, — Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home : She dreamt to-night she saw my statua, Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts, Did run pure blood ; and many lusty Romans Came smiling and did bathe their hands in it : And these does she apply for warnings and portents, And evils imminent ; and on her knee Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day. Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted ; It was a vision fair and fortunate : Your statue spouting blood in many pipes, In which so many smiling Romans bath'd, Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck Reviving blood ; and that great men shall press For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance. This by Calphurnia's dream is signified. [it. Ctzs. And this way have you well expounded Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say : And know it now, — the senate have concluded To give this day a crown to mighty Caesar. If you shall send them word you will not come, Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock, Apt to be render'd, for some one to say, Break up the senate till another time. When CtzsaSs wife shall meet with better dreams. If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper, Lo, Ccesar is afraid ? Pardon me, Csesar ; for my dear dear love To your proceeding bids me tell you this ; And reason to my love is liable. Ctzs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia ! I am ashamed I did yield to them. — Give me my robe for I will go : Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA, TREBONIUS, and CINNA. And look where Publius is come to fetch me. Ptib. Good-morrow, Caesar. Cces. Welcome, Publius. — What, Brutus, are you stirred so early too? — Good-morrow, Casca. — Caius Ligarius, Caesar was ne'er so much your enemy As that same ague which hath made you lean. — What is 't o'clock? Bru. Caesar, 'tis strucken eight. Cces. I thank you for your pains and courtesy. Enter ANTONY. See ! Antony, that revels long o' nights Is notwithstanding up. — Good -morrow, Antony. Ant. So to most noble Csesar. Cces. Bid them prepare within. I am to blame to be thus waited for. — Now Cinna ; — now Metellus : — what, Trebonius ! I have an hour's talk in store for you ; Remember that you call on me to-day : Be near me, that I may remember you. Treb. Caesar, I will:— and so near will I be, [Aside. That your best friends shall wish I had been further. Cces. Good friends, go in and taste some wine with me ; And we, like friends, will straightway go together. Bru. That every like is not the same, O Caesar, The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon ! [Exeunt. SCENE III.— ROME. A Street near the Capitol. Enter ARTEMIDORUS reading a paper. Art. Ctzsar, beware of Bruttts ; take heed of Cassius j come not near Casca ; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius ; mark-well Metellus Cimber; Decius Brutus loves thee not ; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Ccesar. If thou beest not immortalˆ look about you : security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover t ARTEMIDORUS. Here will I stand till Caesar pass along, And as a suitor will I give him this. My heart laments that virtue cannot live Out of the teeth of emulation. If thou read this, O Caesar, thou mayst five ; If not, the fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit. SCENE IV. — ROME. Another part of the same Street ', before the House of BRUTUS. Enter PORTIA and Lucius. For. I pr'ythee, boy, run to the senatehouse; Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone : Why dost thou stay? Luc. To know my errand, madam. For. I would have had thee there and here again Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there.—

872 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT in. 0 constancy, be strong upon my side ! Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue ! 1 have a man's mind, but a woman's might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel ! — Art thou here yet? Luc. Madam, what should I dc? Run to the Capitol, and nothing else? And so return to you, and nothing else? For. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well, For he went sickly forth : and take good note What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him. Hark, boy! what noise is that? Luc. I hear none, madam. For. Pr'ythee, listen well : I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray, And the wind brings it from the Capitol. Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing. Enter ARTEMIDORUS. For. Come hither, fellow : Which way hast thou been? Art. At mine own house, good lady. For. What is 't o'clock? Art. About the ninth hour, lady. For. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol? Art. Madam, not yet : I go to take my stand, To see him pass on to the Capitol. For. Thou hast some suit to Csesar, hast thou not? Art. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar To be so good to Csesar as to hear me, I shall beseech him to befriend himself. For. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended towards him? Art. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance. Good-morrow to you. Here the street is narrow : The throng that follows Caesar at the heels Of senators, of praetors, common suitors, Will crowd a feeble man almost to death : I'll get me to a place more void, and there Speak to great Caesar as he comes along. \Exti. For. I must go in. — Ah me! how weak a thing The heart of woman is ! O Brutus, The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise ! — Sure the boy heard me. — Brutus hath a suit That Csesar will not grant. — O, I grow faint. — Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord ; Say I am merry : come to me again, And bring me word what he doth say to thee. [Exeunt severally. ACT III. SCENE I. — ROME. The Capitol; the Senate sitting. A crowd of People in the street leading to the Capitol; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Entei CESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others. Cces. The ides of March are come. Sooth. Ay, Csesar; but not gone. Art. Hail, Csesar ! Read this schedule. Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er read, At your best leisure, this his humble suit. Art. O Csesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit [Csesar. That touches Csesar nearer: read it, great Cces. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd. Art. Delay not, Csesar ; read it instantly. Cces. What, is the fellow mad? Pub. Sirrah, give place. Cas. What, urge you your petitions in the street? Come to the Capitol. CESAR enters the Capitolˆ the rest following. All the Senators rise. Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive. Cas. What enterprise, Popilius? Pop. Fare you well. {Advances to CESAR. Bru. What said Popilius Lena? Cas. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive. I fear our purpose is discovered. Bru. Look how he makes to Csesar : mark him. [tion. — Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevenBrutus, what shall be done? If this be known, Cassius or Csesar never shall turn back, For I will slay myself. Bru. Cassius, be constant: Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes ; For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change. Cas. Trebonius knows his time; for, look you, Brutus, He draws Mark Antony out of the way. [Exeunt ANT. and TREE. CESAR and the Senators take their seats. Dec. Where is MetellusCimber? Let him go, And presently prefer his suit to Csesar. Bru. He is address'd : press near and second him.

SCENE I.J JULIUS CˆSAR. 873 Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand. Casca, Are we all ready? Cces. What is now amiss That Caesar and his senate must redress? Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar, Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat An humble heart, — [Kneeling. Cas. I must prevent thee, Cimber. These couchings and these lowly courtesies Might fire the blood of ordinary men, And turn pre-ordinance and first decree Into the law of children. Be not fond To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth fools ; I mean, sweet words, Low crooked curt'sies, and base spaniel fawning. Thy brother by decree is banished: If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him, I spurn thee like a cur out of my way. Know, Caesar doth not wrong; nor without cause Will he be satisfied. Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own, To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear For the repealing of my banish'd brother? Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Caesar, Desiring thee that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal. Cces. What, Brutus! Cas. Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon: As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall, To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber. Cces. I could be well mov'd if I were as you ; If I could pray to move, prayers would move me: But I am constant as the northern star, Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality There is no fellow in the firmament. The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks, — They are all fire, and every one doth shine ; But there's but one in all doth hold his place: So in the world, — 'tis furnish'd well with men, And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive ; Yet in the number I do know but one That unassailable holds on his rank, Unshak'd of motion : and that I am he, Let me a little show it even in this, — That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd, And constant do remain to keep him so. Cin. O Caesar,— Cces. Hence ! wilt thou lift up Olympus? Dec. Great Caesar,— Cas. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel? Casca. Speak, hands, for me ! [CASCA stabs CAESAR in the neck. C/ESAR catches hold of his arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspiratorsˆ and at last by MARCUS BRUTUS. CCES. Et tu, Brute?— Then fall, Caesar! [Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion. Cin. Liberty ! Freedom ! Tyranny is dead ! — Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets. Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out, Liberty , freedom , and enfranchisement! Bru. People and senators ! be not affrighted ; Fly not ; stand still : ambition's debt is paid. Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus. Dec. And Cassius too. Bru. Where's Publius? [mutiny. Cin. Here, quite confounded with this Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's Should chance, — [cheer ; Brii. Talk not of standing. — Publius, good There is no harm intended to your person, Nor to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius. Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, Rushingon us, should do your age some mischief. Bru. Do so : and let no man abide this deed, But we the doers. Re-enter TREBONIUS. Cas. Where is Antony? Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd : Men, wives, and children stare, cry out, and run, As it were doomsday. Bru. Fates ! we will know your pleasures. — That we shall die, we know ; 'tis but the time, And drawing days out, that men stand upon. Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life, Cuts oft so many years of fearing death. Brti. Grant that, and then is death a benefit : So are we Caesar's friends, that have abridg'd His time of fearing death. — Stoop, Romans, stoop, And let us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords : Then walk we forth even to the market-place, And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads, Let's all cry, Peace! freedom! and liberty! Cas. Stoop then, and wash. — How many ages hence Shall this our lofty scene be acted over, In states unborn and accents yet unknown ! Bru. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport,

874 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT HI. That now on Pompey's basis lies along No worthier than the dust ! Cas. So oft as that shall be, So often shall the knot of us be call'd The men that gave their country liberty. Dec. What, shall we forth? Cas. Ay, every man away : Brutus shall lead ; and we will grace his heels With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome. Bru. Soft, who comes here? Enter a Servant. A friend of Antony's. Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel ; Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down ; And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say: — Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest ; Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving : Say I lov'd Brutus, and I honour him ; [him. Say I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lov'd If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv'd How Caesar hath deserv'd to lie in death, Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead So well as Brutus living ; but will follow The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus Through the hazards of this untrod state With all true faith. So says my master Antony. Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman : I never thought him worse. Tell him, so please him come unto this place, He shall be satisfied ; and, by my honour, Depart untouch'd. Serv. I '11 fetch him presently. [Exit. Bru. I know that we shall have him well to friend. Cas. I wish we may : but yet have I a mind That fears him much ; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose. Brti. But here comes Antony. Re-enter ANTONY. Welcome, Mark Antony. Ant. O mighty Caesar ! dost thoulie so low? Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure? — Fare thee well. — I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, Who else must be let blood, who else is rank : If I myself, there is no hour so fit As Caesar's death's hour ; nor no instrument Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich With the most noble blood of all this world. I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard, Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke. Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years, I shall not find myself so apt to die : No place will please me so, no mean of death As here by Caesar, and by you cut off, The choice and master spirits of this age. Bru. O Antony ! beg not your death of us. Though now we must appear bloody and cruel, As by our hands and this our present act You see we do ; yet see you but our hands, And this the bleeding business they have done : Our hearts you see not, — they are pitiful ; And pity to the general wrong of Rome, — As fire drives out fire, so pity pity, — Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part, To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony : Our arms no strength of malice, and our hearts, Of brothers' temper, do receive you in With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence, [man's Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any In the disposing of new dignities. Bru. Only be patient till we have appeas'd The multitude, beside themselves with fear, And then we will deliver you the cause Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him, Have thus proceeded. Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom. Let each man render me his bloody hand : First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you ; — • Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand ; — Now, Decius Brutus, yours ; — now yours, Metellus; — Yours, Cinna ; — and, my valiant Casca, yours; — Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius. Gentlemen all, — alas, what shall I say? My credit now stands on such slippery ground That one of two bad ways you must conceit me, Either a coward or a flatterer. — That I did love thee, Caesar, O, 'tis true: If then, thy spirit look upon us now, Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death To see thy Antony making his peace, Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes, Most noble ! in the presence of thy corse? Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds, Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood, It would become me better than to close In terms of friendship with thine enemies. Pardon me, Julius! — Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart ; Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand, Sign'd in thy spoil, andcrimson'd in thy Lethe. — O world, thou wast the forest to this hart; And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee. —

SCENE I.] JULIUS CESAR. 875 How like a deer strucken by many princes Dost thou here lie ! Cas. Mark Antony, — Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius : The enemies of Caesar shall say this ; Then in a friend it is cold modesty. Cas, I blame you not for praising Caesar so ; But what compact mean you to have with us? Will you be prick'd in number of our friends ; Or shall we on, and not depend on you? Ant. Therefore I took your hands ; but was, indeed, S way'd from the point by looking down on Caesar. Friends am I with you all, and love you all ; Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons Why and wherein Caesar was dangerous. Brit. Or else were this a savage spectacle : Our reasons are so full of good regard That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar, You should be satisfied. Ant. That 's all I seek : And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place ; And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend, Speak in the order of his funeral. Bru. You shall, Mark Antony. Cas. Brutus, a word with you. — You know not what you do : do not consent That Antony speak in his funeral : Know you how much the people may be mov'd By that which he will utter? [Aside to BRUTUS. Bru. By your pardon ; — I will myself into the pulpit first, And show the reason of our Caesar's death : What Antony shall speak, I will protest He speaks by leave and by permission ; And that we are contented Caesar shall Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies. It shall advantage more than do us wrong. Cas. I know not what may fall ; I like it not. Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Caesar's body. You shall not in your funeral speech blame us, But speak all good you can devise of Caesar ; And say you do 't by our permission ; Else shall you not have any hand at all About his funeral : and you shall speak In the same pulpit whereto I am going, After my speech is ended. Ant. Be it so; I do desire no more. Bru. Prepare the body then, and follow us. [Exeunt all but ANTONY. Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth, That I am meek and gentle with these butchers ! Thou art the ruins of the noblest man That ever lived in the tide of times. Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood ! Over thy wounds now do I prophesy, — Which like dumb mouths do ope their ruby lips, To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue,— A curse shall light upon the limbs of men ; Domestic fury and fierce civil strife Shall cumber all the parts of Italy ; Blood and destruction shall be so in use, And dreadful objects so familiar, That mothers shall but smile when they behold Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war ; All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds : A.nd Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge, With Ate by his side come hot from hell, Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice Cry Havoc, and let slip the dogs of war ; That this foul deed shall smell above the earth With carrion men, groaning for burial. Enter a Servant. You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not ? Serv. I do, Mark Antony. Ant. Caesar did write for him to come to Rome. [ing ; Serv. He did receive his letters, and is comAnd bid me say to you by word of mouth, — O Caesar ! — [Seeing the body. Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep. Passion, I see, is catching ; for mine eyes, Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, Began to water. Is thy master coming? Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome. Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd : Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome, No Rome of safety for Octavius yet ; Hie hence and tell him so. Yet, stay awhile ; Thou shalt not back till I have borne this corse Into the market-place: there shall I try, In my oration, how the people take The cruel issue of these bloody men ; According to the which thou shalt discourse To young Octavius of the state of things. Lend me your hand. [Exeunt with OESAR'S body. SCENE II. — ROME. The Forum. Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens. Citizens. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied. [friends. — Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, 876 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT nr. Cassius, go you into the other street, And part the numbers. — Those that will hear me speak, let 'em stay here ; Those that will follow Cassius, go with him ; And public reasons shall be rendered Of Caesar's death. 1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak. 2 Cit. I will hear Cassius ; and compare their reasons, When severally we hear them rendered. [Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens. BRUTUS goes into the Rostrum. 3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended : silence ! Bni. Be patient till the last. Romans, countrymen, and lovers ! hear me for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear: believe me for mine honour ; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe : censure me in your wisdom ; and awake your senses, that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Caesar's, to him I say that Brutus' love to Caesar was no less than his. If, then, that friend demand why Brutus rose against Caesar, this is my answer, — Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it ; as he was valiant, I honour him : but, as he was ambitious, I slew him: there io tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak ; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply. Citizens. None, Brutus, none. Bru. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death. Here comes his body, mourn'd by Mark Antony : Enter ANTONY and others -with CESAR'S body. who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, — a place in the commonwealth ; as which of you shall not? With this I depart, — that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death. Citizens. Live, Brutus ! live, live ! 1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house. 2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors. 3 Cit. Let him be Caesar. 4 Cit. Caesar's better parts Shall be crown'd in Brutus. 1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours. Bru. My countrymen, — 2 Cit. Peace, silence ! Brutus speaks. I Cit. Peace, ho ! Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, And for my sake stay here with Antony : Do grace to Caesar's corse, and grace his speech Tending to Caesar's glories; which Mark Antony, By our permission, is allow'd to make. I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit. I Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony. 3 Cit. Let him go up into the public chair; We '11 hear him. — Noble Antony, go up. Ant. For Brutus' sake I am beholden to you. [Goes tip. 4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus? 3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake He finds himself beholden to us all. 4 Cit. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here. 1 Cit. This Caesar was a tyrant. 3 Cit. Nay, that 's certain : We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him. 2 Cit. Peace ! let us hear what Antony can say. Ant. You gentle Romans.— Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him. Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears ; I come to bury Caesar, not to praise hinuiˆ The evil that men do lives after them ; The good is oft interred with their bones ; So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus Hath told you Caesar was ambitious: If it were so, it was a grievous fault ; And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it. Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,— For Brutus is an honourable man ; So are they all, all honourable men,— Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral. He was my friend, faithful and just to me: But Brutus says he was ambitious ; And Brutus is an honourable man. He hath brought many captives home to Rome, Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: Did this in Caesar seem ambitious ?

SCENE II.] JULIUS CESAR. 877 When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept: Ambition should be made of sterner stuff j Yet Brutus says he was ambitious ; And Brutus is an honourable man. You all did see that on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse : was this ambition? Yet Brutus says he was ambitious ; And, sure, he is an honourable man. I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke, But here I am to speak what I do know. You all did love him once, — not without cause : What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him? 0 judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts, And men have lost their reason! — Bear with me; My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar, And I must pause till it come back to me. 1 Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings. 2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Caesar has had great wrong. 3 Cit. Has he, masters? 1 fear there will a worse come in his place. 4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words ? He would not take the crown ; Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious. 1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it. [weeping. 2 Cit. Poor soul ! his eyes are red as fire with 3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony. [speak. 4 Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to Ant. But yesterday the word of Caesar might Have stood against the world : now lies he there, And none so poor to do him reverence. 0 masters, if I were dispos'd to stir Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, 1 should do Erutus wrong, and Cassius wrong, Who, you all know, are honourable men : I will not do them wrong ; I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you, Than I will wrong such honourable men. But here 's a parchment with the seal of Caesar, — I found it in his closet, — 'tis his will : Let but the commons hear this testament, — Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read, — And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds, And dip their napkins in his sacred blood ; Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it as a rich legacy Unto their issue. [Antony. 4 Cit. We'll hear the will: read it, Mark Citizens. The will, the will! we will hear Caesar's will. Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it ; It is not meet you know how Caesar lov'd you. You are not wood, you are not stones, but men ; And, being men, hearing the will of Caesar, It will inflame you, — it will make you mad : 'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs ; For, if you should, O, what would come of it ! 4 Cit. Read the will ; we '11 hear it, Antony ; You shall read us the will, — Caesar's will. Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile? I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it: I fear I wrong the honourable men Whose daggers have stabb'd Caesar ; I do fear it. 4 Cit. They were traitors : honourable men ! Citizens. The will ! the testament ! 2 Cit. They were villains, murderers: the will ! read the will ! [will? Ant. You will compel me, then, to read the Then make a ring about the corse of Caesar, And let me show you him that made the will. Shall I descend? and will you give me leave? Citizens. Come down. 2 Cit. Descend. [ANTONY comes down. 3 Cit. You shall have leave. 4 Cit. A ring ; stand round. [body. 1 Cit. Stand from the hearse, stand from the 2 Cit. Room for Antony, — most noble Antony ! [off. Ant. Nay, press not so upon me ; stand far Citizens. Stand back ; room ; bear back ! Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now. You all do know this mantle: I remember The first time ever Caesar put it on ; 'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent, That day he overcame the Nervii:— Look ! in this place ran Cassius' dagger through: See what a rent the envious Casca made : Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd ; And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away, Mark how the blood of Caesar follow'd it, As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd If Brutus so unkiTTdly knock'd or no ; For Brutus, as you know, was Caesar's angel : Judge, O you gods, how dearly Caesar loved him! This was the most unkindest cut of all ; For when the nobte Caesar saw him stab, Ingratitude, more-Strong than traitors' arms, Quite vanquish'd bun : then burst his mighty heart; And, in his mantle Vouffling up his face, Even at the base of Pompey's statua, Which all the while Ian blood, great Caesar fell.

8;8 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT in. O, what a fall was there, my countrymen ! Then I, and you, and all of us fell down, Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us. O, now you weep ; and I perceive you feel The dint of pity : these are gracious drops. Kind souls, what, weep you when you but behold Our Caesar's vesture wounded ? Look you here, Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors. 1 Cit. O piteous spectacle ! 2 Cit. O noble Csesar ! 3 Cit. O woeful day ! 4 Cit. O traitors, villains ! 1 Cit. O most bloody sight ! 2 Cit. We will be revenged : revenge, — about, — seek, — burn, — fire, — kill, — slay, — let not a traitor live ! Ant. Stay, countrymen. 1 Cit. Peace there ! hear the noble Antony. 2 Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him. Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up To such a sudden flood of mutiny. They that have done this deed are honourable ; — What private griefs they have, alas, I know not, That made them do it; — they are wise and honourable, And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you. I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts : I am no orator, as Brutus is ; But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man, That love my friend ; and that they know full well That gave me public leave to speak of him : For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth, Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech, To stir men's blood : I only speak right on ; I tell you that which you yourselves do know ; Show you sweet Caesar's wounds, poor poor dumb mouths, And bid them speak for me : but were I Brutus, And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue In every wound of Csesar, that should move The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny. Citizens. We'll mutiny. I Cit. We'll burn the hou|e of Brutus. 3 Cit. Away, then! come seek the conspirators. Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak. Citizens. Peace, ho! hear Antony, most noble Antony. Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what : Wherein hath Csesar thus leserv'd your loves? Alas, you know not, — I must tell you, then. — You have forgot the will I told you of. Citizens. Most true ; — the will : — let's stay and hear the will. Ant. Here is the will and under Caesar's seal To every Roman citizen he gives, To every several man, seventy-five drachmas. 2 Cit. Most noble Caesar ! — we'll revenge his death. 3 Cit. O royal Caesar ! Ant. Hear me with patience. Citizens. Peace, ho ! Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks, His private arbours, and new-planted orchards On this side Tiber; he hath left them you, And to your heirs for ever, — common pleasures, To walk abroad and recreate yourselves. Here was a Caesar ! when comes such another? 1 Cit. Never, never. — Come away, away ! We'll burn his body in the holy place, And with the brands fire the traitors' houses. Take up the body. 2 Cit. Go, fetch fire. 3 Cit. Pluck down benches. 4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, anything. [Exeunt Citizens with the body. Ant. Now let it work : mischief, thou art afoot. Take thou what course thou wilt ! Enter a Servant. How now, fellow ! Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome. Ant. Where is he? Serv. He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house. Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him : He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us anything. Serv. I heard him say Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome. Ant. Belike they had some notice of the people, How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeitnt. SCENE III. — ROME. A Street. Enter CINNA the Poet. Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Caesar, And things unlucky charge my fantasy : I have no will to wander forth of doors, Yet something leads me forth. .rwiA Enter Citizens. 1 Cit. What is your name? 2 Cit. Whither are you going?

SCENE III.] JULIUS OESAR. 879 3 Cit. Where do you dwell? 4 Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor? 2 Cit. Answer every man directly. 1 Cit. Ay, and briefly. 4 Cit. Ay, and wisely. 3 Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best. Cin. What is my name ? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am la married man or a bachelor? Then to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly. — Wisely, I say I am a bachelor. 2 Cit. That's as much as to say they are fools that marry : you '11 bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed ; directly. Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral. 1 Cit. As a friend or an enemy? Cin. As a friend. 2 Cit. That matter is answered directly. 4 Cit. For your dwelling, — briefly. Cin. Briefly I dwell by the Capitol. 3 Cit. Your name, sir, truly. Cin. Truly my name is Cinna. I Cit. Tear him to pieces ; he 's a conspirator. Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet. 4 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses. Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator. 4 Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going. 3 Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! fire-brands: to Brutus', to Cassius'; burn all : some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's ; some to Ligarius' : away, go ! [Exeunt. ACT IV. SCENE I. — ROME. A room in ANTONY'S House. ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table. Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd. Oct. Your brother too must die; consent you, Lepidus? Lep. I do consent. Oct. Prick him down, Antony. Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony. Ant. He shall not live ; look, with a spot I damn him. But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house ; Fetch the will hither, and we shall determine How to cut off some charge in legacies. Lep. What, shall I find you here? Oct. Or here or at the Capitol. [Exit LEPIDUS. Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands : is it fit, The threefold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it? Oct. So you thought him ; And took his voice who should be prick'd to die, In our black sentence and proscription, [you : Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than And though we lay these honours on this man, To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven as we point the way ; And having brought our treasure where we will, Then take we down his load, and turn him off, Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears And graze in commons. Oct. You may do your will : But he 's a tried and valiant soldier. Ant. So is my horse, Octavius ; and for that I do appoint him store of provender : It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on, — His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit. And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so ; He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth; — A barren-spirited fellow ; one that feeds On abject orts and imitations, Which, out of use and stal'd by other men, Begin his fashion : do not talk of him But as a property. And now, Octavius, Listen great things. — Brutus and Cassius Are levying powers: we must straight make head: Therefore let our alliance be combin'd, Our best friends made, our means stretch'd ; And let us presently go sit in council, How covert matters may be best disclos'd, And open perils surest answered. Oct. Let us do so : for we are at the stake, And bay'd about with many enemies; [fear, And some that smile have in their hearts, I Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — Before BRUTUS'S Tent, in the Camp near Sardis. Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, Lucius, and Soldiers ; TITINIUS and PINDARUS meeting them. Bru. Stand, ho ! Lucil. Give the word, ho ! and stand.

88o JULIUS CESAR. [ACT rv. Bru. What now, Luciliusl is Cassius near? LuciL He is at hand ; and Pindarus is come To do you salutation from his master. [PiN. gives a letter to BRU. Bru. He greets me well. — Your master, Pindarus, In his own change, or by ill officers, Hath given me some worthy cause to wish Things done undone : but if he be at hand I shall be satisfied. Pin. I do not doubt But that my noble master will appear Such as he is, full of regard and honour. Bru. He is not doubted. — A word, Lucilius ; How he receiv'd you let me be resolv'd. Lucil. With courtesy and with respect enough ; But not with such familiar instances, Nor with such free and friendly conference As he hath us'd of old. Bru. Thou hast described A hot friend cooling : ever note, Lucilius, When love begins to sicken and decay, It useth an enforced ceremony. There are no tricks in plain and simple faith : But hollow men, like horses hot at hand, Make gallant show and promise of their mettle ; But when they should endure the bloody spur, They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades, Sink in the trial. Comes his army on? Lucil. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd ; The greater part, the horse in general, Are come with Cassius. [March within. Bru. Hark ! he is arriv'd : March gently on to meet him. Enter CASSIUS and Soldiers. Cos. Stand, ho ! Bru. Stand, ho ! speak the word along. Within. Stand! Within. Stand! Within. Stand! [wrong. Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me Bru. Judge me, you gods! wrong I mine enemies? And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother? Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs ; And when you do them, — Bru. Cassius, be content; Speak your griefs softly, — I do know you well : — Before the eyes of both our armies here, Which should perceive nothing but love from us, J^et us not wrangle: bid them move away; Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs, And I will give you audience. Cas. Pindarus, Bid our commanders lead their charges off A little from this ground. [man Bru. Lucilius, do you the like ; and let no Come to our tent till we have done our conference. Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt. SCENE III.— Within the Tent o/ BRUTUS. Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS. Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this, — You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella For taking bribes here of the Sardians ; Wherein my letters, praying on his side, Because I knew the man, were slighted off. Bru. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case. Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offence should bear his comment. Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm ; To sell and mart your offices for gold To undeservers. Cas. I an itching palm ! You know that you are Brutus that speak this, Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last. Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption, And chastisement doth therefore hide his head. Cas. Chastisement! Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember ! Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake? What villain touch'd his body, that did stab, And not for justice? What, shall one of us, That struck the foremost man of all this world But for supporting robbers, shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base bribes, And sell the mighty space of our large honours For so much trash as may be grasped thus? — I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon, Than such a Roman. Cas, Brutus, bay not me, — I '11 not endure it : you forget yourself To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I, Older in practice, abler than yourself To make conditions. Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius. Cas, I am. Bru. I say you are not. Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself; Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

SCENE III.] JULIUS CESAR. 881 Bru. Away, slight man ! Cas. Is't possible? Bru, Hear me, for I will speak. Must I give way and room to your rash choler? Shall I be frighted when a madman stares? Cas. O ye gods, ye gods ! must I endure all this? Bru. All this ! ay, more : fret till your proud heart break ; Go, show your slaves how choleric you are, And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge? Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch Under your testy humour? By the gods, You shall digest the venom of your spleen Though it do split you ; for from this day forth I '11 use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter, When you are waspish. Cas. Is it come to this? Bru. You say you are a better soldier: Let it appear so ; make your vaunting true, And it shall please me well : for mine own part, I shall be glad to learn of noble men. Cas. You wrong me every way ; you wrong me, Brutus; I said an elder soldier, not a better: Did I say better? Bru. If you did, I care not. Cas. When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me. Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him. Cas. I durst not ! Bru. No. Cas. What, durst not tempt him ! Bru. For your life you durst not. Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love; I may do that I shall be sorry for. [for. Bru. You have done that you should be sorry There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats ; For I am arm'd so strong in honesty That they pass by me as the idle wind, Which I respect not. I did send to you For certain sums of gold, which you denied me; — For I can raise no money by vile means : By heaven, I had rather coin my heart, And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash By any indirection ; — I did send To you for gold to pay my legions, [Cassius ? Which you denied me : was that done like Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so ? When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous, To lock such rascal counters from his friends, . Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts, Dash him to pieces ! Cas. I denied you not. Bru. You did. Cas. I did not : he was but a fool that brought My answer back. — Brutus hath riv'd my heart: A friend should bear his friend's infirmities, But Brutus makes mine greater than they are. Brtt. I do not, till you practise them on me. Cas. You love me not. Bru. I do not like your faults. Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults. [appear Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they do As huge as high Olympus. [come, Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius, For Cassius is aweary of the world ; Hated by one he loves ; brav'd by his brother ; Check'd like a bondman ; all his faults observ'd Set in a notebook, learn'd, and conn'd by rote, To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep My spirit from mine eyes ! — There is my dagger, And here my naked breast ; within, a heart Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold : If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth ; I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart : Strike, as thou didst at Caesar ; for I know, When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius. Bru. Sheathe your dagger : Be angry when you will, it shall have scope ; Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour. O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb, That carries anger as the flint bears fire ; Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark, And straight is cold again. Cas. Hath Cassius livM To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus, When grief and blood ill-temper'd vexeth him ? Bru. When I spoke that I was ill-temper'd too. [hand. Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your Bru. And my heart too. Cas. O Brutus,— Bru. What 's the matter ? Cos. Have not you love enough to bear with me, [me When that rash humour which my mother gave Makes me forgetful ? Bru. Yes, Cassius ; and frorn henceforth, When you are over-earnest with your Brutus, He '11 think your mother chides, and leave you so. \Noise within. Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals ; There is some grudge between 'em ; 'tis not meet They be alone.

Lucius, a bowl of wine ! Cas. I did hot think you could have been so angry. Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs. Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use If you give place to accidental evils. Bru. No man bears sorrow better. — Portia is dead. Cas. Ha! Portia! Bru. She is dead. Cas. How scap'd I killing when I cross'd you so? — O insupportable and touching loss ! — Upon what sickness? Bru. Impatient of my absence, And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony Have made themselves so strong ; for with her death That tidings came ; — with this she fell distract, And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire. Cas. And died so? Bru. Even so. CAS. O ye immortal gods. Enter Lucius with wine and tapers. Bru. Speak no more of her. — Give me a bowl of wine.--In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. -^,^ [Drinks. Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge. — Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup ; I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks. Bru. Come in, Titinius ! Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA. Welcome, good Messala ! — Now sit we close about this taper here, And call in question our necessities. Cas. Portia, art thou gone ? Bru. No more, I pray you. — Messala, I have here received letters, That young Octavius and Mark Antony Come down upon us with a mighty power, Bending their expedition toward Philippi. Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenor. Bru. With what addition ? Mes. That, by proscription and bills of outlawry, Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus Have put to death an hundred senators. Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree ; Mine speak of seventy senators that died By their proscriptions, Cicero being one. Cas. Cicero one ! Mes. Cicero is dead, And by that order of proscription. — Had you your letters from your wife, my lord ? Bru. No, Messala. Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her? Bru. Nothing, Messala. Mes. That, methinks, is strange. Bru. Why ask you ? hear you aught of her in yours ? Mes. No, my lord. Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true. Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell : For certain she is dead, and by strange manner. Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. — We must die, Messala : With meditating that she must die once, I have the patience to endure it now. Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure. Cas. I have as much of this in art as you, But yet my nature could not bear it so. Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think Of marching to Philippi presently ? Cas. I do not think it good. Bru. Your reason? Cas. This it is : 'Tis better that the enemy seek us : So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,

SCENE III.] JULIUS OESAR. 883 Doing himself offence ; whilst we, lying still, Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness. Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better. The people 'twixt Philippi and this ground Do stand but in a forc'd affection ; For they have grudg'd us contribution : The enemy, marching along by them, By them shall make a fuller number up, Come on refresh'd, new-aided, and encourag'd ; From which advantage shall we cut him off If at Philippi we do face him there, These people at our back. Cas. Hear me, good brother. Bru. Under your pardon. — You must note beside, That we have tried the utmost of our friends, Our legions are brimful, our cause is ripe : The enemy increaseth every day ; We, at the height, are ready to decline. There is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; Omitted, all the voyage of their life Is bound in shallows and in miseries. On such a full sea are we now afloat ; And we must take the current when it serves, Or lose our ventures. Cas. Then, with your will, go on ; We '11 along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi. [talk, Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our And nature must obey necessity ; Which we will niggard with a little rest. There is no more to say ? Cas. No more. Good -night : Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence. Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.] Farewell good Messala: — Good-night, Titinius ; — noble, noble Cassius, Good-night, and good repose. Cas. O my dear brother ! This was an ill beginning of the night : Never come such division 'tween our souls ! Let it not, Brutus. Bru. Everything is well. Cas. Good-night, my lord. Bru. Good -night, good brother. Tit. and Mes. Good-night, Lord Brutus. Bru. Farewell, every one. [Exeunt CAS., TIT., and MES. Re-enter Lucius with the gown. Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument? Luc. Here in the tent. Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily ! Poor knave, I blame thee not j thou art o'erwatch'd. Call Claudius and some other of my men ; I '11 have them sleep on cushions in my tent. Luc. Varro and Claudius ! Enter VARRO and CLAUDIUS. Var. Calls my lord? [sleep; Brti. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and It may be I shall raise you by and by On business to my brother Cassius. Var. So please you we will stand and watch your pleasure. [sirs ; Bru. I will not have it so: lie down, good It may be I shall otherwise bethink me. — Look, Lucius, here 's the book I sought for so ; I put it in the pocket of my gown. [VAR. and CLAUD, lie down. Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me. [forgetful. Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, And touch thy instrument a strain or two? Luc. Ay, my lord, an 't please you. Bru. It does, my boy : I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing. Luc. It is my duty, sir. [might ; Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy I know young bloods look for a time of rest. Luc. I have slept, my lord, already. Bru. It was well done; and thou shalt sleep again ; I will not hold thee long : if I do live I will be good to thee. [Music and a Song. This is a sleepy tune. — O murderous slumber, Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy That plays the music? — Gentle knave, goodnight ; I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee : If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument ; I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, goodnight.— Let me see, let me see ; — is not the leaf turn'd down Where I left reading? Here it is, I think. [Sits down. Enter the Ghost 0/OESAR. How ill this taper burns! — Ha! who comes here? I think it is the weakness of mine eyes That shapes this monstrous apparition. It comes upon me. — Art thou anything? Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil, That mak'st my blood cold and my hair to stare? Speak to me what thou art. Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus. Bru. Why com'st thou?

884 JULIUS CESAR. LACT V. Ghost. To tell thee thou shalt see me at Philippi. Bru. Well; Then I shall see thee again? Ghost. Ay, at Philippi. Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi, then.— [Exit Ghost. Now I have taken heart thou vanishest : 111 spirit, I would hold more talk with thee. — Boy Lucius ! — Varrol Claudius ! — sirs, awake ! — Claudius ! Luc. The strings, my lord, are false. Bru. He thinks he still is at his instrument. — Lucius, awake ! Luc. My lord? Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criedst out? Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry. Bru. Yes, that thou didst: didst thou see anything ? Luc. Nothing, my lord. Bru. Sleep again, Lucius. — Sirrah, Claudius ! Fellow, thou, awake ! Var. My lord? Clou. My lord? Bru. Why did you cry so out, sirs, in your sleep? Var. and Clau. Did we, my lord ? Bru. Ay : saw you anything ? Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing. Clau. Nor I, my lord. Bru. Go and commend me to my brother Cassius ; Bid him set on his powers betimes before, And we will follow. Var. and Clau. It shall be done, my lord. [Exeunt. ACT V. SCENE I.— The Plains of Pkilippi. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army. Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered : You said the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions ; It proves not so : their battles are at hand They mean to warn us at Philippi here, Answering before we do demand of them. Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it : they could be content To visit other places ; and come down With fearful bravery, thinking by this face To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage j But 'tis not so. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Prepare you, generals : The enemy comes on in gallant show ; Their bloody sign of battle is hung out, And something to be done immediately. Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on, Upon the left hand of the even field. ? Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left. Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent ? Oct. I do not cross you ; but I will do so. [March. Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army; LUCILIUS, TiTiNius, MESSALA, and others. Bru. They stand, and would have parley. Cas. Stand fast, Titinius : we must out and talk. [battle? Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge. [words. Make forth; the generals would have some Oct. Stir not until the signal. [men ? Bru. Words before blows : is it so, countryOct. Not that we love words better, as you do. Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius. Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words: Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart, Crying, Long- live! hail, Cczsar! Cas. Antony, The posture of your blows are yet unknown ; But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees, And leave them honeyless. Ant. Not stingless too. Bru. O yes, and soundless too; For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony, And very wisely threat before you sting. Ant. Villains, you did not so when your vile daggers Hack'd one another in the sides of Caesar : You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds, And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet ; Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind, Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers ! Cas. Flatterers 1 — Now, Brutus, thank yourself: This tongue had not offended so to-day If Cassius might have rul'd. Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat, The proof of it will turn to redder drops. Look,—

SCENE I.] JULIUS CESAR. 885 I draw a sword against conspirators ; When think you that the sword goes up again ? — Never till Caesar's three-and-thirty wounds Be well aveng'd ; or till another Caesar Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors. Brit. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands, Unless thou bring'st them with thee. Oct. So I hope ; I was not born to die on Brutus' sword. Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain, Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable. Cos. A peevish school-boy, worthless of such honour, Join'd with a masker and a reveller ! Ant. Old Cassius still ! Oct. Come, Antony; away! — Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth: If you dare fight to-day, come to the field ; If not, when you have stomachs. [Exeunt OCT., ANT., and their Army. Cas. Why, now, blow wind, swell billow, a. id swim bark ! The storm is up, and all is on the hazard. Bru. Ho, Lucilius ! hark, a word with you. Lucil. My lord. [BRU0 and LUCIL. converse apart. Cas. Messala, — Mes. What says my general ? Cas. Messala, This is my birth-day ; as this very day Was Cassius bom. Give me thy hand Messala : Be thou my witness that, against my will, As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set Upon one battle all our liberties. You know that I held Epicurus strong, And his opinion : now I change my mind, And partly credit things that do presage. Coming from Sardis, on our former ensign Two mighty eagles fell ; and there they perch'd, Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands ; Who to Philippi here consorted us : This morning are they fled away and gone ; And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us, As we were sickly prey : their shadows seem A canopy most fatal, under which Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost. Mes. Believe not so. Cas. I but believe it partly ; For I am fresh of spirit ; and resolv'd To meet all perils very constantly. Bru. Even so, Lucilius. Cas. Now, most noble Brutus, The gods to-day stand friendly, that we may, Lovers of peace, lead on our days to age ! But, since the affairs of men rest still incertain, Let 's reason with the worst that may befall. If we do lose this battle, then is this The very last time we shall speak together : What are you, then, determined to do ? Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy By which I did blame Cato for the death Which he did give himself. — f know not how, But I do find it cowardly and vile,

For fear of what might fall, so to prevent The time of life : — arming myself with patience To stay the providence of some high powers That govern us below. Cas. Then, if we lose this battle, You are contented to be led in triumph Through the streets of Rome? [Roman, Bru. No, Cassius, no : think not, thou noble That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome ; He bears too great a mind. But this same day Must end that work the ides of March began ; And whether we shall meet again I know not. Therefore our everlasting farewell take : For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius ! If we do meet again, why, we shall smile ; If not, why, then, this parting was well made. Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus ! If we do meet again we'll smile indeed ; If not, 'tis true this parting was well made. Bru. Why, then, lead on. — O that a man might know The end of this day's business ere it come ! But it sumceth that the day will end, And then the end is known. — Come, ho ! away ! [Exeunt. SCENE II. — THE PLAINS OF PHILIPPI. The Field of Battle. Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA. Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills Unto the legions on the other side : [Lmid alarum. Let them set on at once ; for I perceive But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing, And sudden push gives them the overthrow. Ride, ride, Messala : let them all come down. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — THE PLAINS OF PHILIPPI. Another part of the Fifld. Alarum. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS. Cas. O look, Titinius, }cck, the villains fly 1 Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy : This ensign here of mine was turning back ; I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

886 JULIUS CESAR. [ACT v. Tit. O Casskis, Brutus gave the word too early ; Who, having some advantage on Octavius, Took it too eagerly : his soldiers fell to spoil : Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd. Enter PiNDARUS. Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off ; Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord ! Fly, therefore, noble Cassius ! fly far off. Cas. This hill is far enough. — Look, look, Titinius ; Are those my tents where I perceive the fire ? Tit. They are, my lord.. Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me, Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him, Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops And here again, that I may rest assur'd Whether yond troops are friend or enemy. Tit. I will be here again even with a thought. [Exit. Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill ; My sight was ever thick ; regard Titinius, And tell me what thou not'st about the field. — [Exit PINDARUS. This day I breathed first : time is come round, And where I did begin there shall I end ; My life is run his compass. — Sirrah, what news ? Pin. [Above.] O my lord ! Cas. What news ? Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about With horsemen, that make to him on the spur; — Yet he spurs on. — Now they are almost on him ; — Now, Titinius! — now some 'light: — O, he 'lights too:— He 's ta'en j — and, hark ! they shout for joy. [Shout. Cas. Come down, behold no more. O, coward that I am, to live so long, To see my best friend ta'en before my face ! Enter PINDARUS. Come hither, sirrah : In Parthia did I take thee prisoner ; And then I swore thee, saving of thy life, That whatsoever I did bid thee do Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath ! Now be a freeman ; and with this good sword, That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom. Stand not to answer : here, take thou the hilts ; And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now, Guide thou the sword. — Caesar, thou art reveng'd, Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies. Pin. So, I am free ; yet would not so have been, Durst I have done my will. O Cassius ! Far from this country Pindarus shall run, Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit. Re-enter TITINIUS, -with MESSALA. Mes. It is but change, Titinius ; for Octavius Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power, As Cassius' legions are by Antony. Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius. Mes. Where did you leave him ? Tit. All disconsolate, With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill. Mes. Is not that he that lies upon the ground? Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart ! Mes, Is not that he ? Tit. No, this was he, Messala, But Cassius is no more. — O setting sun, As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night, So in his red blood Cassius' day is set, — The sun of Rome is set ! Our day is gone ; Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done ! Mistrust of my success hath done this deed. Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed. O hateful error, melancholy's child, Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not ? O error, soon conceiv'd, Thou never com'st unto a happy birth, But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee ! Tit. What, Pindarus ! where art thou, Pindarus? Mes. Seek him, Titinius : whilst I go to meet The noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it; For piercing steel and darts envenomed Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus As tidings of this sight. Tit. " Hie you, Messala, [Exit MESSALA. And I will seek for Pindarus the while. Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius? Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory, And bid me giv 't thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts? Alas, thou hast misconstru'd everything. But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow, Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding. — Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Caius Cassius. — By your leave, gods. — This is a Roman's part: Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. SCENE IV.] JULIUS CESAR. 887 Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS. Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? Mes. Lo, yonder ; and Titinius mourning it. Bru. Titinius' face is upward. Cato. He is slain. Bru. O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet ! Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords In our own proper entrails. [Low alarums. Cato. Brave Titinius ! Look, whe'r he have notcrowivd dead Cassius! Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these ?— The last of all the Romans, fare thee well ! It is impossible that ever Rome [tears Should breed thy fellow. — Friends, I owe more To this dead man than you shall see me pay. — I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. — Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body : His funerals shall not be in our camp, Lest it discomfort us. — Lucilius, come ; — And come, young Cato ; let us to the field. — Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on: — 'Tis three o'clock ; and, Romans, yet ere night We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt. SCENE IV.— Another part of the Field. Alarum. Enter, fighting. Soldiers of both Armies ; then BRUTUS, YOUNG CATO, LUCILIUS, and others. Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads ! [with me? Cato. W7hat bastard doth not ? Who will go I will proclaim my name about the field : — I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho ! A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend ; I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho ! [Charges the enemy. Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I ; Brutus, my country's friend ; know me for Brutus ! [Exit, charging the enemy. YOUNG CATO is overpowered, and falls. Lucil. O young and noble Cat®, art thou down? Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius ; And mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son. i Sold. Yield, or thou diest. Lucil. Only I yield to die ? There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight ; [Offering money. Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death. 1 Sold. We must not. — A noble prisoner ! 2 Sold. Room, ho ! Tell Antony Brutus is ta'en. [general. — i Sold. I '11 tell the news. — Here comes the Enter ANTONY. Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord. Ant. Where is he? Lucil. Safe, Antony ; Brutus is safe enough: I dare assure thee that no enemy Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus : The gods defend him from so great a shame ! When you do find him, or alive or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like himself. Ant. This is not

Brutus, friend ; but, I assure you, A prize no less in worth : keep this man safe, Give him all kindness : I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. G® on, And see whe'r Brutus be alive or dead ; And bring us word unto Octavius' tent How everything is chanc'd. [Exeunt. SCENE V. — Another part of the Field. Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS. Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock. Cli. Statilius show'd the torch-light ; but, my lord, He came not back : he is or ta'en or slain. Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus : slaying is the word ; It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. [Whispering him. Cli. What, I, my lord ? No, not for all the world. Bru. Peace, then, no words. Cli. I '11 rather kill myself. Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius ! [Whispers him. Dar. Shall I do such a deed ? Cli. O Dardanius ! Dar. O Clitus ! Cli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee? Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates. Cli. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes. [word. Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius ; list a Vol. What says my lord ? Bru. Why, this, Volumnius : The ghost of Csesar hath appear'd to me Two several times by night, — at Sardis once, And this last night here in Philippi fields : I know my hour is come.

JULIUS CESAR. [ACT v. Vol. Not so, my lord. Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes; Our enemies have beat us to the pit : [Low alarums. It is more worthy to leap in ourselves Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius, Thou know'st that we two went to school together : Even for that our love of old, I pray thee, Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it. Vol. That 's not an office for a friend, my lord. [Alarum still. Cli. Fly, fly, my lord ; there is no tarrying here. [Volumnius. — Bru. Farewell to you ; — and you ; — and you, Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep ; Farewell to thee too, Strato. — Countrymen, My heart doth joy that yet, in all my life, I found no man but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day More than Octavius and Mark Antony By this vile conquest shall attain unto. So, fare you well at once ; for Brutus' tongue Hath almost ended his life's history : Night hangs upon mine eyes ; my bones would rest, That have but labour'd to attain this hour. [Alarum. Cry within^ " Fly, fly, fly ! " Cli. Fly, my lord, fly. , Bru. Hence ! I will follow. [Exeunt CLI., DAR., and\oi« I pr'ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord : Thou art a fellow of a good respect ; Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it: Hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy face, While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato ? Stra. Give me your hand first : fare you well, my lord. Bru. Farewell, good Strato. — Caesar, now be still : I kill'd not thee with half so good a will. [He runs on his sword^ and dies. Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and Army ; MESSALA and LUCILIUS, prisoners. Oct. What man is that ? Mes. My master's man. — Strato, where is thy master ? [Messala : Stra. Free from the bondage you are in, The conquerors can but make a fire of him ; For Brutus only overcame himself, And no man else hath honour by his death. Lucil. So Brutus should be found. — I thank thee, Brutus, That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true. Oct. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them. Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me ? Stra. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you. Oct. Do so, good Messala. Mes. How died my master, Strato ? Stra. I held the sword, and he did run on it. Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee, That did the latest service to my master. Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all: All the conspirators, save only he, Did that they did in envy of great Cassar ; He only, in a general honest thought, And common good to all, made one of them. His life was gentle ; and the elements So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up And say to all the world, This was a man ! Oct. According to his virtue, let us use him With all respect and rites of burial. Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie, Most like a soldier, order'd honourably. — So, call the field to rest : and let 's away, To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeztni. ban ,ar;j;

O that I knew this husband, which you say must charge his horns with garlands ! Alex. Soothsayer, — Sooth. Your will ? Char. Is this the man? — Is't you, sir, that know things? Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy A little I can read. Alex. Show him your hand. Enter ENOBARBUS. Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough Cleopatra's health to drink. Char. Good sir, give me good fortune. Sooth. I make not, but foresee. Char. Pray, then, forsee me one. Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are. Char. He means in flesh. Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old. Char. Wrinkles forbid ! Alex. Vex not his prescience ; be attentive. Char. Hush! Sooth. You shall be more beloving than beloved. [drinking. Char. I had rather heat my liver with Alex. Nay, hear him. Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage : find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress. Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve. Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs. Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune Than that which is to approach. Char. Then belike my children shall have no names: — pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have? Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb, And fertile every wish, a million. Char. Out, fool ! I forgive thee for a witch. Alex. You think nona but your sheets are privy to your wishes. Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers. Alex. We '11 know all our fortunes. Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be — drunk to bed. Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else. Char. Even as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth famine. Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay. Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. — Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune. Sooth. Your fortunes are alike. Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars. Sooth. I have said. Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

SCENE II.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 891 Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it? Iras. Not in my husband's nose. Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend ! — Alexas, — come, his fortune, his fortune ! — O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee ! And let her die too, and give him a worse ! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fiftyfold a cuckold ! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight ; good Isis, I beseech thee ! Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people ! for, as it is a heartbreaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly ! Char. Amen. Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they 'd do 't ! Eno. Hush ! here comes Antony. Char. Not he ; the queen. Enter CLEOPATRA. Cleo. Saw you my lord ? Eno. No, lady. Cleo. Was he not here ? Char. No, madam. [sudden Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth ; but on the A Roman thought hath struck him. — Enobarbus, — Eno. Madam ? Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. — WThere's Alexas ? [preaches. Alex. Here, at youi service. — My lord apCleo. We will not look upon him : go with us. {Exeunt CLEO., ENO., CHAR., IRAS, ALEX. and Soothsayer. Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants. Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field. Ant. Against my brother Lucius Mess. Ay: But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Caesar; Whose better issue in the war, from Italy, Upon the first encounter, drave them. Ant. Well, what worst ? [teller. Mess. The nature of bad news infects the Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward. — On:— Things that are past are done with me. — 'Tis thus; Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death I hear him as he flatter'd. Mess. Labienus, — This is stiff news, — hath, with his Parthian force, Extended Asia from Euphrates ; His conquering banner shook from Syria To Lydia and to Ionia ; Whilst,— Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say, — Mess. O, my lord ! Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue : Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome ; Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase ; and taunt my faults

With such full license as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds [told us When our quick minds lie still ; and our ills Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile. Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit. Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news ! Speak there ! 1 Att. The man from Sicyon, — is there such an one ? 2 Att. He stays upon your will. Ant. Let him appear. — • These strong Egyptian fetters I must break, Or lose myself in dotage. — Enter a second Messenger. What are you? 2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead. Ant. Where died she? 2 Mess. In Sicyon : [serious Her length of sickness, with what else more Importeth thee to know, this bears. \Gives a letter. Ant. Forbear me. {Exit second Messenger. There 's a great spirit gone ! Thus did I desire it: What our contempts do often hurl from us, We wish it ours again ; the present pleasure, By revolution lowering, does become The opposite of itself : she 's good, being gone; The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on. I must from this enchanting queen break off : Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness doth hatch. — Ho, Enobarbus ! Re-enter ENOBARBUS. Eno. What 's your pleasure, sir ? Ant. I must with haste from hence. Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women : we

Under a compelling occasion, let women die : it were pity to cast them away for nothing ; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly ; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment : I dp think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying. Ant. She is cunning past man's thought. Eno. Alack, sir, no ; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love : we cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears ; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report : this cannot be cunning in her ; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove. Ant. Would I had never seen her ! Eno. O sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work ; which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel. Ant. Fulvia is dead. Eno. Sir? Ant. Fulvia is dead. Eno. Fulvia! Ant. Dead. Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth ; comforting therein that when old robes are worn out there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented : this grief is crowned with consolation ; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat : — and, indeed, the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow. [state Ant. The business she hath broached in the Cannot endure my absence. Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you ; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode. Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers Have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our expedience to the queen, And get her leave to part. For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us ; but the letters too Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home : Sextus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea ; our slippery people, — Whose love is never link'd to the deserver Till his deserts are past, — begin to throw Pompey the Great, and all his dignities, Upon his son ; who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier : whose quality, going on, The sides o' the world may danger : much is breeding, Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remove from hence. Eno. I shall do 't. {Exeunt. SCENE III. — ALEXANDRIA. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace. Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS. Cleo. Where is he? Char. I did not see him since. Cleo. See where he is, who 's with him, what he does : — I did not send you : — if you find him sad, ' Say I am dancing ; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick : quick, and returru {Exit ALEXAS. Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly, You do not hold the method to enforce The like from him. Cleo. What should I do, I do not ? Char. In each thing give him way ; cross him in nothing. Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool, — the way to lose him. [forbear : Char. Tempt him not so too far ; I wish, In time we hate that which we often fear. But here comes Antony. Cleo. I am sick and sullen. Enter ANTONY. Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose, — [fall : Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian ; I shall It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature Will not sustain jt. Ant. Now, my dearest queen, — Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me. Ant. What 's the matter ? Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there 's some good news. What says the married woman ? — You may go : Would she had never given you leave to come ! Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here, — I have no power upon you ; hers you are.

SCENE III.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 893 Ant. The gods best know, — Cleo. O, never was there queen So mightily betrayM ! Yet at the first I saw the treasons planted. Ant. Cleopatra, — Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true, Though you in swearing shake the throned gods, Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness, To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, Which break themselves in swearing ! Ant. Most sweet queen, — „ Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going, But bid farewell, and go : when you su'd staying, Then was the time for words : no going then ; — Eternity was in our lips and eyes, Bliss in our brows' bent ; none our parts so poor But was a race of heaven : they are so still, Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world, Art turn'd the greatest liar. Ant. How now, lady ! Cleo. I would I had thy inches ; thou shouldst know There were & heart in Egypt. Ant. Hear me, queen : The strong necessity of time commands Our services awhile ; but my full heart Remains in use with you. Our Italy Shines o'er with civil swords : Sextus Pompeius Makes his approaches to the port of Rome : Equality of two domestic powers [strength, Breeds scrupulous faction : the hated, grown to Are - newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey, Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten; And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge By any desperate change. My more particular, And that which most with you should safe my going, Is Fulvia's death. [me freedom, Cleo. Though age from folly could not give It does from childishness : — can Fulvia die ? Ant. She 's dead, my queen : Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read The garboils she awak'd ; at the last, best. See when and where she died. Cleo. O most false love ! Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, In Fulvia's death how mine receiv'd shall be. Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know The purposes I bear ; which are, or cease, As you shall give the advice. By the fire That quickens Nilus' slim«, I go from hence Thy soldier, servant ; making peace or war As thou affect'st. Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come ; — But let it be : — I am quickly ill and well, So Antony loves. Ant. My precious queen, forbear; And give true evidence to his love, which stands An honourable trial. Cleo. So

Fulvia told me. I pr'ythee, turn aside and weep for her ; Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears Belong to Egypt : good now, play one scene Of excellent dissembling ; and let it look Like perfect honour. Ant. You '11 heat my blood : no more. Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly. Ant. Now, by my sword, — Cleo. And target.— Still he mends ; But this is not the best: — look, pr'ythee, Charmian, How this Herculean Roman does become The carriage of his chafe. Ant. I '11 leave you, lady. Cleo. Courteous lord, one word. Sir, you and I must part, — but that 's not it : Sir, you and I have lov'd,— but there 's not it ; That you know well : something it is I would, — O, my oblivion is a very Antony, And I am all forgotten. Ant. But that your royalty Holds idleness your subject, I should take you For idleness itself. Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour To bear such idleness so near the heart As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me ; Since my becomings kill me, when they do not Eye well to you : your honour calls you hence ; Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly, And all the gods go with you ! upon your sword Sit laurel victory ! and smooth success Be strew'd before your feet ! Ant. Let us go. Come ; Our separation so abides, and flies, That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me, And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee. Away ! [Exeunt, SCENE IV.— ROME. 894 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT i. It is not Caesar's natural vice to hate Our great competitor. From Alexandria This is the news : — he fishes, drinks, and wastes The lamps of night in revel : is not more manlike Than Cleopatra ; nor the queen of Ptolemy [or More womanly than he : hardly gave audience, Vouchsafd to think he had partners: you shall find there A man who is the abstract of all faults That all men follow. Lep. I must not think there are Evils enow to darken all his goodness : His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven, More fiery by night's blackness ; hereditary Rather than purchas'd ; what he cannot change Than what he chooses. Cces. You are too indulgent. Let us grant it is not Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy; To give a kingdom for a mirth ; to sit And keep the turn of tippling with a slave ; To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet With knaves that smell of sweat: say this becomes him, — As his composure must be rare indeed Whom these things cannot blemish, — yet must Antony No way excuse his soils when we do bear So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd His vacancy 'with his voluptuousness, Full surfeits and the dryness ef his bones Call on him for 't : but to confound such time, That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud As his own state and ours, — 'tis to be chid As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge, Pawn their experience to their present pleasure, And so rebel to judgment. Enter a Messenger. Lep. Here 's more news. Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour, Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea ; And it appears he is belov'd of those That only have fear'd Caesar : to the ports The discontents repair, and men's reports Give him much wrong'd. Cces. I should have known no less : It hath been taught us from the primal state That he which is was wish'd until he were ; And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth love, [body, Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream, Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide, To rot itself with motion. Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word, Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates, Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound With keels of every kind : many hot inroads They make in Italy ; the borders maritime Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth re volt : No vessel can peep forth but 'tis as soon Taken as seen ; for Pompey's name strikes more Than could his war resisted. Cces. Antony, Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st Hirtius and Pansa, consuls at thy heel Did famine follow ; whom thou fought'st against, Though daintily brought up, with patience more Than savages could suffer : thou didst drink The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle Which beasts would cough at : thy palate then did deign The roughest berry on the rudest hedge ; Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets, The barks of trees thou browsed'st ; on the Alps It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh, Which some did die to look on : and all this, — It wounds thine honour that I speak it now, — Was borne so like a soldier that thy cheek So much as lank'd not. Lep. 'Tis pity of him. Cces. Let his shames quickly Drive him to Rome : 'tis time we twain Did show ourselves 'i the field ; and to that end Assemble we immediate council : Pompey Thrives in our idleness. Lep. To-morrow, Caesar, I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able To front this present time. CCES. Till which encounter It is my business too. Farewell. [meantime Lep. Farewell, my lord : what you shall know Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir, To let me be partaker. Cces. Doubt not, sir ; I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt. SCENE V. — ALEXANDRIA. SCENE V.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 895 Char. Why, madam? Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time My Antony is away. Char. ' You think of him too much. Cleo. O, 'tis treason ! Char. Madam, I trust, not so. Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian ! Mar. What 's your highness' pleasure? Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing ; I take no pleasure In aught an eunuch has : 'tis well for thee That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections? Mar. Yes, gracious madam. Cleo. Indeed! '[nothing Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do But what indeed is honest to be done : Yet have I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars. Cleo. O Charrm'an, Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he or sits he ? Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? O happy horse to bear the weight of Antony ! Do bravely, horse ! for wott'st thou whom thou mov'st? The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm And burgonet of men. — He 's speaking now, Or murmuring, Where's my serpent of old Nile? For so he calls me. — Now I feed myself With most delicious poison : — think on me, That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black, And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar, When thou wast here above the ground I was A morsel for a monarch : and great Pompey Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow; There would he anchor his aspect and die With looking on his life. Enter ALEXAS. Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail ! Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony ! [hath Yet, coming from him, that great medicine With his tinct gilded thee. — How goes it with my brave Mark Antony? Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen, He kiss'd, — the last of many doubled kisses, — This orient pearl: — his speech sticks in my heart. Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence. Alex. Good friend ', quoth he, Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot, To mend the petty present, I will piece Her opulent throne "with kingdoms ; all the east, Say thou, shall call her mistress. So he nodded, And soberly did mount an arm-girt steed, Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke Was beastly dumb'd by him. Cleo. What, was he sad or merry? Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry. Cleo. O well-divided disposition! — Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man ; but note him : He was not sad, — for he would shine on those That make their looks by his; he was not merry, — Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay In Egypt with his joy ; but between both : 0 heavenly mingle ! — Be'st thou sad or merry, The violence of either thee becomes, So does it no man else. — Mett'st thou my posts? Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers : Why do you send so thick? Cleo. Who 's born that day When I forget to send to Antony Shall die a beggar. — Inkandpaper,Charmian. — Welcome, my good Alexas. — Did I, Charmian, Ever love Caesar so? Char. O that brave Caesar ? Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis ! Say, the brave Antony. Char. The valiant Caesar ! Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth If thou with Caesar paragon again My man of men. Char. By your most gracious pardon, 1 sing but after you. Cleo. My salad days, When I was green in judgment : — cold in blood, To say as I said then ! — but, come, away ; Get me ink and paper : he shall have every day A several greeting, or I '11 unpeople Egypt. [Exeunt. ACT II. SCENE I.— MESSINA. A Room in POMPEY'S House. Enter POMPEY, MENECRATES, and MENAS. Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist The deeds of justest man.

896 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT IL Mene. Know, worthy Pompey, That what they do delay they not deny. Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays The thing we sue for. Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers Deny us for our good ; so find we profit By losing of our prayers. Pom. I shall do well : The people love me, and the sea is mine ; My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors : Caesar gets money where He loses hearts : Lepidus flatters both, Of both is flatter' d; but he neither loves Nor either cares for him. Men. Caesar and Lepidus Are in the field : a mighty strength they carry. Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false. Men. From Silvius, sir. Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together, Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love, Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip ! Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both ! Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts, Keep his brain fuming ; Epicurean cooks Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite ; That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour Even till a Lethe'd dullness. Enter VARRIUS. How now, Varrius ! Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver : — Mark Antony is every hour in Rome Expected : since he went from Egypt 'tis A space for further travel. Pom. I could have given less matter A better ear. — Menas, I did not think This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm For such a petty war ; his soldiership Is twice the other twain : but let us rear The higher our opinion, that our stirring Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck The ne'er lust-wearied Antony. Men. I cannot hope Caesar and Antony shall well greet together : His wife that 's dead did trespasses to Caesar ; His brother warr'd upon him ; although, I think, Not mov'd by Antony. Pom. I know not, Menas, How lesser enmities may give way to greater. Were 't not that we stand up against them all, 'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves ; For they have entertained cause enough To draw their swords : but how the fear of us May cement their divisions, and bind up The petty difference, we yet not know. Be 't as our gods will have 't ! It only stands Our lives upon to use our strongest hands. Come, Menas. [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ROME. A Room in the House of LEPIDUS. Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed, And shall become you well, to entreat your captain To soft and gentle speech. Eno. I shall entreat him To answer like himself : if Caesar move him, Let Antony look over Caesar's head, And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter, Were I the wearer of Antonius* beard, I would not shave 't to-day. Lep. 'Tis not a time For private stomaching. Eno. Every time Serves for the matter that is then born in 't. Lep. But small to greater matters must give way. Eno. Not if the small come first. Lep. Your speech is passion : But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here conies The noble Antony. Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS. Agr. O, rare for Antony ! Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereids, So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes, And made their bends adornings : at the helm A seeming mermaid steers : the silken tackle Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands That yarely frame the office. From the barge A strange invisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast Her people out upon her ; and Antony, Enthron'd i' the market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to the air ; which, but for vacancy, Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too, And made a gap in nature. Agr. Rare Egyptian ! Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her, Invited her to supper: she replied It should be better he became her guest ; Which she entreated : our courteous Antony Whom ne'er the word of No woman heard speak, Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast, And, for his ordinary, pays his heart For what his eyes eat only. Agr. Royal wench ! She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed : He plough'd her, and she cropp'd. Eno. I saw her once Hop forty paces through the public street ; And having lost her breath, she spoke and panted, That she did make defect perfection, And, breathless, power breathe forth. Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly. Eno. Never ; he will not : Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale Her infinite variety: other women cloy The appetites they feed ; but she makes hungry Where most she satisfies : for vilest things Become themselves in her ; that the holy priests Bless her when she is riggish. Let it alone ; let 's to billiards : Come, Charmian. Char. My arm is sore ; best play with Mardian. Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd As with a woman. — Come, you '11 play with me, sir? Mar. As well as I can, madam. Cleo. And when good- will is show'd, though 't come too short, The actor may plead pardon. I '11 none nqw : — Give me mine angle, — we '11 to the river : there, My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn d fi shes ; my bended hook shall pierce Their slimy jaws ; and as I draw them up I '11 think them every one an Antony, And say, Ah ha / you* re caught. Char. 'Twas merry when You wager'd on your angling ; when your diver Did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he With fervency drew up. Cleo. That time, — O times !-ˆ I laugh'd him out of patience ; and that night I laugh'd him into patience : and next morn, Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed ; Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst I wore his sword Philippan. Enter a Messenger. O ! from Italy !— • Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears, That long time have been barren. Mess. Madam, madam, — Cleo. Antony 's dead ! — If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress •. But well and free, If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here My bluest veins to kiss, — a hand that kings Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing. Mess. First, madam, he 's well. Cleo. Why, there 's more gold. But, sirrah, mark, we use To say the dead are well : bring it to that, The geld I give thee will I melt and pour Down thy ill -uttering throat. Mess. Good madam, hear me. Cleo. Well, go to, I will ; But there 's no goodness in thy face : if Antony Be free and healthful, — why so tart a favour Tc trumpet such good tidings ! If not well, Thou shouldst come like a fury crowu'd with snakes, Not like a formal man. Mess. Will 't please you hear me? Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st : Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well, Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him, I '11 set thee in a shower of gold, and hail Rich pearls upon thee. Mess. Madam, he 's well. Cleo. Well said. Mess. And friends with Caesar. Cleo. Thou 'rt an honest man. Mess. Caesar and be are greater friends than ever.ˆi*ˆ!;! Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me. Mess. But yet, madam, — Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay The good precedence ; fie upon but yet ! But yet is as a gaoler to bring forth Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend, Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear, The good and bad together : he 's friends with Caesar ; [free. In state of health, thou say'st ; and, thou say'st,

SCENE V.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 901 Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report : He 's bound unto Octavia. Cleo. For what good turn ? Mess. For the best turn i' the bed. Cleo. I am pale, Charmian. Mess. Madam, he 's married to Octavia. Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee ! [Strikes him down. Mess. Good madam, patience. Cleo. What say you ? — Hence, [Strikes hint again. Horrible villain ! or I '11 spurn thine eyes Like balls before me; I '11 unhair thy head : [She hales him up and down. Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire and stew'd in brine, Smarting in ling'ring pickle. Mess. Gracious madam, I that do bring the news made not the match. Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee, [hadst And make thy fortunes proud : the blow thou Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage ; And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg. Mess. He 's married, madam. Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long. [Draws a dagger. Mess. Nay, then I '11 run.— What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit. Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself: The man is innocent. Cleo. Some innocents scape not the thunderbolt.— Melt Egypt into Nile ! and kindly creatures Turn all to serpents ! — Call the slave again : — Though I am mad, I will not bite him : — call. Char. He is afear'd to come. Cleo. I will not hurt him. [Exit CHARMIAN. These hands do lack nobility, that they strike A meaner than myself ; since I myself Have given myself the cause. Re-enter CHARMIAN and Messenger. Come hither, sir. Though it be honest, it is never good To bring bad news : give to a gracious message An host of tongues ; but let ill tidings tell Themselves when they be felt. Mess. I have done my duty. Cleo. Is he married ? I cannot hate thee worser than I do If thou again say Yes. Mess. He is married, madam. Cleo. The gods confound thee 1 dost thou hold there still I Mess. Should I lie, madam ? Cleo. O, I would thou didst, So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made A cistern for scal'd snakes ! Go, get thee hence : Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married ? Mess. I crave your hignness3 pardon. Cleo. He is married ? Mess, Take no offence that I would not offend you : To punish me for what you make me do Seems much unequal : he is married to Octavia. Cleo. O that his fault should make a knave of thee, [hence : Thou art not what thou

'rt sure of ! — Get thee The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome [hand, Are all too dear for me: lie they upon thy And be undone by 3em ! [Exit Messenger. Char. Good your highness, patience. Cleo. In praising Antony I have disprais*d Caesar. Char. Many times, madam. Cleo. I am paid for \ now. Lead me from hence ; I faint : — O Iras, Charmian ! — 'tis no matter. — Go to the fellow, good Alexas ; bid him Report the feature of Octavia, her years, Her inclination, let him not leave out The colour of her hair : — bring me word quickly. [Exit ALEXAS. Let him for ever go: — let him not — Charmian, Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon, T' other way he 's a Mars. — Bid you Alexas [To MARDIAN. Bring me word how tall she is. — Pity me, Charmian, But do not speak to me. — Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt. SCENE VI. — Near Misenum. Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS at one side, with drum and trumpet ; at the other, CESAR, /NTONY, LEPIDUS, ENOBARBUS, MECˆENAS, with Soldiers marching. Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine ; And we shall talk before we fight. Cces. 902 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT II. And carry back to Sicily much tall youth That else must perish here. Pom. To you all three, The senators alone of this great world, Chief factors for the gods, — I do not know Wherefore my father should revengers want, Having a son and friends ; since Julius Csesar, Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, There saw you labouring for him. What was 't That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire ; and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus, With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom, To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it Hath made me rig my navy ; at whose burden The anger'd ocean foams ; with which I meant To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome Cast on my noble father. Cess. Take your time. Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails ; We'll speak with thee at sea: at land thou know'st How much we do o?er-count thee. Pom. At land, indeed, Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house : But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, Remain in 't as thou mayst. Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us, — For this is from the present, — how you take The offers we have sent you. Cess. There 's the point. Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh What it is worth embrac'd. Cess. And what may follow, To try a larger fortune. Pom. You have made me offer Of Sicily, Sardinia ; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates ; then to send Measures of wheat to Rome ; this 'greed upon, To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back Our targes undinted. Cas. , Ant. , and Lep. That 's our offer. Pom. Know, then, I came before you here a man prepar'd To take this offer : but Mark Antony Put me to some impatience : — though I lose The praise of it by telling, you must know, When Caesar and your brother were at blows, Your mother came to Sicily, and did find Her welcome friendly. Ant. I have heard it, Pompey ; And am well studied for a liberal thanks Which I do owe you. Pom. Let me have your hand : I did not think, sir, to have met you here. Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and, thanks to you, [hither ; That call'd me, timelier than my purpose, For I have gain'd by it. C

SCENE VI. j ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 903 Men. And you by land. Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me ; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land. Men. Nor what I have done by water. Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea. Men. And you by land. Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas : if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing. Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are. Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face. Men. No slander ; they steal hearts. Eno. We came hither to fight with you. Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune. Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again. Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here : pray you, is he married to Cleopatra? Eno. Caesar's sister is called Octavia. Men. True, sir ; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus. Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius. Men. Pray you, sir? Eno. 'Tis true. Men. Then is Caesar and he for ever knit together. Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so. Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties. Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity : Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation. Men. Who would not have his wife so? Eno. Not he that himself is not so ; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again : then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is : he married but his occasion here. Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you. Eno. I shall take it, sir : we have used our throats in Egypt. Men. Come, let 's away. [Exeunt. SCENE VII.— On board POMPEY'S Galley •, lying near Misenum. Music. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet. 1 Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o* their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down. 2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured. 1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink. 2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, no more; reconciles them to his entreaty and himself to the drinK. 1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion. 2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partizan I could not heave. I Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in 't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks. A senntt sounded. Enter CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MECˆENAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains. Ant. [To OESAR.] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' the Nile By certain scales i' the pyramid ; they know, By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth Or foison follow : the higher Nilus swells The more it promises : as it ebbs, the seedsman Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain, And shortly comes to harvest. Lep. You 've strange serpents there. Ant. Ay, Lepidus. Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun : so is your crocodile. Ant. They are so. [Lepidus ! Pom. Sit,— and some wine! — A health to Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I '11 ne'er out. Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you '11 be in till then. Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that Men. [Aside to POM.] Pompey, a word. Pom. [Aside to MEN.] Say in mine ear: what is't? Men. [Aside to POM.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain, And hear me speak a word.

904 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT II. Pom. [Aside fo MEN.] Forbear me till anon.— This wine for Lepidus ! Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile? Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs : it lives by that which nourisheth it; and, the elements once out of it, it transmigrates. Lep. What colour is it of? Ant. Of its own colour too. Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent. Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet. Cess. Will this description satisfy him? Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure. Pom. [Aside to MEN.] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that? away ! Do as I bid you. — Where 's this cup I call'd for? Men. [Aside to POM.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me, Rise from thy stool. Pom. [Aside to MEN.] I think thou'rt mad. The matter? [Rises and walks aside. Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes. Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What 's else to say? — Be jolly, lords. Ant. These quicksands, Lepidus, Keep off them, for you sink. Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world? Pom. What say'st thou? Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That 's twice. Pom. How should that be? Men. But entertain it, and, Although thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world. Pom. Hast thou drunk well ? Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup. Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove : Whate'er the ocean pales or sky inclips Is thine, if thou wilt have 't. Pom. Show me which way. Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors, Are in thy vessel : let me cut the cable ; And, when we are put off, fall to their throats : All then is thine. Pont. Ah, this thou shouldst have done, And not have spoke on 't ! In me 'tis villany ; In thee 't had been good service. Thou must know 'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour ; Mine honour it. Repent that e'er thy tongue Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown, I should have found it afterwards well done ; But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink. Men. [Aside.} For this I '11 never follow thy pall'd fortunes more. Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd. > Shall never find it more. Pom. This health to Lepidus ! Ant. Bear him ashore. I '11 pledge it for him, Pompey. Eno. Here 's to thee, Menas ! Men. Enobarbus, welcome! Pom. Fill till the cup be hid. Eno. There 's a strong fellow, Menas. [Pointing to the Attendant who carries off\J&?. Men. Why ? Eno. 'A bears The third part of the world, man ; see'st not? Men. The third part, then, is drunk : would it were all, That it might go on wheels ! Eno. Drink thou ; increase the reels. Men. Come. Porn. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast. Ant. It ripens towards it. — Strike the vessels, hoiHere is to Caesar ! CCBS. I could well forbear 't. It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain And it grows fouler. Ant. Be a child o' the time. C

Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier and his sword Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony ? Ven. I '11 humbly signify what in his name, That magical word of war, we have effected ; How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks, The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out o} the field. Sil. Where is he now ? Ven. He purposeth to Athens : whither, with what haste The weight we must convey with 's will permit, We shall appear before him. — On, there ; pass along ! [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ROME. An Ante-Chamber in CESAR'S House. Enter AGRIPPA and ENOBARBUS, meeting. Agr. What, are the brothers parted ? Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey, he is gone ; The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome: Caesar is sad; and Lepidus, Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled With the green sickness. Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus. Eno. A very fine one : O, how he loves Csesar ! [Antony ! Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Eno. Caesar ? Why he 's the Jupiter of men. Agr. What 's Antony ? The god of Jupiter. Eno. Speak you of Caesar? How! the nonpareil ! Agr. Of Antony. O thou Arabian bird ! Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say Ctzsar, — go no further. Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises. [Antony : Eno. But he loves Caesar best ; — yet he loves Hoo 1 hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets cannot [hoo ! — Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number,— His love to Antony. But as for Caesar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Good fortune, worthy soldier ; and farewell. Enter CESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ana OCTAVIA. Ant. No further, sir. Cces. You take from me a great part of myself; Use me well in't. — Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band Shall pass on thy approof. — Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love, To keep it builded, be the ram to batter The fortress of it ; for better might we Have lov'd without this mean if on both parts This be not cherish'd. Ant. Make me not offended In your distrust. Cces. I have said. Ant. You shall not find, Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear : so, the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends ! We will here part. [well : Cces. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee The elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort ! Fare thee well. Octa. My noble brother ! — Ant. The April 's in her eyes : it is love's spring, [cheerful. And these the showers to bring it on. — Be Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house ; and — Cats. What, Octavia ? Octa. I '11 tell you in your ear. Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue, — the swan's down feather, That stands upon the swell at the full of tide, And neither way inclines. Eno. [Aside to AGRIPPA.] Will Caesar weep? Agr. [Aside to ENO.] He has a cloud in 's face. : Eno. [Aside to AGRIPPA.] He were the worse for that, were he a horse ; So is he, being a man. Agr. [Aside to ENO.] Why, Enobarbus, When Antony found Julius Caesar dead, He cried almost to roaring ; and he wept When at Philippi he found Brutus slain. Eno. [Aside /0 AGRIPPA.] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum ; What willingly he did confound he wail'd : Believe 't till I weep too. Cces. No, sweet Octavia, You shall hear from me still ; the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you. Ant. Come, sir, come ; I '11 wrestle with you in my strength of love : Look, here I have you ; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods. C(zs. Adieu ; be happy ! Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light To thy fair way ! Cces. Farewell, farewell ! [Kisses OCTAVIA. Ant. Farewell ! [Trumpets sound within. Exeunt.

Come hither, sir. Alex. Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleas'd. Cleo. That Herod's head I '11 have : but how ? when Antony is gone, Through whom I might command it? — Come thou near. Mess. Most gracious majesty, — Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia ? Mess. Ay, dread queen. Cleo. Where? Mess. Madam, in Rome I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony. Cleo. Is she as tall as me ? Mess. She is not, madam. Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill tongu'd or low-? Mess. Madam, I heard her speak ; she is low voic'd. [her long. Cleo. That's not so good : — he cannot like Char. Like her ! O Isis ! 'tis impossible. Cleo. I think so, Charmian : dull of tongue and dwarfish ! — What majesty is in her gait ? Remember, If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd. Agr. Who, queasy with his insolence Already, will their good thoughts call from him. Cces. The people know it : and have now receiv'd His accusations. Agr. Who does he accuse ? Cces. Caesar : and that, having in Sicily Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him His part o' the isle : then does he say he lent me Some shipping, unrestor'd : lastly, he frets That Lepidus of the triumvirate Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain All his revenue. Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd. Cces. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone. I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel ; That he his high authority abus'd, And did deserve his change : for what I have conquer'd I grant him part ; but then, in his Armenia And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I Demand the like. Mec. He '11 never yield to that. Cces* Nor must not, then, be yielded to in this. Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train. Octa. Hail,

Caesar, and my lord ! hail, most dear Caesar ! CCES. That ever I should call thee castaway ! Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause. [come not Cces. Why have you stol'n upon us thus ? You Like Caesar's sister : the wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and The neighs of horse to tell of her approach Long ere she did appear ; the trees by the way Should have borne men ; and expectation fainted, Longing for what it had not ; nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops : but you are come A market-maid to Rome ; and have prevented The ostentation of our love, which left unshown Is often left unlov'd : we should have met you By sea and land ; supplying every stage With an augmented greeting. Octa. Good my lord, To come thus was I not constrained, but did it On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted My grieved ear withal : whereon I begg'd His pardon for return. Cces. Which soon he granted, Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him. Octa. Do not say so, my lord. Cces. I have eyes upon him, And his affairs come to me on the wind. Where is he now ? Octa. My lord, in Athens. Cces. No, my most wronged sister ; Cleopatra [empire Hath nodded him to her. Octa. Ay me, most wretched, That have my heart parted betwixt two friends That do afflict each other ! Cas. Welcome hither : Your letters did withhold our breaking forth, Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart : Be you not troubled with the time, which drives O'er your content these strong necessities ; But let determin'd things to destiny Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome ; Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought : and the high gods, To do you justice, make their ministers Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort ; And ever welcome to us. Agr. Welcome, lady. Mec. Welcome, dear madam. Each heart in Rome does love and pity you : Only the adulterous Antony, most large In his abominations, turns you off ; And gives his potent regiment to a trull That noises it against us. Octa. Is it so, sir ? [you Cas. Most certain. Sister, welcome : pray Be ever known to patience : my dear'st sister ! [Exeunt. f*!-£ *b 57ˆoˆwoH SCENE VII.— ANTONY'S Camp near the Promontory of Actium. Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS. Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not. Eno. But why, why, why ? [wars, Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these And say'st it is not fit. Eno. Well, is it, is it? Cleo. If not denounc'd against us, why should not we Be there in person ? Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply :— If we should serve with horse and mares together [bear The horse were merely lost ; the mares would A soldier and his horse. Cleo. What is 't you say? Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony ; [time, Take from his heart, take from his brain, from 's What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for levity : and 'tis said in Rome That Photinus an eunuch and your maids Manage this war. Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot That speak against us I A charge we bear i' the war, And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it ; I will not stay behind. Eno. Nay, I have done. Here comes the emperor. Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS. Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius, That from Tarentum and Brundusium He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea, And take in Toryne? — You have heard on't, sweet ? Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd Than by the negligent. Ant. A good rebuke, Which might have well become the best of men To taunt at slackness. — Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea. Cleo. By sea! what else? Can. Why will my lord do so? Ant. For that he dares us to't. Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight. Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Csesar fought with Pompey : but these offers, Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off; And so should you. Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd : Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people Ingross'd by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought : Their ships are yare ; yours heavy : no disgrace Shall fall you for refusing him at sea, Being prepar'd for land. Ant. By sea, by sea. Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away The absolute soldiership you have by land ; Distract your army, which doth most consist Of war-mark'd footmen ; leave unexecuted Your own renowned knowledge ; quite forego The way which promises assurance ; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard From firm security. Ant. I '11 fight at sea. Cleo. I have sixty sails, Csesar none better. Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn ; And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium Beat the approaching Csesar. But if we fail We then can do 't at land.

g 10 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT in. Enter a Messenger. Thy business? Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried ; Caesar has taken Toryne. [possible j Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis imStrange that his power should be. — Canidius, Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land, And our twelve thousand horse. — We '11 to our ship: Away, my Thetis ! Enter a Soldier. How now, worthy soldier? Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea ; Trust not to rotten planks : do you misdoubt This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians And the Phoenicians go a-ducking : we Have used to conquer standing on the earth And fighting foot to foot. Ant. Well, well:— away. [Exeunt ANT., CLEO., arcˆENO. Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' the right. Can. Soldier, thou art : but his whole action grows Not in the power on 't : so our leader 's led, And we are women's men. Sold. You keep by land The legions and the horse whole, do you not? Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcius Justeius, Publicola, and Caelius are for sea : But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's Carries beyond belief. Sold. While he was yet in Rome His power went out in such distractions as Beguil'd all spies. Can. Who 's his lieutenant, hear you? Sold. They say one Taurus. Can. Well I know the man. Enter a Messenger. Mess. The emperor calls Canidius. Can. With news the time 's with labour : and throes forth Each minute some. [Exeunt. SCENE XI.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. Been what he knew himself, it had gone well : O, he has given example for our flight Most grossly by his own ! Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why, then, good-night indeed. Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled. Scar. 'Tis easy to 't ; and there I will attend What further comes. Can. To Caesar will I render My legions and my horse ; six kings already Show me the way of yielding. Eno. I '11 yet follow The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason Sits in the wind against me. \Exeunt. SCENE XI. — ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace. Enter ANTONY and Attendants. Ant. Hark ! the land bids me tread no more upon't, — [hither: It is asham'd to bear me ! — Friends, come I am so lated in the world that I Have lost my way for ever : — I have a ship Laden with gold, take that, divide it ; fly, And make your peace with Caesar. All. Fly ! not we. Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards [gone ; To run and show their shoulders. — Friends, be I have myself resolv'd upon a course Which has no need of you ; begone : My treasure's in the harbour, take it. — O, I followed that I blush to look upon; My very hairs do mutiny ; for the white Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them For fear and doting. — Friends, be gone: you shall Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad, Nor make replies of loathness : take the hint Which my despair proclaims ; let that be left Which leaves itself : to the sea-side straightway : I will possess you of that ship and treasure. Leave me, I pray, a little : pray you now : — Nay, do so ; for, indeed, I have lost command, Therefore I pray you : — I '11 see you by and by. \Sits down. Enter CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS, EROS following. Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, — comfort him. Iras. Do, most dear queen. Char. Do! why, what else? Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno ! Ant. No, no, no, no, no. Eros. See you here, sir? Ant. O fie, fie, fie ! Char. Madam, — Iras. Madam, O good empress, — Eros. Sir, sir, — Ant. Yes, my lord, yes; — he at Philippi kept His sword e'en like a dancer ; while I struck The lean and wrinkled Cassius ; and 'twas I That the mad Brutus ended ; he alone Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had In the brave squares of war: yet now — no matter. Cleo. Ah, stand by. Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen. Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him:

He is unqualitied with very shame. Cleo. Well then, — sustain me : — O ! Eros. Most noble sir, arise ; the queen approaches : Her head 3s declin'd, and death will seize her, but Your comfort make the rescue. Ant. I have offended reputation, — A most unnoble swerving. Eros. Sir, the queen. [See Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? How I convey my shame out of thine eyes B/ looking back, what I have left behind 'StroyM in dishonour. Cleo. O my lord, my lord, Forgive my fearful sails ! I little thought You would have followed. Ant. Egypt, thou knˆw'st too well My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings, And thou shouldst tow me after : o'er my spirit Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding ot the gods Command me. Cleo. O, my pardon ! Ant. Now I must To the young man send humble treaties, dodge And palter in the shifts of lowness ; who With half the bulk o' the world play'd as 1 pleas'd, Making and marring fortunes You did know How much you were my conqueror ; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause. Cleo. Pardon, pardon! Ant. Fall not a tear, I say ; one of them rates All that is won and lost . give me a kiss ; Even this repays me.— We sent our schoolmaster ; Is he come back? — Love, I am full ol lead. —

912 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT III. Some wine, within there, and our viands! — • Fortune knows We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeunt. SCENE XII. — CESAR'S Camp in Egypt. Enter CˆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and others. Cas. Let him appear that 's come from Antony.— Know you him ? Dot. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster : An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither He sends so poor a pinion of his wing, Which had superfluous kings for messengers Not many moons gone by. Enter EUPHRONIUS. Cas. Approach, and speak. Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony : I was of late as petty to his ends As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf To his grand sea. Cas. Be 't so : declare thine office. Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt : which not granted, He lessens his requests ; and to thee sues To let him breathe between the heavens and earth, A private man in Athens : this for him. Next, ˆ Cleopatra does confess thy greatness; Submits her to thy might ; and of thee craves The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs, Now hazarded to thy grace. Cas. For Antony, I have no ears to his request. The queen Of audience nor desire shall fail ; so she From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend, Or take his life there : this if she perform She shall not sue unheard. So to them both. Eup. Fortune pursue thee ! Cas. Bring him through the bands. [Exit EUPHRONIUS. T> try thy eloquence, now 'tis time : despatch ; From Antony win Cleopatra: promise, [To THYR. And in our name, what she requires ; add more, From thine invention, offers : women are not In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure The ne'er-touch' d vestal : try thy cunning, Thyreus ; Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we Will answer as a law. Thyr. Caesar, I go. Cas. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw, And what thou think'st his very action speaks In every power that moves. Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt. SCENE XIII. — ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace. Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS. Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus? Eno. Think, and die. Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this ? Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges Frighted each other ? why should he follow ? The itch of his affection should not then Have nick'd his captainship ; at such a point, When half to half the world oppos'd, he being The mered question : 'twas a shame no less Than was his loss to course your flying flags And leave his navy gazing. Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace. Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS. Ant. Is that his answer ? Eup. Ay, my lord. Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so she Will yield us up, Eup. He says so. Ant. Let her know 't.— To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head. And he will fill thy wishes to the brim With principalities. Cleo. That head, my lord ? Ant. To him again : tell him he wears the rose Of youth upon him ; from which the world should note Something particular : his coins, ships, legions, May be a coward's ; whose ministers would prevail Under the service of a child as soon [fore As i' the command of Caesar : I dare him thereTo lay his gay comparisons apart, And answer me declin'd, sword against sword, Ourselves alone. I '11 write it : follow me. [Exeunt ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS. Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to the show Against a sworder. — I see men's judgments are A parcel of their fortunes ; and things outward Do draw the inward quality after them, To suffer all alike. That he should dream, Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will

SCENE XIII.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 913 Answer his emptiness ! — Caesar, thou hast subdu'd His judgment too. Enter an Attendant. Att. A messenger from G Cleo. What, no more ceremony? — See, my women ! — [nose Against the blown rose may they stop their That kneel'd unto the buds. — Admit him, sir. [Exit Attendant. Eno. [Aside.] Mine honesty and I begin to square. The loyalty well held to fools does make Our faith mere folly : — yet he that can endure To follow with allegiance a fallen lord Does conquer him that did his master conquer, And earn a place i' the story. Enter THYREUS. Cleo. Caesar's will ? Thyr. Hear it apart. Cleo. None but friends : say boldly. Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony. Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has ; Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master Will leap to be his friend : for us, you know Whose he is we are, and that is Csesar's. Thyr. So.— Thus then, thou most renown'd : Caesar entreats Not to consider in what case thou stand'st, Further than he is Csesar. Cleo. Go on : right royal. Thyr. He knows that you embrace not Antony As you did love, but as you fear'd him. Cleo. O! [he Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, Does pity, as constrained blemishes, Not as deserv'd. Cleo. He is a god, and knows What is most right : mine honour was not yielded, But conquer'd merely. Eno. [Aside.} To be sure of that, I will ask Antony. — Sir, sir, thou art so leaky That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit. Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar What you require of him ? for he partly begs To be desir'd to give. It much would please him That of his fortunes you should make a staff To lean upon : but it would warm his spirits To hear from me you had left Antony, And put yourself under his shroud, who is The universal landlord. Cleo. What 's your name ? Thyr. My name is Thyreus. Cleo. Most kind messenger, Say to great Caesar this :— in deputation I kiss his conquering hand : tell him lam prompt To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel: Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear The doom of Egypt. Thyr. }Tis your noblest course. Wisdom and fortune combating together, If that the former dare but what it can, No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay My duty on your hand. Cleo. Your Csesar's father Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in, Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, As it rain'd kisses. Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS. Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders ! — What art thou, fellow? Thyr. One that but performs The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest To have command obey'd. Eno. [Aside.] You will be whipp'd. Ant. Approach there ! — Ay, you kite ! — Now, gods and devils 1 [Ho I Authority melts from me : of late, when I cried, Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth And cry, Your will? Have you no ears? I am Antony yet. Enter Attendants. Take hence this Jack and whip him. Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp Than with an old one dying. Ant. Moon and stars ! Whip him. — Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them So saucy with the hand of she here, — what 's her name Since she was Cleopatra ? — Whip him, fellows, Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face, And whine aloud for mercy : take him hence. Thyr. Mark Antony,-— Ant. Tug him away : being whipp'd, Bring him again. — This Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him. — [Exeunt Attend, -with THYR. You were half blasted ere I knew you. — Ha ! Have I my pillow let unpress'd in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a gem of women, to be abus'd By one that looks on feeders ? Cleo. Good my lord, — Ant. You have been a boggier ever : — But when we in our viciousness grow hard, — O misery on 't ! — the wise gods seal our eyes ;

914 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. In our own filth drop our clear judgments ; make us Adore our errors ; laugh at 's, while we strut To our confusion. Cleo. O, is 't come to this ? Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Caesar's trencher ; nay, you were a fragment Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out : — for I am sure, [be, Though you can guess what temperance should You know not what it is. Cleo. . Wherefore is this ? Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards, And say, God quit you! be familiar with My playfellow, your hand ; this kingly seal And plighter of high hearts ! — O that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar The horned herd ! for I have savage cause ; And to proclaim it civilly were like A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank For being yare about him. Re-enter Attendants with THYREUS. Is he whipp'd ? I Att. Soundly, my lord. Ant. Cried he ? and begg'd he pardon ? I Att. He did ask favour. Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him : henceforth The white hand of a lady fever thee, Shake thou to look on't. — Get thee back to Caesar, Tell him thy entertainment : look thou say He makes me angry with him ; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am, Not what he knew I was : he makes me angry ; And at this time most easy 'tis to do 3t, When my good stars, that were my former guides, Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires Into the abysm of hell. If he mislike My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture, As he shall like, to quit me : urge it thou : Hence with thy stripes, be gone. [Exit THYREUS. Cleo. Have you done yet ? Ant. Alack, our terrene moon Is now eclips'd ; and it portends alone The fall of Antony ! Cleo. I must stay his time. Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes With one that ties his points ? Cleo. Not know me yet ? Ant. Cold-hearted toward me ? Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so, From my cold heart let heaven engender hail, And poison it in the source ; and the first stone Drop in my neck : as it determines, so Dissolve my life ! The next Caesarion smite ! Till, by degrees, the memory of my womb, Together with my brave Egyptians all, By the discandying of this pelleted storm, Lie graveless, — till the flies and gnats of Nile Have buried them for prey ! Ant. I am satisfied. Caesar sits down in Alexandria ; where I will oppose his fate. Our force by land Hath nobly held : our sever'd navy too Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like. [hear, lady? Where hast thou been, my heart ? — Dost thou If from the field I shall return once more To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood : I and my sword will earn our chronicle : There 's hope in 't yet Cleo. That 's my brave lord ! Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd, And fight maliciously : for when mine hours Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives Of me for jests ; but now I '11 set my teeth, And send to dark ness all that stop me. — Come, Let 's have one other gaudy night : call to me All my sad captains, fill our bowls ; once more Let's mock the midnight bell. Cleo. It is my birthday. I had thought tc have held it poor ; but since my lord Is Antony again I will be Cleopatra. Ant. We will yet do well. Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord. Ant. Do so ; we Ml speak to them : and tonight I '11 force The wine peep through their scars. — Come on, my queen ; There 's sap in 't yet. The next time I do fight I '11 make death love me ; for I will contend Even with his pestilent scythe. [Exeunt all but ENO. Eno. Now he '11 outstare the lightning. To be furious Is to be frighted out of fear ; and in that mood The dove will peck the estridge ; and I see still A diminution in our captain's brain Restores his heart : when valour preys on reason It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. [Exit.

He calls me boy; and chides as he had power To beat rae out of Egypt ; my messenger He hath whipp'd with rods ; dares me to personal combat, Caesar to Antony : — let the old ruffian know I have many other ways to die ; meantime Laugh at his challenge. Mec. Caesar must think, When one so great begins to rage, he 's hunted Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction : — never anger Made good guard for itself. Cces. Let our best heads Know that to-morrow the last of many battles We mean to fight. — Within our files there are, Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late, Enough to fetch him in. See it done : And feast the army ; we have store to do 't, And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony ! [Exeunt. SCENE II. — ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace. Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and others. Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius. Eno. No. Ant. Why should he not ? [fortune, Eno. He thinks, being twenty tiirr».s of better He is twenty men to one. Ant. To-morrow, soldier, By sea arid land I '11 fight : or I will live, Or bathe my dying honour in the blood Shall make it live again. Woo 't thou fight well? Eno. I '11 strike, and cry, Take all. Ant. Well said ; come on. — Call forth my household servants : let 's to-night Be bounteous at our meal. — Enter Servants. Give me thy hand, Thou hast been rightly honest ; — so hast thou ; — Thou, — and thou, — and thou ;- -you have serv'd me well, And kings have been your fellows. Cleo. _Aside to ENO.] What means this? Eno. [Aside to CLEO.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots Out of the mind. Ant. And thou art honest too. I wish I could be made so many men, And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service So good as you have done. Serv. The gods forbid t Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me tonight : Scant not my cups ; and make as much of me As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command. Cleo. [Aside to ENO.] What does he mean? Eno. [Aside to CLEO.] To make his followers weep. Ant. Tend me to-night ; May be it is the period of your auty : Haply you shall not see me more ; or if, A mangled shadow : perchance to-morrow You 'li serve another master. I look on you As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends, I turn you not away ; but, like a master Married to your good service, stay till death : Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, And the gods yield you for 't ! Eno. What mean you, sir, To give them this discomfort ? Look, they weep; And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd : for shame, Transform us not to women. Ant. Ho, ho, ho ! Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus ! Grace grow where those drops fall ! My hearty friends, You take me in too dolorous a sense ; [you For I spake to you for your comfort, — did desire To burn this night with torches : know, my hearts, I hope well of to-morrow ; and will lead you Where rather I '11 expect victorious life Than death and honour. Let 's to supper ; come, And drown consideration. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — ALEXANDRIA. Before the Palace. Enter two Soldiers to their guard. 1 Sold. Brother, good-night : to-morrow is the day. Nay, I '11 help too. What's this for? Ant. Ah, let be, let be ! thou art The armourer of my heart. False, false; this, this. Cleo. Sooth, la, I '11 help : thus it must be. Ant. Well, well ; We shall thrive now. — Seest thou, my good fellow? (Io put on thy defences. Eros. Briefly, sir. Cleo. Is not this buckled well ? Ant. Rarely, rarely: He that unbuckles this, till we do please To doff 't for our repose, shall hear a storm. — Thou fumblest, Eros ; and my queen 's a squire More tight at this than thou: despatch. — O love, [knew'st That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and The royal occupation ! thou shouldst see A workman in't. — Enter an Officer, armed. Good-morrow to thee ; welcome : Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge : To business that we love we rise betime, And go to 't with delight. Off. A thousand, sir, Early though it be, have on their riveted trim, And at the port expect you. [Shout. Flourish of Trumpets within. Enter other Officers and Soldiers. 2 Off. The morn is fair. — Good-morrow, general. All. Good-morrow, general. Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads : This morning, like the spirit of a youth That means to be of note, begins betimes. — So, so ; come, give me that : this way ; well said. — Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me : This is a soldier's kiss : rebukable, [Kisses her. And worthy shameful check it were, to stand On more mechanic compliment ; I '11 leave thee Now, like a man of steel. — You that will fight, Follow me close ; I '11 bring you to't. — Adieu. ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT iv. SCENE VIII.— Under the Walls of Alexandria. Alarum. Enter ANTONY marching; SCARUS and Forces. Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before, [morrow, And let the queen know of our gests. — ToBefore the sun shall see us, we '11 spill the blood That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all ; For doughty-handed are you, and have fought Not as you serv'd the cause, but as 't had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors. Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears [kiss Wash the congealment from your wounds, and The honour'd gashes whole. — Give me thy hand ; [To SCARUS. Enter CLEOPATRA, attended. To this great fairy I '11 commend thy acts, Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day o' the world, [all, Chain mine arm'd neck ; leap thou, attire and Through proof of harness to my heart, and there Ride on the pants triumphing. Cleo.ˆ Lord of lords! O infinite virtue, com'st thou smiling from The world's great snare uncaught? Ant. My nightingale, We have beat them to their beds. What, girl ! though grey [yet ha' we Do something mingle with our younger brown ; A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man ; Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand ; — Kiss it, my warrior : he hath fought to-day As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape. Cleo. I '11 give thee, friend, An armour all of gold ; it was a king's. Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled Like holy Phoebus' car. — Give me thy hand : Through Alexandria make a jolly march ; Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them: Had our great palace the capacity To camp this host, we all would sup together, And drink carouses to the next day's fate, Which promises royal peril. — Trumpeters, With brazen din blast you the city's ear ; Make mingle with our rattling tabourines j That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together, Applauding our approach. {.Exeunt. SCENE IX. — CAESAR'S Camp. Sentinels at their Post. 1 Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour, We must return to the court of guard: the night Is shiny ; and they say we shall embattle By the second hour i' the morn. 2 Sold. This last day was A shrewd one to 's. Enter ENOBARBUS. Eno. O, bear me witness, night. — 3 Sold. What man is this? 2 Sold. Stand close and list to him. Eno. Be witness to me, O

thou blessed moon, When men revolted shall upon record Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before chy face repent ! — 1 Sold. Enobarbus ! 3 Sold. Peace ! Hark further. Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy, The poisonous damp of night disponge upon me, That life, a very rebel to my will, Mayˆ hang no longer on me : throw my heart Against the flint and hardness of my fault ; Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder, And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony, Nobler than my revolt is infamous, Forgive me in thine own particular; But let the world rank me in register A master-leaver and a fugitive : O Antony ! O Antony ! [Dies. 2 Sold. Let 's speak To him. i Sold. Let 's hear him, for the things he speaks May concern Caesar. 3 Sold. Let 's do so. But he sleeps. 1 Sold. Swoons rather ; for so bad a prayer as his Was never yet fore sleep. 2 Sold. Go we to him. 3 Sold. Awake, sir, awake ; speak to us. 2 Sold. Hear you, sir? I Sold. The hand of death hath raught him. [Drums afar off.'} Hark ! the drums Do merrily wake the sleepers. Let us bear him To the court of guard ; he is of note : our hour Is fully out. 3 Sold. Come on, then ; He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 919 SCENE X. — Ground between the two Camps. Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces, marching. Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea ; We please them not by land. Scar. For both, my lord. Ant. I would they 'd fight i' the fire or i5 the air; We 'd fight there too. But this it is ; our foot Upon the hills adjoining to the city Shall stay with us : — order for sea is given ; They have put forth the haven : — forward now, Where their appointment we may best discover, And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt. SCENE XL— Another part of the Ground. Enter C.ESAR, with his Forces, marching. Cas. But being charg'd, we will be still by land, Which, as I trtke't, we shall ; for his best force Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales, And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt. SCENE XII. — Another part of the Ground. Enter ANTONY and SCARUS. Ant. Yet they're not join'd : where yond pine does stand I shall discover all : I '11 bring thee word Straight how 'tis like to go. [Exeunt. Scar. Swallows have built In Cleopatra's sails their nests : the augurers Say they know not, — they cannot tell; — look grimly, And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony Is valiant and dejected; and, by starts, His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear Of what he has and has not. [Alarum afar offy as at a sea-fight. Re-enter ANTONY. Ant. All is lost ; This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me : My fleet hath yielded to the foe ; and yonder They cast their caps up, and carouse together Like friends long lost. — Triple-turn'd whore ! 'tis thou Hast sold me to this novice ; and my heart Makes only wars on thee. — Bid them all fly; For when I am reveng'd upon my charm, I have done all. — Bid them all fly; begone. [Exit SCARUS. 0 sun, thy uprise shall I see no more : Fortune and Antony part here: even here Do we shake hands.-^All come to this ! — The hearts That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets On blossoming Caesar ; and this pine is bark'<3 That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am : O this false soul of Egypt ! this grave charm, Whose eye beck'd forth my wars and call'd them home; Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end, — • Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose, Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss. — What, Eros, Eros ! Enter CLEOPATRA. 7T\iAh, thou spell ! Avaunt ! Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love ? Ant. Vanish; or I shall give thee thy deserving, [thee, And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians: Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot Of all thy sex ; most monster-like, be shown For poor'st diminutives, for doits ; and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up With her prepared nails. [Exit CLEO.] 'Tis well thou 'rt gone, If it be well to live ; but better 'twere Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death Might have prevented many. — Eros, ho ! — The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me, Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage : Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon; And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club, [die: Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall Under this plot: she dies for 't. — Eros, ho ! [Exit. SCENE XIII. — ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Palace. Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN. Cleo. Help me, my women ! O, he is more mad [saly Than Telamon for his shield ; the boar of ThesWas never so emboss'd. Char. To the monument ! There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead. The soul and body rive not more in parting Than greatness going off. Cleo. To the monument ! — Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;

920 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT iv. Say that the last I spoke was Antony ', And word it, pr'ythee, piteously : hence, Mardian; And bring me how he takes my death. — To the monument ! [Exeunt. SCENE XIV. —ALEXANDRIA. Another Room. Enter ANTONY and EROS. Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me ? Eros. Ay, noble lord. Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish ; A vapour sometime like a bear or lion, A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock, A forked mountain, or blue promontory With trees upon 't, that nod unto the world, And mock our eyes with air : thou hast seen these signs j They are black vesper's pageants. Eros. Ay, my lord. Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought The rack dislimns ; and makes it indistinct, As water is in water. Eros. It does, my lord. [is Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain Even such a body : here I am Antony ; Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave. I made these wars for Egypt ; and the queen, — Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine ; Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto 't A million more now lost, — she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory Unto an enemy's triumph. — Nay, weep not, gentle Eros ; there is left us Ourselves to end ourselves. — Enter MARDIAN. O, thy vile lady ! She has robb'd me of my sword. Mar. No, Antony ; My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled With thine entirely. Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch ; peace ! She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death. Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once, [do And that she has discharg'd : what thou wouldst Is done unto thy hand : the last she spake Was, Antony I most noble Antony ! Then in the midst a tearing groan did break The name of Antony ; it was divided Between her heart and lips : she render'd life, Thy name so buried in her. Ant. Dead then? Mar. Dead. Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is done, [safe And we must sleep. — That thou depart'st hence Does pay thy labour richly ; go. [Exit MARDIAN. Off, pluck off;— The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides ! Heart, once be stronger than thy continent, Crack thy frail case ! — Apace, Eros, apace. — No more a soldier. — Bruised pieces, go ; You have been nobly borne. — From me awhile. — [Exit EROS. I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now All length is torture. — Since the torch is out, Lie down, and stray no further : now all labour Mars what it does ; yea, very force entangles Itself withstrength: seal then, and all is done. — • Eros ! — I come, my queen. — Eros ! — stay for me : [hand, Where souls do couch on flowers, we '11 hand in And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze: Dido and her ˆEneas shall want troops, And all the haunt be ours. — Come, Eros, Eros! Re-enter EROS. Eros. What would my lord ? Ant. Since Cleopatra died, I have liv'tj in such dishonour that the gods Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack The courage of a woman ; less noble mind Than she which by her death our Csesar tells, / am conqueror of myself. Thou art sworn, Eros, That, when the exigent should come, — which now Is come indeed — when I should see behind me The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, Thou then wouldst kill me : do 't ; the time is come : Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Csesiir thou defeat'st. Put colour in thy cheek. Eros. The gods withhold me ! Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts, Though enemy, lost aim, and could not ? Ant. Eros, Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd To penetrative shame ; whilst the wheel'd seat

SCENE XIV.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 921 Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded His baseness that ensu'd ? Eros. I would not see Jt. Ant. Come, then ; for with a wound I must be cur'd. [worn Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast Most useful for thy country. Eros. O, sir, pardon me ! Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then To do this when I bade thee ? Do it at once ; Or thy precedent services, are all But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come. Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance, Wherein the worship of the whole world lies. Ant. Lo thee ! [Turning from him. Eros. My sword is drawn. Ant. Then let it do at once The thing why thou hast drawn it. Eros. My dear master, My captain and my emperor, let me say, Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell. Ant. 'Tis said, man ; — and farewell, [now? Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike Ant. Now, Eros. Eros. Why, there then [/#//.? on his sword]: — thus do I escape the sorrow Of Antony's death. [Dies. Ant. Thrice nobler than myself ! Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what [Eros I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me A nobleness on record : but I will be A bridegroom in my death, and run into 't As to a lover's bed. Come, then ; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar : to do thus [Falling on his sword. I learn'd of thee. How ! not dead ? not dead ? — The guard, ho ! — O, despatch me ! Enter DERCETAS and Guard. 1 Guard. What's the noise ? Ant. I have done my work ill, friends : O, make an end Of what I have begun. 2 Guard. The stai is fallen. I Guard. And time is at his period. All. Alas, and woe 1 Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead. 1 Guard. Not I. 2 Guard. Nor I. 3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exeunt Guard. Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly. {ings, This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidShall enter me with him. Enter DIOMEDES. Dio. Where 's Antony ? Der. There, Diomed, there. Dio. Lives he ? Wilt thou not answer, man ? [Exit DERCETAS. Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me Sufficing strokes for death. Dio. Most absolute lord, My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee. Ant. When did she send thee ? Dio. Now, my lord. Ant. Where is she ? Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear Of what hath come to pass : for when she saw, — Which never shall be found, — you did suspect She had dispos'd with Caesar, and that your rage Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead ; But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent Me to proclaim the truth ; and I am come, I dread, too late. Ant. Too late, good Diomed.— Call my guard, I pr'ythee. Dio. What, ho ! the emperor's guard ! The guard, what, ho ! Come, your lord calls ! Enter some of the Guard. Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides; 'Tis the last service that I shall command you. i Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear All your true followers out. All. Most heavy day ! Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate [come To grace it with your sorrows : bid that welWhich comes to punish us, and we punish it, Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up : I have led you oft : carry me now, good friends, And have my thanks for all. [Exeunt, bearing ANTONY.

SCENE XV. — ALEXANDRIA. A Monument. Enter, above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS. Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence. Char. Be comforted, dear madam. Cleo. No, I will not : All strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise ; our size of sorrow,

922 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT iv. Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great As that which makes it. — Enter, below, DiOMEDES. How now ! is he dead ? Dio. His death 's upon him, but not dead. Look out o' the other side your monument ; His guard have brought him thither. Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard. Cleo. O sun, Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in ! — - darkling stand The varying shore o' the "world. — O Antony, Antony, Antony ! — Help, Charmian ; help, Iras, help, — Help, friends below ; — let 's draw him hither. Ant. Peace ! Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself. Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony ; but woe 'tis so ! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying ; only I here importune death awhile, until Of many thousand kisses the poor last I lay upon thy lips. Cleo. I dare not, dear, — Dear my lord, pardon, — I dare net, Lest I be taken : not the imperious show Of the full-fortun'd Caesar ever shall [have Be brooch'd with me : if knife, drugs, serpents Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe ; Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me. — But come, come, Antony, — [up ;— Help me, my women, — we must draw thee Assist, good friends. Ant. O, quick, or I am gone. Cleo. Here's sport indeed ! — How heavy weighs my lord ! Our strength is all gone into heaviness, That makes the weight: had I great Juno's power, The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishers were ever fools, — O, come, come, come; [They draw ANTONY up. And welcome, welcome ! die where thou hast liv'd : Quicken with kissing : had my lips that power, Thus would I wear them out. All. A heavy sight ! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying : Give me some wine, and let me speak a little. Cleo. No, let me speak ; and let me rail sc high [wheel. That the false housewife Fortune break he* Provok'd by my offence. Ant. One word, sweet queen ? Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety. — Cleo. They do not go together. Ant. Gentle, hear me : None about Caesar trust but Proculeius. Cleo. My resolution and my hands I '11 trust ; None about Caesar. Ant. The miserable change now at my end Lament nor sorrow at : but please your thoughts In feeding them with those my former fortunes Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' the world,

The noblest ; and do now not basely die, Not cowardly put off my helmet to My countryman, a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquished. Now my spirit is going : I can no more. Cleo. Noblest of men, woo 't die ? Hast thou no care of me ? shall I abide In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty ? — O, see, my women, [ANTONY dies. The crown o' the earth doth melt. — My lord ! — O, wither'd is the garland of the war, [girls The soldier's pole is fallen: young boys and Are level now with men : the odds is gone, And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon. [Faints. Char. O, quietness, lady ! Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign. Char. Lady,— Iras. Madam, — Char. O madam, madam, madam, — Iras. Royal Egypt, Empress, — Char. Peace, peace, Iras! [manded Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman, and cornBy such poor passion as the maid that milks And does the meanest chares. — It were for me To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods ; To tell them that this world did equal theirs Till they had stol'n our j e wel. All 's but naught : Patience is sottish, and impatience does Become a dog that 's mad : then is it sin To rush into the secret house of death Ere death dare come to us? — How do you, women? [Charmian! What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, My noble girls ! — Ah, women, women, look, Our lamp is spent, it 's out ! — Good sirs, take heart ; — [noble, We '11 bury him ; and then, what 's brave, what 's Let 's do it after the high Roman fashion,

SCENE XV.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 923 And make death proud to take us. Come, away: This case of that huge spirit now is cold : Ah, women, women !— Come ; we have no friend But resolution, and the briefest end. [Exetmt; those above bearing off ANTONY'S body. ACT V. SCENE I. — CESAR'S Camp before Alexandria. Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MECˆNAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and others. Cas. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield ; Being so frustrate, tell him that he mocks The pauses that he makes. DoL Csesar, I shall. [Exit. Enter DERCETAS with the sword of ANTONY. Cas. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that dar'st Appear thus to us? Der. I am call'd Dercetas ; Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd : whilst he stood up and spoke, He was my master ; and I wore my life To spend upon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him I '11 be to Caesar ; if thou pleasest not, I yield thee up my life. Cas. What is 't thou say'st ? Der. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead. Cas. The breaking of so great a thing should make A greater crack : the round world Should have shook lions into civil streets, And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony Is not a single doom ; in the name lay A moiety of the world. Der. He is dead, Caesar ; Not by a public minister of justice, Nor by a hired knife ; but that self hand Which writ his honour in the acts it did Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it, Splitted the heart.— This is his sword ; I robb'd his wound of it ; behold it stain'd With his most noble blood. Cas. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings To wash the eyes of kings. Agr. And strange it is That nature must compel us to lament Our most persisted deeds. Mec. His taints and honours Weigh'd equal with him. Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity : but you, gods, will give us Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd. Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him, He needs must see himself. Cas. O Antony ! I have follow'd thee to this. — But we do lance Diseases in our bodies : I must perforce Have shown to thee such a declining day Or look on thine ; we could not stall together In the whole world : but yet let me lament, With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts, That thou, my brother, my competitor In top of all design, my mate in empire, Friend and companion in the front of war, The arm of mine own body, and the heart Where mine his thoughts did kindle, — that our stars, Unreconciliable, should divide Our equalness to this. — Hear me, good friends, — But I will tell you at some meeter season : Enter a Messenger. The business of this man looks out of him ; We '11 hear him what he says. — Whence are you ? Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress, Confin'd in all she has, her monument, Of thy intents desires instruction, That she preparedly may frame herself To the way she 's forc'd to. Cas. Bid her have good heart : She soon shall know of us, by some of ours, How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her ; for Caesar cannot learn To be ungentle. Mess. So the gods preserve thee ! [Exit. Cas. Come hither, Proculeius. Go, and say We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts The quality of her passion shall require Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke She do defeat us; for her life in Rome Would be eternal in our triumph : go, And with your speediest bring us what she says, And how you find of her. Pro. Gesar, I shall. [Exit. Cas. Gallus, go you along. — [Exit GALLUS.] Where 's Dolabella, To second Proculeius? Agr. and Mec. Dolabella! Cas. Let him alone, for I remember now How he 's employ'd : he shall in time be ready. Go with me to my tent ; where you shall see How hardly I was drawn into this war ; How calm and gentle I proceeded still

924 ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. CACT v. In all my writings: go with me, and see What I can show in this. _Exeunt. SCENE II. — ALEXANDRIA. A Room in the Monument. Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS. Cleo. My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar ; Not being Fortune, he 's but Fortune's knave, A minister of her will : and it is great To do that thing that ends all other deeds; Which shackles accidents and bolts up change ; Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug, The beggar's nurse and Caesar's. Enter i to the gates of the Monument, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers. Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt; And bids thee study on what fair demands Thou mean'st to have him grant thee. Cleo. What 's thy name ? Pro. My name is Proculeius. Cleo. Antony Did tell me of you, bade me trust you ; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd, That have no use for trusting. If your master Would haveaqueen his beggar, you musttellhim That majesty, to keep decorum, must No less beg than a kingdom : if he please To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son, He gives me so much of mine own as I Will kneel to him with thanks. Pro. Be of good cheer ; You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing: Make your full reference freely to my lord, Who is so full of grace that it flows over On all that need : let me report to him Your sweet dependency; and you shall find A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness Where he for grace is kneel'd to. Cleo. Pray you, tell him I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him The greatness he has got. I hourly learn A doctrine of obedience ; and would gladly Look him i' the face. Pro. This I '11 report, dear lady. Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied Of him that caus'd it. Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd : [Here PROCULEIUS and two of the Guard ascend the Monument by a ladder placed against a window, and, havingdescended, come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates. Guard her till Caesar come. [To PRO. and the Guard. Exit. Iras. Royal queen ! Char. O Cleopatra ! thou art taken, queen ! Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands. [Drawing- a dagger. Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold : [Seizes and disarms her. Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray' d. Cleo. What, of death too, That rids our dogs of languish? Pro. Cleopatra, Do not abuse my master's bounty by The undoing of yourself : let the world see His nobleness well acted, which your death Will never let come forth. Cleo. Where art thou, death ? Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen Worth many babes and beggars ! Pro. O, temperance, lady! Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I '11 not drink, sir; If idle talk will once be accessary, I '11 not sleep neither : this mortal house I '11 ruin, Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court ; Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up, And show me to the shouting varletry Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt Be gentle grave unto me ! rather on Nilus' mud Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water-flies Blow me inco abhorring ! rather make My country's high pyramides my gibbet, And hang me up in chains ! Pro. You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar. Enter DOLABELLA. , Dol. Proculeius, What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows, And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen, I '11 take her to my guard. Pro. So, Dolabella, It shall content me best: be gentle to her. — To Caesar I will speak what you shall please, [To CLEOPATRA. If you '11 employ me to him. Cleo. Say I would die. [Exeunt PROCULEIUS and Soldiers. Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me? Cleo. I cannot tell. Dol. Assuredly you know me. Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

SCENE II.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 925 Vou laugh when boys or women tell their dreams ; Is't not your trick? Dol. I understand not, madam. Cleo. I dream'd there was an emperor Antony : — O, such another sleep, that I might see But such another man ! Dol. If it might please you, — Cko. His face was as the heavens ; and therein stuck A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted The little O, the earth. Dol. Most sovereign creature, — Cko. His legs bestrid the ocean : his rear'd arm Crested the world : his voice was propertied As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends ; But when he meant to quail and shake the orb, He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty, There was no winter in 't ; an autumn 'twas That grew the more by reaping : his delights Were dolphin-like ; they show'd his back above The element they liv'd in : in his livery Walk'd crowns and crownets ; realms and islands were As plates dropp'd from his pocket. Dol. Cleopatra, — Cleo. Think you there was or might be such a man As this I dream'd of? Dol. Gentle madam, no. Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. But if there be, or ever were, one such, It 's past the size of dreaming : nature wants stuff To vie strange forms with fancy : yet to imagine An Antony were nature's peace 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite. Dol. Hear me, good madam. Your loss is, as yourself, great ; and you bear it As answering to the weight : would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel, By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites My very heart at root. Cleo. I thank you, sir. Know you what Caesar means to do with me ? Dol. I am loth to tell you what I would you knew. Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir, — Dol. Though he be honourable, — Cleo. He '11 lead me, then, in triumph ? Dol. Madam, he will ; I know it. [Flourish within* Within. Make way there, — Caesar ! Enter OESAR, CALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECˆENAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants. Cas. Which is the Queen of Egypt ? Dol. It is the emperor, madam. [CLEOPATRA kneels. C

Even make me wild : O slave, of no more trust Than love that 's hir'd ! — What, goest thou back ? thou shalt Go back, I warrant thee ; but I '11 catch thine eyes [dog ! Though they had wings ; slave, soulless villain, O rarely base ! Cces. Good queen, let us entreat you. Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this, — That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, Doing the honour of thy lordliness To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy ! Say, good Caesar, That I some lady trifles have reserv'd, Immoment toys, things of such dignity As we greet modern friends withal ; and say, Some nobler token I have kept apart For Livia and Octavia, to induce Their mediation ; must I be unfolded With one that I have bred ? The gods ! It smites me Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence ; [To SELEUCUS. Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits Through the ashes of my chance. — Wert thou a man, Thou wouldst have mercy upon me. Cas. Forbear, Seleucus, [Exit SELEUCUS. Cleo. Be it known that we, the greatest, are misthought For things that others do ; and when we fall We answer others' merits in our name. And therefore to be pitied. Cces. Cleopatra, Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd, Put we i' the roll of conquest : still be 't yours, Bestow it at your pleasure ; and believe Caesar 's no merchant, to iriake prize with you Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer5 d ; Make not your thoughts your prisons : no, dear queen ; For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed and sleep : Our care and pity is so much upon you That we remain your friend ; and so, adieu. Cleo. My master and my lord ! Cces. Not so. Adieu. [Flourish. Exeunt CˆSAR and his Train. Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not Be noble to myself : but hark thee, Charmian ! [Whispers CHARMIAN. Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done, And we are for the dark. Cleo. Hie thee again : I have spoke already, and it is provided ; Go put it to the haste. Char. Madam, I will. Re-enter DOLABELLA. t DoL Where is the queen? Char. Behold, sir. [Exit. Cleo. Dolabella ! Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command, Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this : Caesar through Syria Intends his journey ; and within three days You with your children will he send before : Make your best use of this : I have perform'd Your pleasure and my promise. Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor. Dol. I your servant. Adieu, good queen ; I must attend on Csesar. Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit DOLABELLA. Now, Iras, what think' st thou ? Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown In Rome as well as I : mechanic slaves, With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view ; in their thick breaths, Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded, And forc'd to drink their vapour. Iras. The gods forbid ! Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras : — saucy lictors [rhymers Will catch at us like strumpets; and scald Ballad us out o' tune : the quick comedians Extemporally will stage us, and present Our Alexandrian revels ; Antony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness I' the posture of a whore. Iras. O the good gods ! Cleo. Nay, that's certain. Iras. I '11 never see 't ; for I am sure my nails Are stronger than mine eyes. Cleo. ' Why, that 's the way To fool their preparation and to conquer Their most absurd intents. Enter CHARMIAN. Now, Charmian ! — Show me, my women, like a queen. — Go fetch My best attires ; — I am again for Cydnus, To meet Mark Antony : — sirrah, Iras, go.— Now, noble Charmian, we '11 despatch indeed :

SCENE II.] ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 927 And when thou hast done this chare, I '11 give thee leave [all. To play till doomsday. — Bring our crown and Wherefore 's this noise ? [Exit IRAS. A noise within. Enter one of the Guard. Guard. Here is a rural fellow That will not be denied your highness' presence : He brings you figs. Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guard. What poor an instrument May do a noble deed ! he brings me liberty. My resolution 's plac'd, and I have nothing Of woman in me : now from head to foot I am marble-constant ; now the fleeting moon No planet is of mine. Re-enter Guard, with Clown bringing a basket. Guard. This is the man. Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard. Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there That kills and pains not ? Clown. Truly, I have him : but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal ; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover. [on 't ? Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday : a very honest woman, but something given to lie ; as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty : how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt, — truly she makes a very good report o' the worm ; but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do : but this is most fallible, the worm 's an odd worm. Cleo. Get thee hence ; farewell. Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm. [Sets down the basket. Cleo. Farewell. Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind. Cleo. Ay, ay ; farewell. Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people ; for indeed there is no goodness in the worm. Cleo. Take thou no care ; it shall be heeded. Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding. Cleo. Will it eat me? Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make the devils mar five. Cleo. Well, get thee gone ; farewell. Clown. Yes, forsooth : I wish you joy o' the worm. [Exit. Re-enter IRAS, with a r?bet crown, ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [ACT v. And golden Phoebus never be beheld Of eyes again so royal ! Your crown 's awry ; I '11 mend it and then play. Enter the Guard, rushing in. I Guard. Where is the queen? Char. Speak softly, wake her not. I Guard. Caesar hath sent, — Char. Too slow a messenger. [Applies an asp. O, come apace, despatch : I partly feel thee. 1 Guard. Approach, ho ! all 's not well : Caesar 's beguil'd. [call him. 2 Guard. There 's Dolabella sent from Caesar ; 1 Guard. What work is here ! — Charmian, is this well done? [cess Char. It is well done, and fitting for a prinDescended of so many royal kings. Ah, soldier ! {Dies. Re-enter DOLABELLA. Dol. How goes it here? 2 Guard. All dead. Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this : thyself art coming To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou So sought'st to hinder. Within. A way there, a way for Caesar ! Re-enter CAESAR and his Train. Dol. O, sir, you are too sure an augurer ; That you did fear is done. Cces. Bravest at the last, She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal, Took her own way. — The manner of their deaths? I do not see them bleed. Dol. ,:H, Who was last with them? I Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs. This was his basket. Cas. Poison'd then. I Guard. O Caesar, This Charmian hVd but now ; she stood and spake : I found her trimming up the diadem On her dead mistress ; tremblingly she stood, And on the sudden dropp'd. Gas. O noble weakness ! — • If they had swallow'd poison 'twould appear By external swelling : but she looks like sleep, — As she would catch another Antony In her strong toil of grace. Dol. Here on her breast .There is a vent of blood, and something blown : The like is on her arm. I Guard. This is an aspic's trail : and these fig-leaves Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves Upon the caves of Nile. Cess. Most probable That so she died ; for her physician tells me She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite Of easy ways to die. — Take up her bed, And bear her women from the monument : — She shall be buried by her Antony: No grave upon the earth shall clip in it A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them ; and their story is No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall In solemn show attend this funeral; And then to Rome. — Come, Dolabella, see High order in this great solemnity. \Exeunt. jo'rt ei tf TO!

His daughter, and the heir of 's kingdom, whom He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, — a widow That late he married, — hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded ; Her husband banish'd ; she imprison'd : all Is outward sorrow ; though I think the king Be touch'd at very heart. 2 Gent. None but the king ? 1 Gent. I do not think So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he. 2 Gent. You speak him far. 1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;

Crush him together, rather than unfold His measure duly. 2 Gent. What 's his name and birth? I Gent. I cannot delve him to the root : his father Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour, Against the Romans, with Cassibelan, But had his titles by Tenantius, whom He serv'd with glory and admir'd success, — So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus: And had, besides this gentleman in question, Two other sons, who, in the wars o' the time, Died with their swords in hand ; for which their father, — Then old and fond of issue, — took such sorrow That he quit being ; and his gentle lady, Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd As he was born. Pis. My lord your son drew on my master. Queen. Ha ! No harm, I trust, is done ! Pis. There might have been, But that my master rather play'd than fought, And had no help of anger : they were parted By gentlemen at hand. Queen. I am very glad on 't. Imo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. — Have I hurt him? 2 Lord. [Aside.} No, faith ; not so much as his patience. 1 Lord. Hurt him ! His body 's a passable carcass if he be not hurt : it is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt. 2 Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the back side the town. Clo. The villain would not stand me. 2 Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. 1 Lord. Stand you ! You have land enough of your own : but he added to your having ; gave you some ground. 2 Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans. — Puppies I Clo. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together : she 's a good jign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit. 2 Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done ! 2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so ; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. Cio. You Ml go with us ? 1 Lord. I '11 attend your lordship. Clo. Nay, come, let 's go together. 2 Lord. SCENE III. — BRITAIN. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace. Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO. Into. Senseless linen I happier therein than I!— And that was all ? Pis. No, madam ; for so long As he could make me with this eye or ear Distinguish him from others, he did keep The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's mind Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on, How swift his ship. Imo. Thou shouldst have made him As little as a crow, or less, ere left To after-eye him. Pis. Madam, so I did. Into. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but To look upon him, till the diminution Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle ; Nay, follow'd him till he had melted from The smallness of a gnat to air ; and then Have turned mine eye and wept.— But, good Pisanio, When shall we hear from him ? Pis. Be assur'd, madam, With his next vantage. Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say : ere I could tell him I low I would think on him, at certain hours, Such thoughts and such ; or I could make him swear The shes of Italy should not betray [him Mine interest and his honour ; or have charg'd At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight, To encounter me with orisons, for then I am in heaven for him ; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father, And like the tyrannous breathing of the north Shakes all our buds from growing. Enter a Lady. Lady. The queen, madam. Desires your highness' company. Imo. Those things I bid ycu do, get them despatched.— I will attend the queen. Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt. SCENE IV. — ROME. An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House. Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard. loch. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration ; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items. Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within. French. I have seen him in France : we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he. loch. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, — wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, — words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter. French. And then his banishment, — loch. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

SCENE IV.] CYMBELINE. 933 Phi. His father and I were soldiers together ; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. — Here comes the Briton : let him be so entertained amongst you as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality. Enter POSTHUMUS. I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman ; whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine : how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing. French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans. Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. French. Sir, you o'errate my poor kindness : I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature. Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others* experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, — if I offend not to say it is mended, — my quarrel was not altogether slight. French Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords ; and by such two that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both. lack. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference? French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching, — and upon warrant of bloody affirmation, — his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptible than any the rarest of our ladies in France. lach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out. Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind. lach. You must not so far prefer her fore ours of Italy. Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate ner nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend. lach. As fair and as good, — a kind of handin-hand comparison, — had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Brittany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. Post. I praised her as I rated her : so do I my stone. lach. What do you esteem it at? Post. More than the world enjoys. lach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she 's outprized by a trifle. Post. You are mistaken : the one may be sold or given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase or merit for the gift : the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods. lach. Which the gods have given you? Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep. lach. You may wear her in title yours : but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual ; a cunning thief or a that- way-accomplished courtier would hazard the winning both of first and last. Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves ; notwithstanding I fear not my ring. Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen. Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me ; we are familiar at first. lach. With five times so much conversation I should gee ground of your fair mistress ; make her go back even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend. Post. No, no. lach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring ; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something : but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world. Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion ; and I doubt not you sustain what you 're worthy of by your attempt. lach. What's that? Post. A repulse : though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more, — a punishment too. Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this : it came in too suddenly ; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

 loch. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke ! Post. What lady would you choose to assail? loch. Yours ; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved. Post. I will wage against your gold gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger ; 'tis part of it. loch. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting : but I see you have some religion in you, that you fear. Post. This is but a custom in your tongue ; you bear a graver purpose, I hope. lack. I am the master of my speeches ; and would undergo what 's spoken, I swear. Post. Will you? — I shall but lend my diamond till your return : — let there be covenants drawn between us: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match : here 's my ring. Phi. I will have it no lay. lack. By the gods, it is one. — If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours ; so is your diamond too : if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours ; — provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment. Post. I embrace these conditions ; let us have articles betwixt us. — Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate : if she remain unseduced, — you not making it appear otherwise, — for your ill opinion and the assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword. loch. Your hand,— a covenant : we will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve : I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded. Post. Agreed. {Exeunt POST, and IACH. French. Will this hold, think you? Phi. Signior lachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. {Exeunt. SCENE V. — BRITAIN. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace. Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS. Queen. Whiles yet the dew 's on ground gather those flowers ; Make haste: who has the note of them? I Lady. I, madam. Queen. Despatch. — {Exeunt Ladies. Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs? Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay : here they are , madam : {Presenting a small box. But I beseech your grace, without offence, — My conscience bids me ask, — wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds, Which are the movers of a languishing death ; But, though slow, deadly? Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,— Unless thou think'st me devilish, — is 't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, — but none human, — To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act ; and by them gather Their several virtues and effects. Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious. Queen. O, content thee. — Here comes a flattering rascal ; upon him {Aside. Will I first work : he 's for his master, And enemy to my son. — Enter PISANIO. How now, Pisanio ! — Doctor, your service for this time is ended ; Take your own way. Cor. {Aside.] I do suspect you, madam ; But you shall do no harm. Queen. Hark thee, a word. {To PISANIO.

SCENE V.] CYMBELINE. 935 Cor. [Aside.} I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange lingering poisons : I do know her spirit And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has Will stupify and dull the sense awhile; [dogs, Which first perchance she '11 prove on cats and Then afterward up higher : but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect ; and I the truer So to be false with her. Queen. No further service, doctor, Until I send for thee. Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit. Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time She will not quench, and let instructions enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work : When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, I '11 tell thee on the instant thou art then As great as is thy master ; greater, — for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gasp : return he cannot, nor Continue where he is : to shift his being Is to exchange one misery with another ; And every day that comes comes to decay A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect, To be depender on a thing that leans, — Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends [The QUEEN drops the box: PISANIO takes it up. So much as but to prop him ? — Thou tak'st up Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour : It is a thing I made, which hath the king Five times redeem'd from death : I do not know What is more cordial : — nay, I pr'ythee, take it ; It is an earnest of a further good That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how The case stands with her ; do 't as from thyself. Think what a chance thou changest on ; but think Thou hast thy mistress still, — to boot, my son, Who shall take notice of thee : I '11 move the king To any shape of thy preferment, such As thou 'It desire ; and then myself, I chiefly, That set thee on to this desert, am bound To load thy merit richly. Call my women : Think on my words. [Exit PISANIO. A sly and constant knave ; Not to be shak'd : the agent for his master ; And the remembrancer of her to hold The hand-fast to her lord.— I have given him that Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her Of liegers for her sweet ; and which she after, Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd To taste of too. Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies. So, so ; — well done, well done : The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,

Bear to my closet. — Fare thee well, Pisanio ; Think on my words. [Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies. Pis. And shall do : But when to my good lord I prove untrue I '11 choke myself : there 's all I '11 do for you. [Exit. SCENE VI. — BRITAIN. Another Room in the Palace. Enter IMOGEN. Into. A father cruel and a step-dame false ; A foolish suitor to a wedded lady, [band ! That hath her husband banish'd ; — O, that husMy supreme crown of grief ! and those repeated Vexations of it ! Had I been thief-stolen, As my two brothers, happy I but most miserable Is the desire that 's glorious : bless'd be those, How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills, Which seasons comfort.— Who may this be? Fie! Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO. Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome Comes from my lord with letters. loch. Change you, madam ? The worthy Leonatus is in safety, And greets your highness dearly. [Presents a letter. Imo. Thanks, good sir : Yon 're kindly welcome. [most rich ! lach. [Aside.'} All of her that is out of door If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare, She is alone the Arabian bird ; and I Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend ! Arm me, audacity, from head to foot ! Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight ; Rather directly fly. Imo. [Reads.} He is one of the noblest iwtet to whose kindnesses 1 am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly , as you value your truest LEONATUS. So far I read aloud : But even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—

936 CYMBELINE. [ACT I. You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I Have words to bid you ; and shall find it so In all that I can do. lack. Thanks, fairest lady.— What, are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes To see this vaulted arch, and the rich cope Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones Upon th' unnumber'd beach ? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul ? Imo. What makes your admiration ? loch. It cannot be i' the eye ; for apes and monkeys, 'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way and [ment ; Contemn with mows the other: nor i' the judgFor idiots in this case of favour would Be wisely definite : nor i' the appetite ; Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd, Should make desire vomit emptiness, Not so allur'd to feed. Imo. What is the matter, trow ? loch. The cloyed will, — That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, [first That tub both fill'd and running, — ravening The lamb, longs after for the garbage. Imo. What, dear sir, Thus raps you ? Are you well ? lack. Thanks, madam; well. — Beseech you, sir, desire [To PISANIO. My man's abode where I did leave him : he Is strange and peevish. Pis. I was going, sir, To give him welcome. \Exit. Imo. Continues well my lord ? His health, beseech you ? loch. Well, madam. Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth ? I hope he is. lack. Exceeding pleasant ; none a stranger there So merry and so gamesome : he is call'd The Briton reveller. Imo. When he was here He did incline to sadness ; and ofttimes Not knowing why. lack. I never saw him sad. There is a Frenchman his companion, one An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves A Gallian girl at home : he furnaces [ton, — The thick sighs from him; whiles the jolly BriYour lord, I mean, — laughs from 's free lungs, cries, O, [knows Can my sides hold, to think that man, — who By history, report, or his own proof, What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose But must be,~-will his free hours languish for Assured bondage? Imo. Will my lord say so? lack. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood with laughter. It is a recreation to be by [heavens know, And hear him mock the Frenchman. But, Some men are much to blame. Imo. Not he, I hope. lack. Not he: but yet heaven's bounty towards him might Be us'd more thankfully. In himself 'tis much ; In you, — which I count his beyond all talents, — Whilst I am bound to wonder I am bound To pity too. Imo. What do you pity, sir? lack. Two creatures heartily. Imo. Am I one, sir? You look on me : what wreck discern you in me Deserves your pity? lack. ' Lamentable! What, To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace I' the dungeon by a snuff? Imo. I pray you, sir, Deliver with more openness your answers To my demands. Why do you pity me? lack. That others do, I was about to say, enjoy your But It is an office of the gods to venge it, Not mine to speak on 't. Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me : pray you, — Since doubting things go ill often hurts more Than to be sure they do ; for certainties Either are past remedies, or, tunely knowing, The remedy then born,— discover to me What both you spur and stop. lack. Had I this cheek To bathe my lips upon ; this hand, whose touch, Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye, Fixingit only here ; — should I, — damn'd then, — Slaver with lips as common as the stairs That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood, — falsehood as With labour, — then bo-peeping in an eye Base and unlustrous as the smoky light That 's fed with stinking tallow, — it were fit That all the plagues of hell should at one time Encounter such revolt. Imo. My lord, I fear, Has forgot Britain. lack. And himself. Not I, Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce The beggary of his change ; but 'tis your graces

SCENE VI.] CYMBELINE. 937 That from my mutest conscience to my tongue Charms this report out. Imo. Let me hear no more. loch. O dearest soul ! your cause doth strike my heart With pity that doth make me sick ! A lady So fair, and fasten'd to an empery, Would make the great'st king double, — to be partner'd With tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures, That play with ail infirmities for gold [stuff Which rottenness can lend nature ! such boil'd As well might poison poison ! Be reveng'd ; Or she that bore you was no queen, and you Recoil from your great stock. Imo. Reveng'd ! How should I be reveng'd? If thisˆbe true, — As I have such a heart that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse, — if it be true, How should I be reveng'd? lack. Should he make me Live like Diana's priest betwixt cold sheets, Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps, In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it. I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure ; More noble than that runagate to your bed ; And will continue fast to your affection, Still close as sure. Imo. What ho, Pisanio ! lack. Let me my service tender on your lips. Imo. Away ! — I do condemn mine ears that have So long attended thee. — If thou wert honourable Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not For such an end thou seek'st, — as base as strange. Thou wrong'st a gentleman who is as far From thy report as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains Thee and the devil alike. — What, ho, Pisanio! — The king my father shall be made acquainted Of thy assault : if he shall think it fit A saucy stranger in his court to mart As in a Romish stew, and to expound His beastly mind to us, — he hath a court He little cares for, and a daughter who He not respects at all. — What, ho, Pisanio! — lack. O happy Leonatus ! I may say : The credit that thy lady hath of thee [ness Deserves thy trust ; and thy most perfect goodHer assur'd credit !— Blessed live you long ! A lady to the worthiest sir that ever Country call'd his ! and you his mistress, only For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon. I have spoke this to know if your affiance Were deeply rooted ; and shall make your lord That which he is new o'er: and he is one The truest manner'd ; such a holy witch That he enchants societies unto him ; Half all men's hearts are his. Imo. You make amends. lack. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god:

He hath a kind of honour sets him off More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry, Most mighty princess, that I have adventur d To try your taking of a false report ; which hath Honoured with confirmation your great judgment In the election of a sir so rare, [him Which you know cannot err: the love I bear Made me to fan you thus ; but the gods made you, [don. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord, — [sums The best feather of our wing, — have mingled To buy a present for the emperor ; Which I, the factor for the rest, have done In France : 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels Of rich and exquisite form ; their values great ; And I am something curious, being strange To have them in safe stowage : may it please you To take them in protection? Imo. Willingly ; And pawn mine honour for their safety : since My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them In my bedchamber. lack. They are in a trunk, Attended by my men : I will make bold To send them to you only for this night ; I must aboard to-morrow. Imo. O, no, no. [word loch. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my By length'ning my return. From Gallia I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise To see your grace. Imo. I thank you for your pains : But not away to-morrow ! loch. O, I must, madam : Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night: I have outstood my time ; which is material To the tender of our present

938 CYMBELINE. [ACT n. Into. I will write. Send your trunk to me ; it shall safe be kept And truly yielded you. You 're very welcome. {Exeunt. ACT ii. SCENE I. — BRITAIN. Court before CYMBELINE'S Palace. Enter CLOTEN and two Lords. Clo. Was there ever man had such luck ! when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away ! I had a hundred pound on 't : and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing ; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure. 1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl. 2 Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out. Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha? 2 Lord. No, my lord ; [aside] nor crop the ears of them. Clo. Whoreson dog! — I give him satisfaction? Would he had been one of my rank ! 2 Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool. Clo. I am not vexed more at anything in the earth, — a pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother : every jackslave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match. 2 Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too ; and you crow, cock, with your comb on. Clo. Sayest thou? 1 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to Clo. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors. 2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only. Clo. Why, so I say. 1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that 's come to court to-night? Clo. A stranger, and I not know on 't ! 2 Lord. [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. v\i 1 I Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends. Clo. Leonatus ! a banished rascal ; and he 's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger? I Lord. One of your lordship's pages. Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in 't. 1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord. Clo. Not easily, I think. 2 Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate. Clo. Come, I '11 go see this Italian : what I have lost to-day at bowls I '11 win to-night of him. Come, go. 2 Lord. I '11 attend your lordship. [Exeunt CLOTEN and first Lord. That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass ! a woman that Bears all down with her brain ; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty, for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st, — Betwixt a father by thy stepdame govern'd: A mother hourly coining plots ; a wooer More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he 'd make ! The heavens hold firm The walls of thy dear honour ; keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind ; that thou mayst stand To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land ! [Exit. SCENE II. — BRITAIN. IMOGEN'S Bedchamber ; in one part of it a Trunk. IMOGEN in bed reading; a Lady attending. Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen? Lady. Please you, madam. Imo. What hour is it? Lady. Almost midnight, madam. Imo. I have read three hours, then: mine eyes are weak : Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed: Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock, I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly. [Exit Lady. To your protection I commend me, gods ! From fairies and the tempters of the night Guard me, beseech ye ! [Sleeps. IACHIMO comes from the trunk. lack. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded. — Cytherea, How bravely thou becom'st thy bed ! fresh lily I And whiter than the sheets ! That I might touch \ But kiss ; one kiss ! — Rubies unparagon'd,

SCENE III.] CYMBELINE. 939 How dearly they do 't I— 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame o' the taper Bows toward her, and would underpeepher lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied Under these windows, white and azure, lac'd With blue of heaven's own tinct. — But my design To note the chamber : — I will write all down : — Such and such pictures; — there the window:— such The adornment of her bed ; — the arras, figures, Why, such and such ; — and the contents o' the story, — Ah, but some natural notes about her body Above ten thousand meaner movables Would testify, to enrich mine inventory. O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her! And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying ! — Come off, come off; [Taking off her bracelet. As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard ! — 'Tis mine ; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within, To the madding of her lord. On her left breast A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops I' the bottom of a cowslip. Here 's a voucher Stronger than ever law could make : this secret Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and ta'en [what end? The treasure of her honour. No more. To Why should I write this down, that 's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? — She hath been reading late The tale of Tereus ; here the leaf's turnM down Where Philomel gave up. — I have enough: To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning May bare the raven's eye ! I lodge in fear ; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. [Clock strikes. One, two, three, — Time, time ! [Goes into the trunk. Scene closes. SCENE III. — BRITAIN. An Ante-chamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartment. Enter CLOTEN and Lords. I Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace. Clo. It would make any man cold to lose. I Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win. Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It 's almost morning, is 't not? 1 Lord. Day, my lord. Clo. I would this music would come : I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate. Enter Musicians. Come on ; tune : if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I '11 never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing ; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it, — and then let her consider. SONG. Hark, hark I the lark at heaven's gate sings, And Phoebus 'gins arise, His steeds to water at those springs On chalic'd flowers that lies ; And winking Mary-buds begin To ope their golden eyes ; With everything that pretty is : My lady sweet, arise ; Arise, arise ! So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better : if it do not, it is a vice in her ears ; which horse-hairs and calves' guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. [Exeunt Musicians. 2 Lord. Here comes the king. Clo. I am glad I was up so late ; for that 's the reason I was up so early : he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly. — Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN. Good-morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother. [daughter? Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern Will she not forth? Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice. Cym. The exile of her minion is too new ; She hath not yet forgot him : some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she 's yours. Queen. You are most bound to the king, Who lets go by no vantages that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself To orderly solicits, and be friended With aptness of the season ; make denials Increase your services ; so seem as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her ; that you in all obey her, Save when command to your dismission tends, And therein you are senseless. Clo. Senseless ! not so.

940 CYMBELINE. [ACT ii. Enter a Messenger. Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome; The one is Caius Lucius. Cynt. A worthy fellow. Albeit he comes on angry purpose now ; But that 's no fault of his : we must receive him According to the honour of his sender ; [us, And towards himself, his goodness forespent on We must extend our notice. — Our dear son, When you have given good-morning to your mistress, Attend the queen and us; we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman. — Come, our queen. [Exeunt CYM. , QUEEN, Lords, and Mess. Clo. If she be up, I '11 speak with her ; if not, Let her lie still and dream. — By your leave, ho ! — {.Knocks. I know her women are about her: what If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance ; oft it doth ; yea, and makes Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer; and 'tis gold [thief; Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the Nay, sometimes hangs both thief and true man : what Can it not do and undo? I will make One of her women lawyer to me ; for I yet not understand the case myself. By your leave. [Knocks. Enter a Lady. Lady. Who's there that knocks? Clo. A gentleman. Lady. No more? Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son. Lady. That 's more Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours, Can justly boast of. What 's your lordship's pleasure? Clo. Your lady's person : is she ready? Lady. Ay, To keep her chamber. Clo. There is gold for you ; sell me your good report. [of you Lady. How 1 my good name ? or to report What I shall think is good? — The princess ! Enter IMOGEN. Clo. Good -morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand. [much pains Imo. Good-morrow, sir. You lay out too For purchasing but trouble : the thanks I give Is telling you that I am poor of thanks, And scarce can spare them. Clo. Still, I swear I love you. Imo. Ifyou but saidso, 'twere asdeep with me: If you swear still, your recompense is still That I regard it not. Clo. This is no answer. Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent, [faith, I would not speak. I pray you, spare me : I shall unfold equal discourtesy [knowing To your best kindness : one of your great Should learn, being taught, forbearance. Clo. To leave you in your madness 'twere my sin : I will not. Imo. Fools are not mad folks. Clo. Do you call me fool ? Imo. As I am mad, I do : If you '11 be patient I '11 no more be mad ; That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir, You put me to forget a lady's manners By being so verbal : and learn now, for all, That I, which knowmy heart, dohere pronounce, By the very truth of it, I care not for you ; And am so near the lack of charity, — To accuse myself, — I hate youj which I had rather You felt than make 't my boast. Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base wretch, — One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes, With scraps o' the court, — it is no contract, none : And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, — Yet who than he more mean? — to knit their souls, — On whom there is no more dependency But brats and beggary, — in self-figur'd knot ; Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by The consequence o' the crown ; and must not soil The precious note of it with a base slave, A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth, A pantler, — not so eminent. Imo. Profane fellow ! Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more But what thou art besides, thou wert too base To be his groom : thou wert dignified enough, Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made Comparative* for your virtues, to be styl'd The under-hangman of his kingdom ; and hated For being preferr'd so well. Clo. The south fog rot him ! Imo. He never can meet more mischance than

Enter PISANIO. How now, Pisanio ! Clo. His garment ! Now, the devil, — Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently,— Clo. His garment ! Imo. I am sprited with a fool ; Frighted, and anger'd worse. — Go, bid my woman Search for a jewel that too casually [me Hath left mine arm : it was thy master's ; shrew If I would lose it for a revenue Of any king's in Europe. I do think I saw 't this morning : confident I am Last night 'twas on mine arm ; I kiss'd it : I hope it be not gone to tell my lord That I kiss aught but he. Pis. 'Twill not be lost. Imo. I hope so : go and search. [Exit PISANIO. Clo. You have abus'd me. — His meanest garment ? Imo. Ay, I said so, sir : If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't. Clo. I will inform your father. Into. Your mother too : She 's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope, But the worse of me. So I leave you, sir, To the worst of discontent. [Exit. Clo. I '11 be revenged :— His meanest garment ! — Well. [Exit. SCENE IV. — ROME. An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House. Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO. Post. Fear it not, sir : I would I were so sure To win the king as I am bold her honour Will remain hers. Phi. What means do you make to him ? Post. Not any ; but abide the change of time ; Quake in the present winter's state, and wish That warmer days would come : in these sear'd hopes I barely gratify your love ; they failing, I must die much your debtor. Phi. Your very goodness and your company O'erpays all I can do. By this your king Hath heard of great Augustus : Caius Lucius Will do 's commission throughly : and I think He '11 grant the tribute, send the arrearages, Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance is yet fresh in their grief. Post. I do believe,— Statist though I am none, nor like to be, — That this will prove a war ; and you shall hear The legions now in Gallia sooner landed In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen Are men more ordered than when Julius Caesar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage Worthy his frowning at : their discipline, — Now mingled with their courage, — will make known To their approvers they are people such That mend upon the world.  Profess myself the winner of her honour, Together with your ring ; and not the wronger Of her or you, having proceeded but By both your wills. Post. If you can make 't apparent That you have tasted her in bed, my hand And ring is yours : if not, the foul opinion You had of her pure honour gains or loses Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both To who shall find them. lack. Sir, my circumstances, Being so near the truth as I will make them, Must first induce you to believe : whose strength I will confirm with oath ; which I doubt not You'll give me leave to spare when you shall find You need it not. Post. Proceed. lack. First, her bedchamber, — Where, I confess, I slept not ; but profess Had that was well worth watching, — it was hang'd With tapestry of silk and silver ; the story Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman, And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for The press of boats or pride : a piece of work So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive In workmanship and value ; which I wonder'd Could be so rarely and exactly wrought, Since the true life on 't was, — Post.f This is true ; And this you might have heard of here, by me Or by some other. lack. More particulars Must justify my knowledge. Post. So they must, Or do your honour injury. lack. The chimney Is south the chamber ; and the chimney-piece Chaste Dian bathing : never saw I figures So likely to report themselves : the cutter Was as another nature, dumb j outwent her, Motion and breath left out. Post. This is a thing Which you might from relation likewise reap ; Being, as it is, much spoke of. lack. The roof o' the chamber With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons,— I had forgot them, — were two winking Cupids Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely Depending on their brands. Post. This is her honour ! — Let it be granted you have seen all this, — and praise Be given to your remembrance, — the description Of what is in her chamber nothing saves The wager you have laid. loch* Then, if you can, [Pulling out the bracelet, Be pale ; I beg but leave to air this jewel ; see ! — And now 'tis up again : it must be married To that your diamond ; I ;11 keep them. Post. Jove !— Once more let me behold it : is it that Which I left with her ? Jack. Sir, — I thank her, — that : She stripped it from her arm ; I see her yet ; Her pretty action did outsell her gift, And yet enrich'd it too : she gave it me, and said

She priz'd it once. Post. Maybe she pluck'd it off To send it me. lack. She writes so to you ? doth she ? Post. O, no, no, no ! 'tis true. Here, take this too ; [Gives the ring. It is a basilisk unto mine eye, Kills me to look on't. — Let there be no honour Where there is beauty ; truth where semblance ; love Where there 's anotherman : the vows of women Of no more bondage be to where they are made Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing. — O, above measure false ! Phi. Have patience, sir, And take your ring again ; 'tis not yet won : It may be probable she lost it ; or, Who knows if one o' her women, being corrupted, Hath stolen it from her ? Post. Very true ; And so I hope he came by't. — Back my ring : Render to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this ; for this was stolen. loch. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm. Post. Hark you, he swears ; by Jupiter he swears. [sure 'Tis true, — nay, keep the ring, — 'tis true : I am She would not lose it : her attendants are All sworn and honourable : — they induc'd to steal it ! And by a stranger ! — No, he hath enjoyed her : The cognizance of her incontinency Is this, — she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly. — There, take thy hire ; and all the fiends of hell Divide themselves between you ! Phi. Sir, be patient : This is not strong enough to be believ'd Of one persuaded well of, — Post. Never talk on 't ; She hath been colted by him. loch. If you seek For further satisfying, under her breast, — Worthy the pressing, — lies a mole, right proud

SCENE V.] CYMBELINE. 943 Of that most delicate lodging : by my life, I kiss'd it ; and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her ? Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold, Were there no more but it. loch. Will you hear more ? Post. Spare your arithmetic : never count the turns ; Once, and a million ! Jack. I'll be sworn, — Post. No swearing. If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie ; And I will kill thee if thou dost deny Thou 'st made me cuckold. loch. I'll deny nothing. Post. O, that I had her here to tear her limbmeal ! I will go there and do 't ; i' the court ; before Her father : I '11 do something, — [Exit. Phi. Quite besides The government of patience ! — You have won : Let 's follow him, and pervert the present wrath He hath against himself. lack. With all my heart. [Exeunt. SCENE V. — ROME. Another Room in PHILARIO'S House. Enter POSTHUMUS. Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women Must be half- workers ? We are all bastards ; And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where When I was stamp'd ; some coiner with his tools Made me a counterfeit : yet my mother seem'd The Dian of that time : so doth my wife The nonpareil of this. — O, vengeance, vengeance ! — Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd, And pray'd me oft forbearance : did it with A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on 't Might well have warm'd old Saturn ; that I thought her As chaste as unsunn'd snow. — O, all the devils ! — This yellow lachimo in an hour, — was 't not ? Or less, — at first ? — Perchance he spoke not, but, Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one, Cried O I and mounted ; found no opposition But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out The woman's part in me ! For there 's no motion That tends to vice in man but I affirm It is the woman's part : be it lying, note it, The woman's ; flattering, hers ; deceiving, hers ; [hers ; Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers ; revenges, Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain, Nice longing, slanders, mutability, AH faults that have a name, nay, that hell knows, Why, hers, in part or all ; but rather all ; For ev'n to vice They are not constant, but are changing still One vice, but of a minute old, for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, Detest them, curse them. — Yet 'tis greater skill In a true hate to pray they have their will : The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit. ACT III. SCENE I. — BRITAIN. A Room of State in CYMBELINE'S Palace. Enter, at one side, CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords; at the other CAIUS Lucius and Attendants. Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us ? [brance yet Luc. When Julius Caesar, — whose rememLives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues Be theme and hearing ever, — was in this Britain, And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, — Famous in Caesar's praises no whit less Than in his feats deserving it, — for him And his succession granted Rome a tribute Yearly three thousand pounds ; which by thee lately Is left untender'd. Queen. And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever. Clo. There be many Caesars Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself ; and we will nothing pay For wearing our own noses. Qiieen. That opportunity, Which then they had to take from % to resume We have again. — Remember, sir, my liege, The kings your ancestors ; together with The natural bravery of your isle, which stands As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters ; With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats, [conquest But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of Caesar made here ; but made not here his brag Of came, and saw, and overcame: with shame, —

944 CYMBELINE. [ACT in. The first that ever touch'd him, — he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten ; and his shipping,— Poor ignorant baubles ! — on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd As easily 'gainst our rocks : for joy whereof The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point, — O, giglot fortune ! — to master Caesar's sword, Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright And Britons strut with courage. Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid : our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Caesars : other of them may have crooked noses ; but to owe such straight arms, none. Cym. Son, let your mother end. Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan : I do not say I am one ; but I have a hand. — Why tribute ? why should we pay tribute ? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light ; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now. Cym. You must know, Till theˆ injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free : Caesar's ambition, — Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch The sides o' the world, — against all colour, here Did put the yoke upon 's ; which to shake off Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be. Clo. We do. Cym. Say then to Caesar, Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain'd our laws, — whose use the sword of Caesar [franchise Hath too much mangled ; whose repair and Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry : — Mulrautius made our laws, Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king. Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar, — Caesar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers, — thine enemy : Receive it from me, then : — War and confusion In Caesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee : look For fury not to be resisted. — Thus defied, I thank thee for myself. Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius. Thy Caesar knighted me ; my youth I spent Much under him ; of him I gather'd honour ; Which he to seek of me again, perforce, Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms, — a precedent Which not to read would show the Britons cold : So

Caesar shall not find them. Luc. Let proof speak. Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer : if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle : if you beat us out of it, it is yours ; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you ; and there 's an end. Luc. So, sir. [mine: Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he All the remain is, welcome. \Exeunt. SCENE II. — BRITAIN. Another Room in the Palace. Enter PISANIO with a letter. Pis. How ! of adultery ? Wherefore write you not What monster 's her accuser ? — Leonatus ! 0 master ! what a strange infection Is fallen into thy earl What false Italian, — As poisonous tongu'd as handed, — hath prevail'd On thy too ready hearing ? — Disloyal ! No : She 's punish'd for her truth ; and undergoes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would take in some virtue. — O my master ! Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes. — How ! that I should murder her? Upon the love, and truth, and vows which I Have made to thy command? — I, her? — her blood ? If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. I Tow look I, That I should seem to lack humanity So much as this fact comes to? {Reading.] Do *t : the letter That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity : — O damn'd paper ! Black as the ink that 's on thee ! Senseless bauble, Art thou a fedary for this act, and look'st So virgin-like without ? Lo, here she comes. 1 am ignorant in what I am commanded. Enter IMOGEN. Imo. How now, Pisanio ! Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord. Imo. Who? thy loru? that is my lord, — Leonatus ? Lovers And men ia dangerous bonds pray not alike : Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet You clasp young Cupid's tables.— Good news, gods ! [Reads. Justice, and your father's wrath, should he fake me in his dominion , could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambriaˆ at Milford-Haven . what your own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love, LEONATUS POSTHUMUS. O for a horse with wings! — Hear'st thou, Pisanio ? He is at Milford-Haven : read, and tell me How far 3tis thither. If one of mean affairs May plod it in a week, why may not I Glide thither in a day ? — Then, true Pisanio, — Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord ; who long'st — O, let rne 'bate — but not like me ; yet long'st, But in a fainter kind : O, not like me ; For mine's beyond beyond, — say, and speak thick, — Love's councillor should fill the bores of hearing To the smothering of the sense, — how far it is To this same blessed Milford : and, by the way, Tell me how Wales was made so happy as To inherit such a haven : but, first of all, How we may steal from hence ; and for the gap That we shall make in time, from our hencegoing [hence : And our return, to excuse. But first, how get Why should excuse be born or e'er begot ? We '11 talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak, How many score of miles may we well ride 'Twixt hour and hour ? Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun, Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too. Into. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man, Could never go so slow : I have heard of riding wagers, Where horses have been nimbler than the sands That run i' the clock's behalf;— but this is foolery : Go bid my woman feign a sickness ; say She'll home to her father: and provide me presently A riding suit no costlier than would fit A franklin's housewife. Pis. Madam, you 're best consider. Inw. I see before me, man, nor here, nor here, Nor what ensues ; but have a fog in them

That I cannot look through. Away, 1 prithee; Do as 1 bid thee : there's no more to say ; Accessible is none but Milford way. {Exeunt. SCENE III. — WALES. A mountainous Country with a Cave, £«terBELARius, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS. Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such [gate Whose roof 's as low as ours ! Stoop, boys : this Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you To a morning's holy office : the gates of monarchs Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through, And keep their impious turbans on, without Good-morrow to the sun. — Hail, thou fair heaven ! We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly As prouder livers do. Gut. Hail, heaven ! Arv, Hail, heaven ! Bel. Now for our mountain sport : up to yond hill, Your legs aie young; I'll tread these flats. Consider, When you above perr 2ive me like a crow, That it is place which lessens and sets off: And you may then revolve what tales I have told you Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war : This service is not service so being done, But being so allow'd : to apprehend thus Draws us a profit from all things we see ; And often, to our comfort, shall we find The sharded beetle in a safer hold Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life Is nobler than attending for a check, Richer than doing nothing for a bauble, Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk : Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine, Yet keeps his book uncross'd : no life to ours. Gui. Out of your proof you speak : we, poor unfledg'd, [know not Have never wing'd from view o' the nest ; nor What air 's from home. Haply this life is best, If quiet life be best ; sweeter to you That have a sharper known ; well corresponding With your stiff age : but unto us it is A cell of ignorance ; travelling abed ;

CYMBELINE. [ACT in. A prison for a debtor, that not dares To stride a limit. Arv. What should we speak of When we are old as you ? when we shall hear The rain and wind beat dark December, how, In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse The freezing hours away ? We have seen nothing : We are beastly ; subtle as the fox for prey ; Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat : Our valour is to chase what flies ; our cage We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird, And sing our bondage freely. Bel. How you speak ! Did you but know the city's usuries, And felt them knowingly : the art o' the court, As hard to leave as keep ; whose top to climb Is certain falling, or so slippery that The fear 's as bad as falling : the toil o' the war, A pain that only seems to seek out danger I' the name of fame and honour ; which dies i' the search, And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph As record of fair act ; nay, many times Doth ill deserve by doing well ; what 's worse, Must court'sy at the censure. — O, boys, this story The world may read in me : my body 's mark'd With Roman swords ; and my report was once First with the best of note : Cymbeline lov'd me ; And when a soldier was the theme, my name Was not far off; then was I as a tree [night Whose boughs did bend with fruit : but in one A storm or robbery, call it what you will, Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves, And left me bare to weather. Gui. Uncertain favour? Bel. My fault being nothing, — as I have told you oft, — • [vail'd But that two villains, whose false oaths preBefore my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline I was confederate with the Romans : so Follow'd my banishment ; and this twenty years This rock and these demesnes have been my world : Where I have liv'd at honest freedom ; paid More pious debts to heaven than in all The fore-end of my time. — But up to the mountains ! This is not hunters' language. — He that strikes The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast ; To him the other two shall minister ; And we will fear no poison, which attends In place of greater state. I '11 meet you in the valleys. {Exeunt GUI. and ARV. How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature ! These boys know little they are sons to the king ; Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive. They think they are mine : and though train'd up thus meanly [hit I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do The roofs of palaces ; and nature prompts them, In simple and low things, to prince it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore, — • The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who The king his father cail'd Guiderius, — Jove ! When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out Into my story : say, Thus mine enemy fell, And thus I set my foot on 'j neck; even then The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats, Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture [wal, — That acts my words. The younger brother, CadOnce Arviragus, — in as like a figure Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more Hisown conceiving. Hark, thegameisrous'd! — O Cymbeline ! heaven and my conscience knows Thou didst unjustly banish me : whereon, At three and two years old, I stole these babes ; Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou reft'st me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse ; they took thee for their mother, And every day do honour to her grave : Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan cail'd, They take for natural father. The game is up. {Exit. SCENE IV. — Wales, near Mi If ord- Haven. Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN. Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place Was near at hand. — Ne'er long'd my mother so To see me first as I have now. — Pisanio J Man ! Where is Posthumus ? What is in thy mind That makes thee stare thus ? Wherefore breaks that sigh From the inward of thee ? One but painted thus Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd Beyond self-explication : put thyself Into a 'haviour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my steadier senses. What's the matter ? Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with A look untender ? If 't be summer news, Smile to 't before ; if winterly, thou need'st But keep that countenance still. — My husband's hand! That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftied him, And he's at some hard point — Speak, man; thy tongue

SCENE IV.] CYMBELINE. May take off some extremity, which to read Would be even mortal to me. Pis. Please you, read ; And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing The most disdain'd of fortune. Imo. [Reads.} Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed ; the testimonies "whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not otit of weak surmises ; but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as 1 expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, mtist act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life ; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford- Haven: she hath my letter for the -purpose : where, if thott fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal. Pis. What, shall I need to draw my sword ? the paper Hath cut her throat already. — No, 'tis slander ; Whose edge is sharper than the sword ; whose tongue Outvenoms all the worms of Nile ; whose breath Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states, Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave This viperous slander enters. — What cheer, madam? [false? Imo. False to his bed? What is it to be To lie in watch there, and to think on him ? To weep 'twixt clock and clock ? if sleep charge nature, To break it with a fearful dream of him, And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed, Is it? Pis. Alas, good lady ! [lachimo, Imo. I false ! Thy conscience witness : — Thou didst accuse him of incontinency ; Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks, Thy favour }s good enough. — Some jay of Italy, Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him: Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion ; And for I am richer than to hang by the walls I must be ripp'd : to pieces with me ! — O, Men's vows are women's traitors ! All good seeming, By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought Put on for villany, — not born where 't grows, But worn a bait for ladies. Pis. Good madam, hear me. Imo. True honest men being heard, like false vEneas, [weeping Were, in his time, thought false : and Sinon's Did scandal many a holy tear ; took pity From most true wretchedness : so thou, Posthumus, Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men ; Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd From thy great fail. — Come, fellow, be thou honest : [him, Do thou thy master's bidding : when thou see'st A little witness my obedience :

look ! I draw the sword myself : take it, and hit The innocent mansion of my love, my heart : Fear not ; 'tis empty of all things but grief: Thy master is not there ; who was indeed The riches of it : do his bidding ; strike. Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause ; But now thou seem'st a coward. Pisa Hence, vile instrument ! Thou shalt not damn my hand. Imo. Why, I must die ; And if I do not by thy hand, thou art No servant of thy master's : against self-slaughter There is a prohibition so divine [heart : That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my Something's afore 't. — Soft, soft! we'll no defence ; Obedient as the scabbard. — What is here? The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus All turn'd to heresy? Away, away, Corrupters of my faith ! you shall no more Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: though those that are betray'd Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor Stands in worse case of woe. And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up My disobedience 'gainst the king my father, And make me put into contempt the suits Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find It is no act of common passage, but A strain of rareness : and I grieve myself To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory Will then be pang'd by me. — Pr'ythee, despatch : The lamb entreats the butcher: where 's thy knife? Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding, When I desire it too. Pis. O gracious lady, Since I receiv'd command to do this business I have not slept one wink. Imo. Do 't, and to bed then. Pis. I '11 wake mine eyeballs blind first. Imo. Wherefore then Didst undertake it ? Why hast thou abus'd So many miles with a pretence? this place? Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour? The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,

 For my being absent ; whereunto 1 never Purpose return ? Why hast thou gone so far, To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand, The elected deer before thee ? Pis. But to win time To lose so bad employment ; in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady, Hear me with patience. Imo. Talk thy tongue weary: speak: I have heard I am a strumpet ; and mine ear, Therein false struck, can take no greater wound, Nor tent to bottom that. But speak. Pis. Then, madam, I thought you would not back again. Imo. Most like, — Bringing me here to kill me. Pis. Not so neither : But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well. It cannot be But that my master is abus'd : Some villain, ay, and singular in his art, Hath done you both this cursed injury. Imo. Some Roman courtezan. Pis. No, on my life : I '11 give but notice you are dead, and send him Some bloody sign of it ; for 'tis commanded I should do so : you shall be miss'd at court, And that will well confirm it. Imo. Why, good fellow, What shall I do the while? where bide? how live? Or in my life what comfort when I am Dead to my husband? Pis. If you '11 back to the court, — Imo. No court, no father ; nor no more ado With that harsh, noble, simple nothing, — That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me As fearful asxa siege. Pis. If not at court, Then not in Britain must you bide. Imo. Where then? Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night, Are they rot but in Britain? V the world's volume Our Britain seems as of it, but not in 't ; In a great pool a swan's nest : pr'ythee, think There 's livers out of Britain. Pis. I am most glad You think of other place. The ambassador, Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise That which to appear itself must not yet be, But by self danger, you should tread a course Privy and full of view ; yea, haply, near The residence of Posthumus, — so nigh at least That though his actions were not visible, yet Report should render him hourly to your ear, As truly as he moves. Imo. O, for such means, Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't, I would adventure. Pis. Well then, here 's the point : You must forget to be a woman ; change Command into obedience ; fear and niceness, — 1 he handmaids of all women, or, more truly, Woman its pretty self, — into a waggish courage ; Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and As quarrelous as the weasel ; nay, you must . Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek, Exposing it, — but, O, the harder heart ! Alack, no remedy ! — to the greedy touch Of common-kissing Titan ; and forget Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein You made great Juno angry. Imo. Nay, be brief; I see into thy end, and am almost A man already. Pis. First, make yourself but like one. Fore-thinking this, I have already fit, — 'Tis in my cloak-bag, — doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them: would you, in their serving, And with what imitation you can borrow From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, — which you '11 make him know If that his head have ear in music, — doubtless With joy he will embrace you ; for he 's honourable And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad You have me, rich ; and I will never fail Beginning nor supplyment Imo. Thou art all the comfort The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away : There 's more to be consider'd ; but we '11 even All that good time will give us : this attempt I am soldier to, and will abide it with A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee. Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell, Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of [tress, Your carriage from the court. My noble misHere is a box; I had it horn the queen; What 's in 't is precious ; if you are sick at sea Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this Will drive away distemper.— To some shade, And fit you to your manhood : — may the gods Direct you to the best ! Imo. Amen : £ thank thee. ££4*1011

SCENE V.j CYMBELINE. 943 SCENE V. — BRITAIN. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace. Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, Lucius, and Lords. Cym. Thus far; and so farewell. Luc. Thanks, royal sir. My emperor hath wrote ; I must from hence ; And am right sorry that I must report ye My master's enemy. Cym. Our subjects, sir, Will not endure his yoke ; and for ourself To show less sovereignty than they, must needs Appear unkinglike. Luc. So, sir, I desire of you A conduct over-land to Milford-Haven. — Madam, all joy befall his grace and you ! Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office; 'The due of honour in no point omit. — So farewell, noble Lucius. Luc. Your hand, my lord. Clo. Receive it friendly : but from this time forth I wear it as your enemy. Luc. Sir, the event Is yet to name the winner : fare you well. Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords, Till he have cross'd the Severn. — Happiness ! [Exeunt Lucius and Lords. Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us That we have given him cause. Clo. 'Tis all the better; Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it. Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness : The powers that he already hath in Gallia Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves His war for Britain. Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business; But must be look'd to speedily and strongly. Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd The duty of the day : she looks us like A thing more made of malice than of duty : We have noted it. — Call her before us; for We have been too slight in sufferance. [Exit an Attendant. Queen. Royal sir, Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd Hath her life been ; the cure whereof, my lord. 'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty, Forbear sharp speeches to her : she 's a lady So tender of rebukes that words are strokes, And strokes death to her. Re-enter Attendant. Cym. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd? Atten. Please you, sir, Her chambers are all lock'd ; and there 's no answer [make. That will be given to the loud'st of noise we Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close; Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity She should that duty leave unpaid to you Which daily she was bound to proffer : this She wish'd me to make known ; but our great court Made me to blame in memory. Cym. Her door 's lock'd ? Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear Prove false ! [Exit. Queen. Son, I say, follow the king, [vant, Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old serI have not seen these two days. Queen. Go, look after. — [Exit CLOTEN. Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus ! — He hath a drug of mine ; I pray his absence Proceed by swallowing that ; for he believes It is a thing most precious. But for her, [her; Where is she gone? Haply despair hath seiz'd Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she 's flown To her desir'd Posthumus: gone she is To death or to dishonour ; and my end Can make good use of either : she being down, I have the placing of the British crown. Re-enter CLOTEN. How now, my son ! Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled. Go in and cheer the king : he rages ; none Dare come about him. Queen. All the better: may This night forestall him of the coming day ! [Exit. Clo. I love and hate her : for she 's fair and royal, [quisite And that she hath all courtly parts more exThan lady, ladies, woman ; from every one The best she hath, and she, of all compounded. Outsells them all. — I love her therefore: but, Disdaining me, and throwing favours on

950 CYMBELINE. [ACT in. The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment That what's else rare is chok'd; and in that point I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, To be reveng'd upon her. For when fools shall — Enter PISANIO. Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah? Come hither : ah, you precious pander ! Villain, Where is thy lady? In a word ; or else Thou art straightway with the fiends. Pis. O, good my lord ! Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter — I will not ask again. Close villain, I '11 have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus? From whose so many weights of baseness cannot A dram of worth be drawn. Pis. Alas, my lord, How can she be with him? When was she miss'd? He is in Rome. Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer; No further halting : satisfy me home What is become of her. Pis. O, my all-worthy lord ! Clo. All-worthy villain ! Discover where thy mistress is at once, At the next word, — no more of worthy lord, — Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death. Pis. Then, sir, This paper is the history of my knowledge Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter. Clo. Let's see't. — I will pursue her Even to Augustus' throne. Pis. [Aside.] Or this or perish. She 's far enough ; and what he learns by this May prove his travel, not her danger. Clo. Hum! Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen, Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again ! Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true? Pis. Sir, as I think. Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't. — Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, — that is, what viilany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, — I would think thee an honest man : thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment. Pis. Well, my good lord. Clo. Wilt thou serve me? — for since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine, — wilt thou serve me? Pis. Sir, I will. Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession? Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress. Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither : let it be thy first service

; go. Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit. Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven ! — I forgot to ask him one thing ; I '11 remember 't anon : even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. — I would these garments were come. She said upon a time, — the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart, — that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her : first kill him, and in her eyes ; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, — and when my lust hath dined, — which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised, — to the court I '11 knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I '11 be merry in my revenge. Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes. Be those the garments? Pis. Ay, my noble lord. Clo. How long is 't since she went to MilfordHaven? Pis. She can scarce be there yet. Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber ; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. — My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it ! — Come, and be true. [Exit. Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss : for true to thee Were to prove false, which I will never be, To him that is most true. To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursu'st. — Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings on her ! — This fool's speed Be cross'd with slowness ; labour be his meed ' [Exit.

SCENE VI.] CYMBELINE. 951 SCENE VI.— WALES. Before the Cave of BELARIUS. Enter IMOGEN, in boy's clothes. Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one : I have tir'd myself ; and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick, But that my resolution helps me. - Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee, Thou wast within a ken : O Jove ! I think Foundations fly the wretched ; such, I mean, Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me I could not miss my way : will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis A punishment or trial ? Yes ; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true : to lapse in fulness Is sorer than to lie for need ; and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars. — My dear lord ! Thou art one o' the false ones : now I think on thee My hunger 's gone ; but even before, I was At point to sink for food. — But what is this? Here is a path to 't : 'tis some savage hold : I were best not call ; I dare not call : yet famine, Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. Plenty and peace breeds cowards ; hardness ever Of hardiness is mother. — Ho ! who 's here ? If anything that 's civil, speak ; if savage, Take or lend. — Ho! — No answer? then I'll enter. Best draw my sword ; and if mine enemy But fear the sword, like me, he '11 scarcely look on't. Such a foe, good heavens ! [Goes into the Cave. Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS. Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and Are master of the feast : Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant ; 'tis our match: The sweat of industry would dry and die But for the end it works to. Come ; our stomachs Will make what 's homely savoury : weariness Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth Finds the down pillow hard. — New, peace be here, Poor house, that keep'st thyself ! Gui. I am throughly weary. Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite. Gut. There is cold meat i' the cave ; we '11 browse on that Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd. Bel. Stay ; come not in. [Looking into the Cave. But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy. Gui. What 's the matter, sir ? Bel. By Jupiter, an angel ! or, if not, An earthly paragon ! — Behold divineness No elder than a boy ! Re-enter IMOGEN. Imo. Good masters, harm me not : Before I enter'd here I call'd ; and thought To have begg'd or bought what I have took : good troth, I have stol'n nought ; nor would not, though I had found

Gold strew'd o' the floor. Here 's money for my meat : I would have left it on the board, so soon As I had made my meal ; and parted With prayers for the provider. Gut. ' Money, youth ? Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt ! And 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods. Imo. I see you are angry : Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it. Bel. Whither bound? Imo. To Milord-Haven. Bel. What 's your name ? Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy ; he embark'd at Milford ; To whom being going, almost spent with hunger, I am fallen in this offence. Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth, Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd ! 'Tis almost night : you shall have better cheer Ere you depart ; and thanks to stay and eat it. — Boys, bid him welcome. Gut. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard but be your groom. — In honesty I'd bid for you as I do buy. Arv. I '11 make 't my comfort He is a man ; I '11 love him as my brother : — And such a welcome as I'd give to him, After long absence, such as yours : — most welcome ! Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends. Into. 'Mongst friends, If brothers.— [Aside.} Would it had been so that they

952 CYMBELINE. [ACT iv. Had been my father's sons ! then had my prize Been less ; and so more equal ballasting To thee, Posthumus. Bel. He wrings at some distress. Gut. Would I could free 't ! Arv. Or I ; whate'er it be, What pain it cost, what danger ! gods ! Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering. Into. Great men, That had a court no bigger than this cave, That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, — laying by That nothing gift of differing multitudes, — Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods ! I'd change my sex to be companion with them, Since Leonatus' false. Bel. It shall be so. Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. — Fair youth, come in : Discourse is heavy, fasting ; when we have supp'd We '11 mannerly demand thee of thy story, So far as thou wilt speak it. Gui. Pray* draw near. Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome. Into. Thanks, sir. Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt. SCENE VII. — ROME. A public Place. Enter two Senators and Tribunes. I Sen. This is the tenor of the Emperor's writ: That since the common men are now in action 'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians, And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite The gentry to this business. He creates Lucius pro-consul : and to you, the tribunes, For this immediate levy, he commends His absolute commission. Long live Csesar ! 1 Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces ? 2 Sen. Ay. i Tri. Remaining now in Gallia ? i Sen. With those legions Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy Must be supplyant : the words of your commission Will tie you to the numbers, and the time Of their despatch. I Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt. ACT IV. SCENE I. — WALES. The Forest near the Cave of BELARIUS. Enter CLOTEN. Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me ! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too ? the rather, — saving reverence of the word, — for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself,— for it is not vainglory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber, — I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his ; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions : yet this imperceiverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is ! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face ; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage ; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe : out, sword, and to a sore purpose ! Fortune, put them into my hand ! This is the very description of their meetingplace : and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit. SCENE II.— WALES. Before the Cave. Enterˆfrom the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN. Bel. [To IMOGEN.] You are not well: remain here in the cave ; We '11 come to you after hunting. Arv. [To IMOGEN.] Brother, stay here: Are we not brothers ? Into. So man and man should be ; But clay and clay differs in dignity, Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick. Gui. Go you to hunting. I '11 abide with him. Into. So sick I am not, — yet I am not well; But not so citizen a wanton as [me ; To seem to die ere sick : so please you, leave Stick to your journal course : the breach of custom [me Is breach of all. I am ill ; but your being by Cannot amend me : society is no comfort

SCENE II.] CYMBELINE. 953 To one not sociable : I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here : I '11 rob none but myself ; and let me die, Stealing so poorly. Gui. I love thee ; I have spoke it : How much the quantity, the weight as much, As I do love my father. Bel. What ? how ! how ! Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me In my good brother's fault : I know not why I love this youth ; and I have heard you say Love's reason 's without reason : the bier at door, And a demand who is 't shall die, I 'd say My fat her > not this youth. Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain ! 0 worthiness of nature ! breed of greatness ! Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base : Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace. 1 'm not their father ; yet who this should be Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me. — 'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn. Arv. Brother, farewell. Into. I wish ye sport Arv. You health, — so please you, sir. Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard ! Our courtiers say all 's savage but at court : Experience, O, thou disprov'st report ! The imperious seas breed monsters ; for the dish, Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish. I am sick still ; heart -sick. — Pisanio, I '11 now taste of thy drug. [SwaVˆws some. Gut. I could nˆt stir him : He said he was gentle, but unfortunate ; Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. [after Arv. Thus did he answer me : yet said hereI might know more. Bel. To the field, to the field 1— We '11 leave you for this time : go in and rest. Arv. We '11 not be long away. Bel. Pray, be not sick, For you must be our housewife. Imo. Well, or ill, I arn bound to you. Bel. And shalt be ever. [Exit IMOGEN into the Cave. This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors. Arv. How angel-like he sings ! Gui. But his neat cookery ! He cut our roots in characters ; And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick, And he her dieter. Arv. Nobly he yokes A smiling with a sigh,— as if the sigh Was that it was for not being such a smile ; The smile mocking the sigh thatˆit would fly From so divine a temple to commix With winds that sailors rail at. Gui. I do note, That grief and patience, rooted in him both, Mingle their spurs together. Arv. Grow, patience ! And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine His perishing root with the increasing vine ! Bel. It is great morning. Come, away! — Who's there? Enter CLOTEN. Clo. I cannot find those runagates ; that villain Hath mock'd me. — I am faint. Bel. Those runagates ! Means he not us? I partly know him ; 'tis Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush. I saw him not these many years, and yet I know 'tis he. — We are held as outlaws : hence ! Gui. He is but one: you and my brother search What companies are near : pray you, away; Let me alone with him. [Exeunt BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS. Clo. Soft ! — What are you That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers ? I have heard of such. — What slave art thou ? Gui. A thing More slavish did I ne'er than answering A slave without a knock. Clo. Thou art a robber, A law-breaker, a villain : yield thee, thief. Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou? have not I An arm as big as thine? a heart as big? Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art, Why I should yield to thee ? Clo. Thou villain base, Know'st me not by my clothes ? Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal, Who is thy grandfather : he made those clothes, Which, as it seems, make thee. Clo. Thou precious varlet, My tailor made them not. Gui. Hence, then, and thank The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool; I am loth to beat thee. Clo. Thou injurious thief, Hear but my name, and tremble. Gui. What 's thy name ?

954 CYMBELINE. [ACT iv. Clo. Cloten, thou villain. Gut. Cloten. thou double villain, be thy name, I cannot tremble at it ; were it toad, or adder, spider, 'Twould move me sooner. Clo. To thy further fear, Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know I'm son to the queen. Gut. I 'm sorry for 't ; not seeming So worthy as thy birth. Clo. Art not afeard ? Gut. Those that I reverence, those I fear, — the wise : At fools I laugh, not fear them. Clo. Die the death : When I have slain thee with my proper hand, I '11 follow those that even now fled hence, And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads : Yield, rustic mountaineer. _Exeunt fighting. Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS. Bel. No company 's abroad. Arv. None in the world: you did mistake him, sure. Bel. I cannot tell : long is it since I saw him, But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour Which then he wore ; the snatches in his voice, And burst of speaking, were as his : I am absolute 'Twas very Cloten. Arv. In this place we left them : I wish my brother make good time with him, You say he is so fell. Bet. Being scarce made up, I mean to man, he had not apprehension Of roaring terrors ; for defect of judgment Is oft the cure of fear. — But, see, thy brother. Re-enter GUIDERIUS with CLOTEN'S head. Gut. This Cloten wasafool, an empty purse, — There was no money in 't : not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none: Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne My head as I do his. Bel. What hast thou done ? Gui. I am perfect what : cut off one Cloten's head, Son to the queen, after his own report ; Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer ; and swore, With his own single hand he 'd take us in, Displace our heads where, — thank the gods ! — they grow, And set them on Lud's town. Bel. We are all undone. Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose But that he swore to take, our lives? The law Protects not us : then why should we be tender, To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us ; Play judge and executioner all himself, For we do fear the law? What company Discover you abroad ? Bel. No single soul Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason He must have some attendants. Though his humour Was nothing but mutation, — ay, and that From one bad thing to worse ; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd, To bring him here alone : although perhaps It may be heard at court that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time May make some stronger head : the which he hearing, — As it is like him, — might break out, and swear He 'd fetch us in ; yet is 't not probable To come alone, either he so undertaking [fear, Or they so suffering : then on good ground we If we do fear this body hath a tail More perilous than the head. Arv. Let ordinance Come as the gods foresay it : howsoe'er, My brother hath done well. Bel. I had no mind To hunt this day : the boy Fidele's sickness Did make my way long forth. Gui. With his own sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have ca'en His head from him : I '11 throw 't into the creek Behind our rock ; and let it to the sea, And tell the fishes he 's the queen's son, Cloten : That 's all I reck. [Exit. Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd ; Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't ! though valour Becomes thee well enough. Arv. Would I had done't, So the revenge alone pursu'd me ! — Polydore, I love thee brotherly ; but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges, [us through, That possible strength might meet, would seek And put us to our answer. Bel. Well, 'tis done :— We '11 hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger Where there 's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock ; You and Fidele play the cooks: I '11 stay Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him To dinner presently. Arv. Poor sick Fidele !

SCENE II.] CYMBELINE. 955 I '11 willingly to him : to gain his colour I 'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood, And praise myself for charity. [Exit. Bel. O thou goddess, Thou divine nature, how thyself thou blazon'st In these two princely boys ! They are as gentle As zephyrs blowing below the violet, Not wagging his sweet head ; and yet as rough, Their royal blood enchaf d, as the rud'st wind That by the top doth take the mountain pine, And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder That an invisible instinct should frame them To royalty unlearn'd ; honour untaught ; Civility not seen from other ; valour That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it 's strange What Cloten's being here to us portends, Or what his death will bring us. Re-enter GUIDERIUS. Gui. Where 's my brother? I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream, In embassy to his mother : his body 's hostage For his return. [Solemn music. Bel. My ingenious instrument ! Hark, Polydore, it sounds ! But what occasion Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark ! Gui. Is he at home ? Bel. He went hence even now. Gui. What does he mean ? since death of my dear'st mother It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter? Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys Is jollity for apes and grief for boys. Is Cadwal mad ? Bel. Look, here he comes, And brings the dire occasion in his arms Of what we blame him for ! Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMOGEN as dead in his arms. Arv. The bird is dead That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty, To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch, Than have seen this. Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily ! My brother wears thee not the one half so well As when thou grew'st thyself. Bel. O melancholy ! Who ever yet could sound thy bottom ? find The ooze to show what coast thy sluggish crare Might easiliest harbour in? — Thou blessed thing! Jove knows what man thou might' st have made ; but I, Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy ! How found you him ? Arv. Stark, as you see : Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at : his right cheek Reposing on a cushion. Gui. Where? Arv. O' the floor ; His arms thus leagu'd : I thought he slept ; and put [rudeness My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose Answer'd my steps too loud. Gui. Why, he but sleeps

: If he be gone he '11 make his grave a bed ; With female fairies will his tomb be haunted, And worms will not come to thee. Arv. With fairest flowers, Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, I '11 sweeten thy sad grave : thou shalt not lack The flower that 's like thy face, pale primrose ; nor The azure hare-bell, like thy veins ; no, nor The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander, Out-sweeten'd not thy breath : the ruddock would, With charitable bill,— O bill, sore shaming Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie Without a monument ! — bring thee all this ; Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none, To winter-ground thy corse. Gui. Pr'ythee, have done ; And do not play in wench-like words with that Which is so serious. Let us bury him. And not protract with admiration what Is now due debt. — To the grave ! Arv. Say, where shall 's lay him? Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother. Arv. Be'tso: And let us, Polydore, though now our voices Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground, As once our mother ; use like note and words, Save that Euriphile must be Fidele. Gui. Cadwal, I cannot sing : I '11 weep, and word it with thee ; For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse Than priests and fanes that lie. Arv. We '11 speak it, then. Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less : for Cloten Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys : And though he came our enemy, remember, He was paid for that : thou mean and mighty, rotting Together, have one dust, yet reverence, —

956 CYMBELINE, [ACT iv. That angel of the world, — doth make distinction Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely ; And though you took his life, as being our foe, Yet bury him as a prince. Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither. Thersites' body is as good as Ajax*, When neither are alive. Arv. If you '11 go fetch him, We '11 say our song the whilst. — Brother, begin. [Exit BELARIUS. Gut. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east ; My father hath a reason for 't. Arv. 'Tis true. Gui. Come on, then, and remove him. Arv. So, — Begin. SONG. Gui. Fear no more the heat o1 the sun, Nor the furious winter's rages ; Thou thy worldly task hast done, Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages : Golden lads and girls all must, As chimney-sweepers, come to dust. A rv. Fear no more the frown o' the great ; Thou art past the tyrant's stroke : Care no more to clothe and eat ; To thee the reed is as the oak t The sceptre, learning, physic, must All follow this, and come to dust. Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash, Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone ; Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash ; Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan : Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust. Gui. No exerciser harm thee ! Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee ! Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee I Arv. Nothing ill come near thee ! Both, Quiet consummation have ; And renowned be thy grave ! Re-enter BELARIUS with the body of CLOTEN. Gui. We have done our obsequies : come, lay him down. [night, more : Bel. Here's a few flowers; but 'bout midThe herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night [faces. — Are strewings fitt'st for graves. — Upon their You were as flowers, now wither'd : even so These herblets shall, which we upon youstrew. — Come on, away : apart upon our knees. The ground that gave them first has them again : Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain. [Exeunt BEL. , GUI. , and ARV. Into. [Awaking.} Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way? — I thank you. — By yon bush? — Pray, how far thither? 'Ods pittikins ! can it be six mile yet ? — I have gone all night. Faith, I '11 lie down and sleep. But, soft ! no bedfellow : — O gods and goddesses ! [Seeing the body. These flowers are like the pleasures of the world; This bloody man, the care on't. — I hope I dream ; For so I thought I was a cave-keeper, And cook to honest creatures : but 'tis not so ; 'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing, Which the brain makes of fumes : our very eyes Are sometimes, like our judgments, blind. Good faith, I tremble still with fear : but if there be Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it ! The dream 's here still ; even when I wake it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt. A headless man ! — The garments of Posthumus ! I know the shape of 's leg : this is his hand ; His foot Mercurial ; his Martial thigh ; The brawns of Hercules : but his Jovial face — Murder in heaven? — How! — 'Tis gone. — Pisanio, All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks, And mine to boot, be darted on thee ! Thou, Conspir'd with that irregulous devil, Cloten, Hast here cut off my lord. — To write and read Be henceforth treacherous ! — Damn'd Pisanio Hath with hisforged letters, — damn'd Pisanio, — From this most bravest vessel of the world Struck the main-top ! — O Posthumus 1 alas, Where is thy head? where 's that? Ay me! where's that? Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart, And left thy head on. — How should this be? Pisanio? 'Tis he and Cloten : malice and lucre in them Have laid this woe here. O 'tis pregnantˆ pregnant ! The drug he gave me, which he said was precious And cordial to me, have I not found it [home Murderous to the senses? That confirms it This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's : O ! — Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, That we the horrider may seem to those Which chance to find us : O, my lord, my lord J Enter Lucius, a Captain and other Officers, and a Soothsayer. Cap. To them, the legions garrison'd in Gallia, After your will, have cross'd the sea ; attending You here at Milford-Haven with your ships: They are in readiness.

SCENE II.] CYMBELINE, 9S7 Luc. But what from Rome? Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners And gentlemen of Italy ; most willing spirits, That promise noble service : and they come Under the conduct of bold lachimo, Sienna's brother. Luc. When expect you them? Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind. Luc. This forwardness Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers [sir, Be muster'd ; bid the captains look to 't. — Now, What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose? [a vision, — Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me I fast and pray'd for their intelligence, — thus : — I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wingM From the spongy south to this part of the west, There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,— Unless my sins abuse my divination, — Success to the Roman host. Luc. Dream often so, And never false. — Soft,, ho ! what trunk is here Without his top? — The ruin speaks that sometime It was a worthy building. — How! a page! — Or dead or sleeping on him? But dead, rather ; For nature doth abhor to make his bed With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead. — Let 's see the boy's face, Cap. He 's alive, my lord. Luc. He '11, then, instruct us of this body. — Young one, Inform us of thy fortunes ; for it seems They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow ? or who was he, That otherwise than noble nature did, [terest Hath alter'd that good picture ? What 's thy inIn this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it? What art thou? Imo. I am nothing: or if not, Nothing to be were better. This was my master, A very valiant Briton and a good, That here by mountaineers lies slain : alas ! There is no more such masters : I may wander From east to Occident, cry out for service, Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master. Luc. 'Lack, good youth ! Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than Thy master in bleeding: say his name, good friend. [and do Imo. Richard du Champ — {Aside.] If I do lie, No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it.-JSay you, sir? Luc. Thy name? Imo. Fidele. Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same : [name. Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say Thou shalt be so well master'd ; but, be sure, No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters, Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner Than thine own worth prefer thee : go with me.

Imo. I '11 follow, sir. But first, an 't please the gods, I '11 hide my master from the flies, as deep As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave, And on it said a century of prayers, Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh; And leaving so his service, follow you, So please you entertain me. Luc. Ay, good youth ; And rather father thee than master thee. — My friends, The boy hath taught us manly duties : let us Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can, And make him with our pikes and partisans A grave: come, arm him. — Boy, he is preferr'd By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd As soldiers can. Be cheerful ; wipe thine eyes : Some falls are means the happier to arise. {Exeunt. SCENE III. — BRITAIN. A Room in CYMBFLINE'S Palace. Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PISANIO, and Attendants. Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her. A fever with the absence of her son ; [Exit an Attendant. A madness, of which her life 's in danger, — Heavens, How deeply you at once do touch me ! Imogen, The great part of my comfort, gone ; my queen Upon a desperate bed, and in a time When fearful wars point at me ; her son gone, So needful for this present : it strikes me, past The hope of comfort.— But for thee, fellow, Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we '11 enforce it from thee By a sharp torture. Pis. Sir, my life is yours, [tress, I humbly set it at your will : but, for my misI nothing know where she remains, why gone, Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness, Hold me your loyal servant.

CYMBELINE. [ACT iv. I Lord. Good my liege, The day that she was missing he was here : I dare be bound he 's true, and shall perform All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,— There wants no diligence in seeking him, And will no doubt be found. Cym. The time is troublesome, — We '11 slip you for a season ; but our jealousy \To PlSANIO. Does yet depend. i Lord. So please your majesty, The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, Are landed on your coast ; with a supply Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent. Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen ! — I am amaz'd with matter. I Lord. Good my liege, Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you 're ready : The want is but to put those powers in motion That long to move. Cym. I thank you. Let 's withdraw, And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us ; but We grieve at chances here. — Away I [Exeunt all but PlSANIO. Pis. I heard no letter from my master since I wrote him Imogen was slain : 'tis strange : Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise To yield me often tidings ; neither know I What is betid to Cloten ; but remain Perplex'd in all : the heavens still must work. Wherein I am false I am honest ; not true to be true: These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o' the king, or I '11 fall in them. All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd : Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit. SCENE IV.— WALES. Before the Cave. Enter BELAJLIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS. Gut. The noise is round about us. Bel. Let us from it. Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it From action and adventure? Gui. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans Must or for Britons slay us or receive us For barbarous and unnatural revolts During their use, and slay us after. Bel. Sons, We '11 higher to the mountains ; there secure us. To the king's party there 's no going : newness Of Cloten's death, — we being not known, not muster'd Among the bands, — may drive us to a render Where we have liv'd ; and so extort from 's That which we 've done, whose answer would be death, Drawn on with torture. Gui. This is, sir, a doubt In such a time nothing becoming you Nor satisfying us. Arv. It is not likely That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quartered fires, have both their eyes And ears so cloy'd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon cur note, To know from whence we are. Bel. O, I am known Of many in the army : many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him From my remembrance. And , besides, the king Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves ; Who find in my exile the want of breeding The certainty of this hard life ; aye hopeless To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd, But to be still hot summer's tanlings and The shrinking slaves of winter. Gui. Than be so, Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army : I and my brother are not known ; yourself So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown, Cannot be question'd. Arv. By this sun that shines, I '11 thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die ! scarce ever look'd on blood. But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison ! Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel Nor iron on his heel ! I am asham'd To look upon the holy sun, to have The benefit of his blessed beams, remaining So long a poor unknown. Gui. By heavens, I '11 go : If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, I '11 take the better care ; but if you will not, The hazard therefore due fall on me by The hands of Romans ! Arv. So say I, — Amen. Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set So slight a valuation, should reserve My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys!

SCENE IV.] CYMBELINE. 959 If in your country wars you chance to die. That is my bed too, lads, and there I '11 lie : Lead, lead. — {Aside.} The time seems long ; their blood thinks scorn Till it fly out, and show them princes born. [Exeunt. ACT V. SCENE I. — BRITAIN. A Field between the British and Roman Camps. Enter POSTHUMUS with a bloody handkerchief. Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I '11 keep thee ; for I wish'd Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones, If each of you should take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves For wrying but a little ! O Pisanio ! Every good servant does not all commands : No bond but to do just ones. — Gods ! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on this : so had you sav'd The noble Imogen to repent ; and struck Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But alack, You snatch some hence for little faults ; that's love, To have them fall no more : you some permit To second ills with ills, each elder worse, And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift. But Imogen is your own : do your best wills, And make me bless'd to obey ! — I am brought hither Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom : 'tis enough That, Britain, I have kilFd thy mistress ; peace ! I '11 give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, Hear patiently my purpose : — I '11 disrobe me Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself As does a Briton peasant : so I '11 fight Against the part I come with ; so I '11 die For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life Is every breath a death : and thus unknown, Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril Myself I '11 dedicate. Let me make men know More valour in me than my habits show. Gods, put the. strength o' the Leonati in me ! To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin The fashion, — less without and more within. SCENE II. — BRITAIN. A Field between the Camps. Enter, at one side, Lucius, IACHIMO, IMOGEN, and the Roman Army ; at the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS PosTHUMUsyW&wing it like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS : ke vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him. lack. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom Takes off my manhood : I have belied a lady, The princess of this country, and the air on 't Revengingly enfeebles me ; or could this carl, A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me In my profession ? Knighthoods and honours borne As I wear mine are titles but of scorn. If that thy gentry, Britain, go before This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds Is that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit. The battle continues ; the Britons fiy ; CYMBELINE is taken : then enter to his rescue BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS. Bel. Stand, stand ! We have the advantage of the ground ; The lane is guarded : nothing routs us but The villany of our fears. Gui. and Arv. Stand, stand, and fight ! Re-enter POSTHUMUS, andsecoitds the Britons : they rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then re-enter Lucius, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN. Luc. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand ? Post. I did : Though you, it seems, come from the fliers. Lord. I did. Post.  And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a straight lane ; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck down Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling [damnVd Merely through fear ; that the strait path was With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living, To die with lengthen'd shame. Lord. Where was this lane ? Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf, Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier, — An honest one, I warrant ; who deserv'd So long a breeding as his white beard came to, In doing this for 's country : — athwart the lane He, with two striplings, — lads more like to run The country base than to commit such slaughter ; With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame, — Made good the passage ; cried to those that fled, Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men : To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards ! Stand; Or we are Romans, and will give you that Like beasts which you shun beastly, andmaysave, But to look back in frown : stand, stand! — These three, Three thousand confident, in act as many, — For three performers are the file when all The rest do nothing, — with this word, Stand, stand! Accommodated by the place, more charming With their own nobleness, — which could have turn'd A distaff to a lance, — gilded pale looks, Part shame, part spirit renew' d ; that some, turn'd coward But by example, — O, a sin in war Damn'd in the first beginners ! — 'gan to look The way that they did, and to grin like lions Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began A stop i' the chaser, a retire ; anon A rout, confusion thick : forthwith they fly, Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles ; slaves, [cowards, — The strides they victors made : and now our Like fragments in hard voyages, — became The life o' the need ; having found the backdoor open [wound ! Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they Some slain before ; some dying; some their friends O'erborne i' the former wave : ten chas'd by one Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty : Those that would die or ere resist are grown The mortal bugs o' the field. Lord. This was strange chance,— A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys ! Post. Nay, do not wonder at it : you are made Rather to wonder at the things you hear Than to work any. Will you rhyme

upon 't, And vent it for a mockery ? Here is one : Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane, Preserved the Britons, was the Romans' bane, Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir. Post. 'Lack, to what end? Who dares not stand his foe I '11 be his friend ; For if he '11 do as he is made to do I know he '11 quickly fly my friendship too. You have put me into rhyme. Lord. Farewell ; you 're angry. \Extt. Post. Still going?— This is a lord ! O noble misery, — To be i' the field and ask what news of me ! To-day how many would have given their honours To have sav'd their carcasses ! took heel to do't, And yet died too ! I, in mine own woe charm'd, Could not find death where I did hear him groan, [monster, Nor feel him where he struck : being an ugly 'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds, Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we That draw his knives i' the war. — Well, I will find him : For being now a favourer to the Briton, No more a Briton, I have resum'd again The part I came in : fight I will no more, But yield me to the veriest hind that shall [is Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter Here made by the Roman ; great the answer be Britons must take : for me, my ransom Js death ; On either side I come to spend my breath ; Which neither here I '11 keep nor bear again, But end it by some means for Imogen. Enter two British Captains and Soldiers. 1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd ! Lucius is taken : 'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels. 2 Cap. There wasa fourth man, in a silly habit, That gave the affront with them. 1 Cap. So 'tis reported ; But none of 'em can be found. — Stand ! who's there ? Post. A Roman ; Who had not now been drooping here if seconds Had answer'd him. 2 Cap. Lay hands on him ; a dog ! — A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here : — he brags his service, As if he were of note ; bring him to the king.

SCENE IV.J CYMBELINE. 961 Enter CYMBELINE attended; BELARIUS, GumERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. 7 tie Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which all go out. SCENE IV. — BRITAIN. A Prison. Enter POSTHUMUS and two Gaolers. 1 Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you ; So, graze as you find pasture. 2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach. [Exeunt Gaolers. Post. Most welcome, bondage ! for thou art a way, I think, to liberty : yet am I better [rather Than one that 's sick o' the gout ; since he had Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd By the sure physician death, who is the key To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd [give me More than my shanks and wrists : you good gods, The penitent instrument to pick that bolt, Then free for ever ! Is 't enough I am sorry ? Sc children temporal fathers do appease ; Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent ? I cannot do it better than in gyves, Desir'd more than constrain'd : to satisfy, If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take No stricter render of me than my all. I know you are more clement than vile men, Who of their broken debtors take a third, A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again On their abatement : that 's not my desire : For Imogen's dear life take mine ; and though 'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life ; you coin'd it : 'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp; Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake : You rather mine, being yours : and so, great powers, If you will take this audit, take this life, And cancel these cold bonds. — O Imogen ! I '11 speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps. Solemn Music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS,ya//5

962 CYMBELINE. [ACT v. Jup. Offe Moth, Since, Jupiter, our son is good, Take off his miseries. Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help; Or we poor ghosts will cry To the shining synod of the rest Against thy deity. Both Bro. Help, Jupiter ; or we appeal, And from thy justice fly. JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, siting upon an eagle : he throws a thunderbolt. 7%e Ghosts fall on their knees. up. No more, you petty spirits of 'region low, end our hearing ; hush ! — How dare you ghosts Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know, Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts ? Poor shadows of Elysium, hence ; and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers : Be not with mortal accidents oppress'd ; No care of yours it is ; you know 'tis ours. W'.iom best I love I cross ; to make my gift, The more delay'd, delighted. Be content ; Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift : His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent. Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married. — Rise, and fade ! — He shall be lord of Lady Imogen, And happier much by his affliction made. This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine : And so away ; no further with your din Express impatience, lest you stir up mine. — Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends. Sici. He came in thunder ; his celestial breath Was sulphurous to smell : the holy eagle Stoop'd, as to foot us : his ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields : his royal bird Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak, As when his god is pleas'd. All. Thanks, Jupiter I Sici. The marble pavement closes, he isenter'd His radiant roof. — Away ! and, to be blest, Let us with care perform his great behest. [Ghosts vanish. Post. [Waking.} Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot A father to me ; and thou hast created A mother and two brothers : but, O scorn ! Gone ! they went hence so soon as they were born. And so I am awake. — Poor wretches that depend On greatness' favour dream as I have done, Wake and find nothing. — But, alas, I swerve : Many dream not to find, neither deserve, And yet are steep'd in favours ; so am I, That have this golden chance, and know not why. [rare one ! What fairies haunt this ground ? A book ? O Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment Nobler than that it covers : let thy effects So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, As good as promise.

[Reads.} Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches which, being deaa many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumiis end his miseries, Britain be fortunateˆ and flourish in peace and plenty. 'Tis still a dream ; or else such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not : either both or nothing : Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot untie. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which I '11 keep, if but for sympathy. Re-enter Gaoler. Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death ? Post. Over- roasted rather ; ready long ago. Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir : if you be ready for that, you are well cooked. Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot. Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir. But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills ; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth : you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink ; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much ; purse and brain both empty, — the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness : O, of this contradiction you shall now be quit. — O, the charity of a penny cord ! it sums up thousands in a trice : you have no true debitor and creditor but it ; of what 's past, is, and to come, the discharge: — your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters ; so the acquittance follows. Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live. Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache : but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer ; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go. Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow. Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head, then ; I have not seen him so pictured: you must

Post. I tell thee, fellosv, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them. Gaol What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness ! I am sure hanging 's the way of winking. Enter a Messenger. Mess. Knock off his manacles ; bring your prisoner to the king. Post. Thou bringest good news, — I am called to be made free. Gaol. I '11 be hanged, then. Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler ; no bolts for the dead. [Exeunt POST, and Messenger. Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman : and there be some of them too that die against their wills ; so should I if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good ; O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit ; but my wish hath a preferment in 't. [Exit. Bow your knees. Arise my knights o' the battle : I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELRJS and Ladies. There's business in these faces. — Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain. Cor. Hail, great king ! To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead. Cym, Who worse than a physician Would this report become ? But I consider By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too. — How ended she ? Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life ; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you : these her women Can trip me if I err ; who with wet cheeks Were present when she finish'd. Cym. Pr'ythee, say. Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you ; only Affected greatness got by you, not you : Married your royalty, was wife to your place ; Abhorr'd your person. Cym. She alone knew this ; And but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed. Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight ; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison. Cym. O most delicate fiend ! Who is 't can read a woman? — Is there more ? Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had For you a mortal mineral ; which, being took, Should by the minutefeed on life, and, lingering, By inches waste you : in which time she purpos'd, By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show ; and in time, When she had fitted you with her craft, to work

This one thing only I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born, Let him be ransom'd : never master had A page so kind, so duteous, diligent, So tender over his occasions, true, So foat, so nurse-like : let his virtue join With my request, which I'll make bold highness Cannot d jay ; he hath done no Briton harm Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, sir, And spare no blood beside. Cym. I have surely seen him : His favour is familiar to me. — Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace, And art mine own. — I know not why nor wherefore To say live, boy : ne'er thank thy master ; live : And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty and thy state, I '11 give it: your Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, The noblest ta'en. Into. I humbly thank your highness. Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad ; And yet I know thou wilt. Imo. No, no: alack, There 's other work in hand : I see a thing Bitter to me as death : your life, good master, Must shuffle for itself. Luc. The boy disdains me, He leaves me, scorns me : briefly die their joys That place them on the truth of girls and boys. — Why stands he so perplex'd? Cym. What wouldst thou, boy? I love thee more and more: think more and more [on? speak, What 's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend? Imo. He is a Roman ; no more kin to me Than I to your highness ; who, being born your vassal, Am something nearer. Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so? Imo. I '11 tell you, sir, in private, if you please To give me hearing. Cym. Ay, with all my heart, And lend my best attention. What 's thy name F Imo. Fidele, sir. Cym. Thou 'rt my good youth, my page ; I '11 be thy master : walk with me ; speak freely. [CYM. and IMO. converse apart. Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death? Arv. One sand another Not more resembles that sweet rosy lad Who died, and was Fidele. — What think you? Gui. The same dead thing alive. Bel. Peace, peace ! see further ; he eyes us not ; forbear ; Creatures may be alike : were 't he, I am sure He would have spoke to us. Gui. But we saw him dead. Bel. Be silent ; let 's see further. Pis. [Aside.'} It is my mistress : Since she is living, let the time run on To good or bad. [CYM. andlwo. come forward. Cym. Come, stand thou by our side ; Make thy demand aloud. — [To IACH.] Sir, step you forth ; Give answer to this boy, and do it freely ; Or, by our greatness and the grace of it, Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. — On, speak to him. [render Imo. My boon is that this gentleman may Of whom he had this ring.

SCENE V.] CYMBELINE. 965 Post. [Aside.} What 's that to him ? Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say, How came it yours ? [that lack. Thou 'It torture me to leave unspoken Which to be spoke would torture thee. Cym. How ! me ? loch. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which Torments me to conceal. By villany I got this ring : 'twas Leonatus' jewel, Whom thou didst banish ; and, — which more may grieve thee, As it doth me, — a nobler sir ne'er liv'd 'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord ? Cym. All that belongs to this. lack. That paragon, thy daughter, — For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits Quail to remember, — Give me leave ; I faint. Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength : I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will Than die ere I hear more : strive, man, and speak. loch. Upon a time, — unhappy was the clock That struck the hour ! — it was in Rome, — accurs'd [would The mansion where! — 'twas at a feast, — O, Our viands had been poison'd, or at least Those which I heav'd to head ! — the good Posthumus, — What should I say? he was too good to be Where ill men were ; and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones, — sitting sadly, Hearing us praise our loves of Italy For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast Of him that best could speak ; for feature laming The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva, Postures beyond brief nature ; for condition, A shop of all the qualities that man Loves woman for ; besides that hook of wiving, Fairness which strikes the eye, — Cym. I stand on fire : Come to the matter. lack. All too soon I shall, Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. — This Posthumus, — Most like a noble lord in love, and one That had a royal lover, — took his hint ; And not dispraising whom we prais'd, — therein He was as calm as virtue, — he began His mistress' picture ; which by his tongue being made, And then a mind put in 't, either our brags Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description Prov'd us unspeaking sots. Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose. lack. Your daughter's chastity — there it begins. He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams And she alone were cold : whereat I, wretch, Made scruple of his praise ; and wager'd with him Pieces of gold, 'gainst this, which then he wore Upon his honour'd finger, to attain In suit the place of 's bed, and win this ring By hers and mine adultery : he, true knight, No lesser of her honour confident Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring ; And would so, had it been a carbuncle Of Phcebus' wheel ; and might so safely, had it Been all the worth of 's car. Away to Britain Post I in this design. Well may you, sir, Remember me at court, where I was taught Of your chaste daughter the wide difference 'Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain 'Gan in your duller Britain operate Most vilely, — for my vantage excellent ; And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd That I retum'd with simular proof enough To make the noble Leonatus mad, By wounding his belief in her renown With tokens thus and thus ; averring notes Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,— 0 cunning how I got it ! — nay, some marks Of secret on her person, that he could not But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd, 1 having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon, — Methinks I see him now, — Post. [Coming fat-ward.] Ay, so thou dost, Italian fiend ! — Ah me, most credulous fool, Egregious murderer, thief, anything That 's due to all the villains past, in being, To come ! — O, give me cord, or knife, or poison, Some upright justicer ! Thou, king, send out For torturers ingenious : it is I That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend By being worse than they. I am Posthumus, That kill'd thy daughter:— villain-like, I lie,— That caus'd a lesser villain than myself, A sacrilegious thief, to do 't : — the temple Of virtue was she ; yea, and she herself. Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set The dogs o' the street to bay me : every villain Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus ; and Be villany less than 'twas ! — O Imogen ! My queen, my life, my wife ! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen ! Into. Peace, my lord ; hear, hear, —

Mine and your mistress ! — O, my lord PosthuYoune'erkill'd Imogen till now. — Help, help! — Mine honour'd lady ! Cym. Does the world go round? Post. How come these staggers on me? Pis. Wake, my mistress ! Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me To death with mortal joy. Pis. How fares my mistress? Into. O, get thee from my sight ; Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence ! Breathe not where princes are. Cym. The tune of Imogen. Pis. Lady, The gods throw stones of sulphur on me if That box I gave you was not thought by me A precious thing : I had it from the queen. Cym. New matter still? Imo. It poison'd me. Cor. O gods !— I left out one thing which the queen confess'd, Which must approve thee honest: If Pisanio Have, said she, given his mistress that confection Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd As I -would serve a rat. Cym. What's this, Cornelius? Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me To temper poisons for her ; still pretending The satisfaction of her knowledge only In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs, Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose Was of more danger, did compound for her A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease The present power of life ; but in short time All offices of nature should again Do their due functions. — Have you ta'en of it? Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead. Bel. My boys, There was our error. Gui. This is sure Fidele. Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you? Think that you are upon a rock ; and now Throw me again. {Embracing him. Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul, Till the tree die ! Cym. How now, my flesh, my child ! What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act? Wilt thou not speak to me? lino. Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling. Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not; You had a motive for it. [To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGDS. Cym. My tears that fall Prove holy water on thee ! Imogen, Thy mother 's dead. Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord Cym. O, she was naught ; and long of her it was That we meet here so strangely: but her son Is gone, we know not how nor where. Pis. My lord, Now fear is from me, I '11 speak troth. Lord Cloten, Upon my lady's missing, came to me With his sword drawn ; foam'd at the mouth, and swore, If I discover'd not which way she was gone, It was my instant death. By accident I had a feigned letter of my master's Then in my pocket ; which directed him To seek her on the mountains near to Milford ; Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments, Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate My lady's honour : what became of him I further know not. Gui. Let me end the story : I slew him there. Cym. Marry, the gods forfend ! I would not thy good deeds should from my lips Pluck a hard sentence : pr ythee, valiant youth, Deny 't again. Gˆtˆ. I have spoke it, and I did it. Cym. He was a prince. [me Gui. A most incivil one : the wrongs he did Were nothing prince-like ; for he did provoke me With language that would make me spurn the sea, If it could so roar to me : I cut off's head ; And am right glad he is not standing here To tell this tale of mine. Cym. I am sorry for thee : By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law : thou 'rt dead. Imo. That headless man I thought had been my lord. Cym. Bind the offender, And take him from our presence. Bel. Stay, sir king : This man is better than the man he slew, As well descended as thyself ; and hath More of thee merited than a band of Clotens Had ever scar for. — Let his arms alone ; [To the Guard. They were not born for bondage.

SCENE V.] CYMBELINE. 967 Cynt. Why, old soldier, Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for By tasting of our wrath? How of descent As good as we ? Arv. In that he spake too far. Cym. And thou shalt die for 't. Bel. We will die all three : But I will prove that two on 's are as good As I have given out him. — My sons, I must, For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech, Though, haply, well for you. Arv. Your danger 's Ours. Gut. And our good his. Bel. Have at it, then ! — By leave, — thou hadst, great king, a subject who Was call'd Belarius. Cym. What of him ? he is A banish'd traitor. Bel. He it is that hath Assum'd this age : indeed, a banish'd man ; I know not how a traitor. Cym. Take him hence : The whole world shall not save him. Bel. Not too hot : First pay me for the nursing of thy sons ; And let it be confiscate all so soon, As I have receiv'd it. Cym. Nursing of my sons ! Beˆ I am too blunt and saucy : here 's my knee: Ere I arise I will prefer my sons ; Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir, These twoyoung gentlemen, that call me father, And think they are my sons, are none of mine; They are the issue of your loins, my liege, And blood of your begetting. Cym. How ! my issue ! Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan, Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd : Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment Itself, and all my treason ; that I suffer'd Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes, — For such and so they are, — these twenty years Have I train'd up : those arts they have as I Could put into them ; my breeding, was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children Upon my banishment : I mov'd her to 't ; Having receiv'd the punishment before For that which I did then : beaten for loyalty Excited me to treason : their dear loss, The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir, Here are your sons again ; and I must lose Two of the sweet'st companions in the world : — The benediction of these covering heavens Fall on their heads like dew ! for they are worthy To inlay heaven with stars. Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st. The service that you three have done is more Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children: If these be they, 1 know not how to wish A pair of worthier sons. Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.-— This gentleman, whom I call Polydore, Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius : This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, Your younger princely son ; he, sir, was lapp'd In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand Of his queen mother, which, for more probation, I can with ease produce. Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star ; It was a mark of wonder. Bel. This is he ; Who hath upon him still that natural stamp : It was wise nature's end in the donation, To be his evidence now. Cym. O, what, am I A mother to the birth of three ? Ne'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more. — Bless'dmayyou be, That, after this strange starting from your orbs, You may reign in them now ! — O Imogen, Thou hast lost by this a kingdom. Imo. No, my lord ; I have got two worlds by't. — O my gentle brothers, Have we thus met ? O, never say hereafter But I am truest speaker : you call'd me brother When I was but your sister j I you brothers When you were so indeed. Cym. Did you e'er meet? Arv. Ay, my good lord. Gui. And at first meeting lov'd ; Continued so until we thought he died. Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd. Cym. O rare instinct ! When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. — Where? how liv'd you ? And when came you to serve our Roman captive? How parted with your brothers ? how first met them ? [These, Why fled you from the court? and whither? And your three motives to the battle, with I know not how much more, should be demanded ; And all the other by-dependencies, [place From chance to chance : but nor the time nor

My good master, I will yet do you service. Luc. Happy be you ! Cym. The forlorn soldier, thatsonoblyfought, He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd The thankings of a king. Post. I am, sir, The soldier that did company these three In poor beseeming ; 'twas a fitment for The purpose I then follow'd. — That I was he, Speak, lachimo : I had you down, and might Have made you finish. loch. I am down again : [Kneeling. But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee, As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you, Which I so often owe : but your ring first ; And here the bracelet of the truest princess That ever swore her faith. Post. Kneel not to me : The power that I have on you is to spare you ; The malice towards you to forgive you : live, And deal with others better. Cym. Nobly doom'd ! We '11 learn our freeness of a son-in-law ; Pardon 's the word to all. Arv. You holp us, sir, As you did mean indeed to be our brother ; Joy'd are we that you are. [of Rome, Post. Your servant, princes. — Good my lord Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, methought Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back, Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows Of mine own kindred : when I wak'd I found This label on my bosom ; whose containing Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it : let him show His skill in the construction. Luc, Philarmonus, — Sooth. Here, my good lord. Luc. Read, and declare the meaning. Sooth. {Reads.] Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty. Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp ;

The fit and apt construction of thy name, Being Leo-natus, doth import so much : The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter, \To CYMBELIKE. Which we call mollis aer ; and mollis aer We term it mulier : which mulier I divine Is this most constant wife ; who even now, Answering the letter of the oracle, Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about With this most tender air. Cym. This hath some seeming. Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee : and thy lopp'd branches point Thy two sons forth, who, by Belarius stol'n, For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd, To the majestic cedar join'd ; whose issue Promises Britain peace and plenty. Cym. Well, By peace we will begin : — and, Caius Lucius, Although the victor, we submit to Caesar, And to the Roman empire j promising To pay our wonted tribute, from the which We were dissuaded by our wicked queen ; Whom heavens, injustice both on her and hers, Have laid most heavy hand. Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune The harmony of this peace. The vision, Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant, Is full accomplish'd ; for the Roman eagle, From south to west on wing soaring aloft, Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun So vanish'd : which foreshow'd our princely eagle, The imperial Caesar, should again unite His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here in the west. Cym. Laud we the gods ; And let our crooked smokesclimbtotheirnostrils From our bless d altars. Publish we this peace To all our subjects. Set we forward : let A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together: so through Lud's town march: And in the temple of great Jupiter Our peace we 'it ratify ; seal it with feasts. — Set on there ! — Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. \Exeunt.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my cause with arms ; And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords : I am his first-born son that was the last That wore the imperial diadem of Rome : Then let my father's honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity. Bas. Romans, — friends, followers, favourers of my right, — If ever Bassianus, Caesar's son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep, then, this passage to the Capitol ; And suffer not dishonour to approach The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence, and nobility : But let desert in pure election shine ; And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice. Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS aloft, with the crown. Marc. Princes, — that strive by factions and by friends Ambitiously for rule and empery, — [stand Know that the people of Rome, for whom we A special party, have by common voice, In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius For many good and great deserts to Rome : A nobler man, a braver warrior, Lives not this day within the city walls : He by the senate is accited home From weary wars against the barbarous Goths ; That, with his sons, a terror to our foes, Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms. Ten years are spent since first he undertook This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms Our enemies' pride : five times he hath return 'd Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons In coffins from the field ; And now at last, laden with honour's spoils, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms. Let us entreat, — by honour of his name Whom worthily you would have now succeed, And in the Capitol and senate's right, Whom you pretend to honour and adore, — That you withdraw you, and abate your strength ; Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should, Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness. After them TITUS ANDRONICUS ; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners ; Soldiers and People following. The bearers set down the coffin, and TITUS Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds ! Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught Returns with precious lading to the bay From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage, Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs, To re-salute his country with his tears, — Tears of true joy for his return to Rome. — Thou great defender of this Capitol, Stand gracious to the rites that we intend! — Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons, Half of the number that King Priam had, Behold the poor remains, alive and dead ! These that survive let Rome reward with love ; These that I bring unto their latest home, With burial amongst their ancestors : Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my sword. Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own, Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet, To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx ? — • Make way to lay them by their brethren. — \The tomb is opened. There greet in silence, as the dead are wont, And sleep in peace, slain in your country'swars ! O sacred receptacle of my joys, Sweet cell of virtue and nobility, How many sons of mine hast thou in store, That thou wilt never render to me more ! Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths, That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh Before this earthly prison of their bones ; That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth. Tit. I give him you, — the noblest that survives, The eldest son of this distressed queen. Tarn. Stay, Roman brethren ! — Gracious conqueror, Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed, A mother's tears in passion for her son : And if thy sons were ever dear to thee, O, think my son to be as dear to me ! Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome, To beautify thy triumphs and return, Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke ; But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets For valiant doings in their country's cause ? O, if to fight for king and common weal Were piety in thine, it is in these. Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood : Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods ? Draw near them, then, in being merciful : Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge : Thrice-noble Titus, spare my first-born son. Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me. These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld Alive and dead ; and for their brethren slain Religiously they ask a sacrifice : To this your son is mark'd ; and die he must, To appease their groaning shadows that are gone. Luc. Away with him ! and make a fire straight ; And with our swords, upon a pile of wood Let 'shew his limbs till they be clean consum'd. [Exeunt Luc. , QUIN., MARC., awt/MuT., with ALARBUS. Tarn. Re-enter Lucius, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their swords bloody. Lite. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd Our Roman rites : Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd, And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, Whose smoke like incense doth perfume the sky. Remaineth naught but to inter our brethren, And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome. Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus Make this his latest farewell to their souls. [Trumpets sounded and the coffinlaidinthetomb. In peace and honour rest you here, my sons ; Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest, Secure from worldly chances and mishaps ! Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells, Here grow no damned grudges ; here are no storms, No noise, but silence and eternal sleep : Enter LAVINIA. In peace and honour rest you here, my sons ! Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long; My noble lord and father, live in fame ! Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears I render for my brethren's obsequies ; And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome : O, bless me here with thy victorious hand, Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud ! Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd The cordial of mine age to glad my heart ! — Lavinia, live ; outlive thy father's days, And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise ! Enter t below, MARCUS ANDRONICUS and Tribunes ; re-enter SATURNINUS, BASSIANUS, and Attendants. Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother, ' Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome ! Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus. [ful wars, Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successYou that survive and you that sleep in fame ! Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all, That in your country's service drew your swords: But safer triumph is this funeral pomp That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness, And triumphs over chance in honour's bed. — Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome, Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust, This palliament of white and spotless hue ; And name thee in election for the empire With these our late-deceased emperor's sons: Be candidatus, then, and put it on, And help to set a head on headless Rome. Tit. A better head her glorious body fits Than his that shakes for age and feebleness : What, should I don this robe and trouble you? Be chosen with proclamations to-day, To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life, And set abroach new business for you all? Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years, And led my country's strength successfully, And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons, Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms, In right and service of their noble country : Give me a staff of honour for mine age, But not a sceptre to control the world : Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the err.pery. [tell? Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus. Sat. Romans, do me right; — Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor. — Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell Rather than rob me of the people's hearts ! Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good That noble-minded Titus means to thee ! Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee [selves. The people's hearts, and wean them from them Bos. Andronicus, I do not natter thee, But honour thee, and will do till I die* My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends, I will most thankful be ; and thanks to men Of noble minds is honourable meed. [here, Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes I ask your voices and your suffrages : Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus? Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus, And gratulate his safe return to Rome, The people will accept whom he admits. Tit. Tribunes, I thank you : and this suit I make, That you create your emperor's eldest son, Lord, Saturnine ; whose virtues will, I hope,
